JURY SAYS SOUDER GUILTY

EX-TREASURER CONVICTED OF ARSON CHARGE

S. M. Souder Found Guilty Of Burning Old Lincoln County Courthouse-- Verdict On First Ballot.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., Dec. 22.—Former County Treasurer Samuel M. Souder was found guilty by a jury in district court here late Saturday night of arson in connection with the burning of the old Lincoln county court house last April. The jury, according to A. R. Keavitt, foreman, took but one formal ballot.

Deliberate But Few Hours.

The case was given to the jury at 6.30 p. m. Saturday following the closing arguments by the opposing counsel and the instructions by the court.

The opening argument for the defense was made by Attorney V. H. Halligan His arguments covered in a general way the case as a whole.

W. V. Hoagland, of counsel for the defense, called the jury's attention to the fact that this was an arson case, the thing they should find was whether or not Sam Souder lit the match that started the fire or was there at the time aiding and assisting the man who did start the fire.

He then took up the proof of alleged shortages and delinquencies which the state argue as a motive for the burning of the court house and records

He explained that the evidence in this case was almost entirely circumstantial and reminded the jury that the circumstance must be very strong to warrant a conviction; so strong that they would exclude any thought of innocence. He attacked the testimony of Miss Hall from Titusville, Fla., who had identified Sam Souder as the same man who had been in the bank in Titusville on Aug. 22 or 23.

Witness Admitted Mistake.

To show how easily she might have been mistaken he cited the case of Sheriff Berthe, who testified positively that he searched the Souder farm on May 12 and this morning admitted it a mistake and rectified it on the witness stand.

R. H. Beatty, co-counsel for the defense then took up the argument for S. M. Souder. He reminded the jury how easily men may be mistaken with regard to time or date. He referred to the testimony of Andy Wessberg, who was janitor at that time, who testified he had given S. M. Souder he keys to the attic on the Sunday the courthouse burned but later it developed that this incident occurred on Arbor day previous to that time. He referred to the remarks of Attorney Gibbs, who had said the jury didn't need to consider Baker, who had been jointly indicted with Souder. Attorney Beatty scored this heavily. He made a very touching appeal to the jury to the injustice of a conviction uon circumstantial evidence. The jury was visibly moved by his words.

Attorney Prince, special prosecutor from Grand Island, gave the closing argument for the prosecution. The state had the theory that he records of the county had been taken upstairs and buried under the rubbish in the old attic. He brought out the coincidence of Sam Souder being in Titusville, Fla, at the same time the coupons were found there.

The case was submitted to the jury with instructions about 6.30 p. m.

TWO MORE ARRESTED.

A. A. Barton, 24, cab driver, and Marie Wade, pretty 19-year-old girl, were arrested ealy Sunday morning by officers who believe that they are implicated in a number of holdups in Lincoln. Barton was implicated through an alleged confession of Francis Riley, 19, who was arrested earlier by officers on suspicion of another holdup.

Barton is said to have admitted an attempted holdup at Sixteenth and G streets last Thursday bu denied implication in another holdup at Twenty-seventh and Randolph streets two weeks ago in which $20 was taken. Riley claimed that Burton accompanied him and helped him in the robbery, officers said.

Barton and Miss Wade were taken to the county jail by officers.

Two holdups, netting $25 and $175, occurred in Lincoln Saturday night and one suspect, Francis Riley, 19, 537 South Ninth street, was arrested by officers for investigation

The holdup in which Riley is said to have been implicated was at Fifth and Garfield streets. Jacob Meng, 211 F street an employe at the Miller Grocery, was slugged and robbed of $25 about 7 o'clock. Riley is said to have been carrying a 45 caliber army automatic pistol in which there were no cartridges.

Meng was not injured but "played dead" so that he would not be struck again Jake Hill, who had made arrangements with officers to tip off the affair, was with Riley, it was said, but took no part in the holdup.

Shopmen Are Victims.

LIQUOR RAIDS AT WASHINGTON

Client Lists Taken From Thirteen Alleged Bootleggers Contain Names Described As "High In Social Life" Of Capital.

WHEELER DEMANDS FULLEST PUBLICITY

Washington Times Asserts "At Least Two Members Of Cabinet, Members Of Congress and Judiciary" Among Customers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Holiday dry raids tonight had netted thirteen alleged bootleggers and resulted in the capture by the police of exclusive client lists containing several thousand names, some of which are said to merit the description "high in the social life" of Washington.

The drys, headed by Wayne Wheeler, generalissimo of the anti-saloon league, are clamoring that the lists be made public.

"Every friend of law and order should insist upon the prosecution of these conspirators," said Wheeler in a manifesto.

"The purchaser of bootleg liquor is a more cowardly violator of the law than the bootlegger himself. They can and should be prosecuted under Section 6 of the prohibition code, relative to conspiracy."

The demand of the drys for prosecutions and publicity was immediately demanded by Assistant District Attorney Presmont, in charge of the cleanup, He issued a statement saying:

Promises Prosecution.

"Everybody whom the evidence discloses had any connection in the case, whether it be purchaser, runner, or affice employe will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Thus far, none of the names have been permitted to become public.

The Washington Times, however, asserted today.

"At least two members of the cabinet, members of congress, members ofthe judiciary, and leaders in Washington society circles, are said to be numbered in the list of customers."

The trial of the liquor sleuths led to a warehouse where there was cached $35,000 worth of liquor, according to the police, but before it could be seized the representatives of a foreign legation put in appearance and put the diplomatic seal on the liquor.

There was nothing left for the raiders to do but make a formal report to the state department, which is understood to be making a private inquiry as to whether liquor consigned to any of the embassies or legations got into wrong channels.

Premier Is Given Confidence Vote

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The chamber of deputies tonight adopted a motion of confidence in the government of Premier Raymond Poincare by a vote of 331 to 211.

The vote came after Premier Poincare threatened to resign. Finance Minister De Lasteyrie was bitterly opposed to a bill incorporated in the general budget measure.

De Lasteyrie pointed out the subsidy bill would add greatly to the already large budget deficit and declared he would resign before consetning to its adoption.

A compromise project finally was agreed on which will increase the budget 270,000,000 francs annually and the vote of confidence followed.

Chairman Green, concedes that action on the bonus cannot be long deferred. He hopes to have the technical administrative changes in the bill ready for report by January 10, Some decision must be made on the bonus soon after that, he said.

If any organized attempt is made to block the bonus, the advocates of the measure are prepared to move the discharge of the committee and throw the question on the floor of the house. This would be made possible by the new house rules, which all leaders expect to be adopted

Once the bonus is disposed of, Green said, the committee would immediately begin work on the taxation features of the bill.

DEMAND HUGHES PROVE ASSERTION

Progressives Insistent On Investigation of "Soviet Documents."

Secretary Of State Not Disposed to Grant Critics' Request.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Senators favoring recognition of Russia, will demand after the holiday that Secretary Hughes prove authenticity of documents he made public as Russian soviet instructions to American communists to prepare for a social revolution here.

A number of progressive senators have agreed to unite in insisting that Hughes furnish proof of the genuineness of these documents. Senator Borah, Idaho, a member of the foreign relations committee will be the spokesman for the administration.

The senators were impelled to this course by announcement from the state department today that Hughes would not submit the disputed documents to an arbitration tribunal to decide their genuineness.

They are the instructions published a few days ago which the state department alleges had been sent to Zinoviev, Russian communist to communist workers in the United States to practice shooting and otherwise prepare to "raise the red flag over the white house."

Senators said the country must be given the truth by the Zinoviev instructions.

If they are false the air will be cleared considerably on the subject of alleged Russian red propaganda.

Hughes takes the position, it was stated tonight at the state department, that this government is fully convinced of the genuineness of the documents and does not have to submit them to scrutiny as demanded by the Tchitecherin

Progressive senators are aroused not only over the disputed documents but because of Hughes general attitude on Russia.

The threat was scrawled in such a manner as to appear to have been written by a child. WANT CLINE TO BE REGENT

Lincoln Man Drafted to Make Race In First Congressional District As Candidate For Membership On University Board.

FRIENDS ARE TO CONDUCT CAMPAIGN

Friends Say He Is Eminently Fitted For Important Post —Formerly Engaged In Public School Management And Supervision.

As the result of a meeting in Lincoln last Friday, attended by two dozen alumni and other friends of the University of Nebraska, Earl M. Cline of Lincoln, formerly of Nebraska City, has been drafted to make the race in the First congressional district as a candidate for membership on the board of regents for that institution

Though personally reluctant to be a candidate for any office, Mr. Cline yielded to the unanimous judgment of those attending the conference that he was the man eminently fitted for the duties of university regent. His nomination petition was filed with Secretary of State Pool on Saturday, along with a receipt for the $10 filing fee paid in Lancaster county, by a committee comprising former Regent J. E. Miller, W. E. Hardy, Verne Hedge, Leonard A. Flansburg, and Geoge W. Holmes.

The office pays no salary, and regents receive nothing but their traveling and hotel expenses when attending meetings or inspecting the university and its branches.

Friends Will Conduct Campaign.

Members of the University club who were instrumental in securing Mr. Cline's consent to run, have undertaken to see that his candidacy is brought to the favorable notice of the voters in he First district, and that he will be relieved of any activities for the purpose of securing election.

The following announcement was made by Mr. Cline after the filing had been made:

"I have been asked by a number of friends to become a candidate for regent of the university from the First congressional district.

"I have always been deeply interested in the welfare and progress of the university and after due consideration, I have decided to file for this non-political office, with the understanding that I will not conduct any campaign for election. If the voters of the district see fit to elect me to this office, I am willing to accept it and shall give the best service of which I am capable to the university and the state"

Formerly in Educational Work.

At the present time Mr. Cline is engaged in the practice of law, being a member of the firm of Hall, Cline and Williams Before entering the legal profession, he was engaged in public school management and supervision. Though one of the youngest men in the state in that line of work, he won recognition among the leading educators of Nebraska.

OLD WORLD IS NOT AT PEACE

Europe In Political And Armed Turmoil Almost On Eve Of Fifth Christmas After The World War.

(Copyright, 1923, by United Press.)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—There is very little "peace on earth and good will among men" on this side of the world.

Nineteen hundred odd years after the angels sang their "glad tidings of great joy," Europe, is in political and armed turmoil. Tonight almost on the eve of the fifth Christmas after the "war to end wars" telegraph and cable wires were bringing into London stories of threatened warfare, of rule by military law, of privation and suffering.

There was a gleam of light in the fact, however, that for the first time since the world war dwindled away into a number of smaller conflicts, there is very little actual warfare in progress this Christmas and none exists in Europe In China, Sun Yat Sen is fighting the Peking government, and in Mexico, De La Huerta is rebelling against the regime of President Obregon.

While the children in thousands of British and American homes are being regaled tonight with tales of Santa Clause, the wires brought in the following dispatches anent conditions in other nations.

Envoy Withdrawn.

Athens—Rumania has withdrawn her ambassador to Greece, as a gesture of displeasure at the ejection of King George from the throne. George is married to a Rumanian princess This action constitutes a rupture of diplomatic relations. The thrones of Serbia, Bulgaria and Rumania are shaking in sympathy with that of Greece, as the royal families of all these countries are closely allied by mairiabe ties. The general impression is that "anything may happen."

Berlin—Germany is in financial and economic chaos, as the result of French pressure and the devaluation of the mark. There will be

(International News Service.)

COOPER MILLS, Me., Dec. 22.—Crazed by jealousy and his eagerness for revenge, John Snow, a lumberman, 35, shot and killed four women and a boy here today, then committed suicide by shooting.

The other dead:

Mrs. Ida Snow, 20, his wife.

Mrs. Ruel Brann, 70, her grandmother.

Mrs. Eva Eaton, 30, an aunt.

Mrs. Frank Jewett of Whitefield, wife of Deputy Sheriff Frank Jewett.

Kenneth Jewett, their 15-year-old son.

Snow is a Pole. He had been under $500 bond o keep the peace because of previous threats he made to kill his wife.

Snow has been obsessed with the idea of borrowing the Jewett automobile for the seven mile trip from Whitefield to Coopers Mills to visit his wife, from whom he had been separated

Request Refused.

Sheriff Jewett refused Snow's request several times. Kenneth refused Snow the automobile a few days ago.

Today Snow appeared at the Sheriff's home to report. Kenneth again refused. Snow, becoming suddenly crazed, pulled a revolver from his pocket and chasing the sheriff's son who had run from the house, overtook him and sent a bullet crashing through the back of the boy's head.

Mrs Jewett heard the shot and came to the doorway. Seeing the crazed Snow, the frightened woman locked the door and hid under a bed. Snow forced an entrance. Finding Mrs. Jewett in her hiding place, he shot her through the forehead

Snow went to the garage and taking the Jewett machine drove to he lonely farm house near Coopers Mills where his wife lived with her aged grandmother and aunt.

Snow stopped the automobile in the yard. Mrs. Snow saw him and ran. Snow saw her through a window. He went into the kitchen where the aged grandmother hovered, protectingly, over the cradle where lay Snow's 6-months-old son.

Snow ran a few steps towards his wife and fired a bullet into her body just as she was stepping through the half opened window.

Making sure he had killed his wife, Snow turned to Mrs. Brown who was standing over the cradle.

Another report rang out and the aged woman toppled over, crumpling up beside her sleeping great grandchild.

Mrs. Eaton, who was upstairs in the house, came down the stairway at the sound of the shots. Snow stood waiting, revolver in hand. He fired a bullet into her body. Like her niece and grandmother, she fell dead, the fifth victim

Snow strode toward the cradle. He took one look at the sleeping infant and stalked out into the yard Standing beside the machine he fired a shot into his head and fell dead.

JURY SAYS SOUDER GUILTY

EX-TREASURER CONVICTED OF ARSON CHARGE

S. M. Souder Found Guilty Of Burning Old Lincoln County Courthouse-- Verdict On First Ballot.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., Dec. 22.—Former County Treasurer Samuel M. Souder was found guilty by a jury in district court here late Saturday night of arson in connection with the burning of the old Lincoln county court house last April. The jury, according to A. R. Keavitt, foreman, took but one formal ballot.

Deliberate But Few Hours.

The case was given to the jury at 6:30 p. m. Saturday following the closing arguments by the opposing counsel and the instructions by the court.

The opening argument for the defense was made by Attorney V. H. Halligan. His arguments covered in a general way the case as a whole.

W. V. Hoagland, of counsel for the defense, called the jury's attention to the fact that this was an arson case; the thing they should find was whether or not Sam Souder lit the match that started the fire or was there at the time aiding and assisting the man who did start the fire.

He then took up the proof of alleged shortages and delinquencies which the state argue as a motive for the burning of the court house and records.

He explained that the evidence in this case was almost entirely circumstantial and reminded the jury that the circumstance must be very strong to warrant a conviction; so strong that they would exclude any thought of innocence. He attacked the testimony of Miss Hall from Titusville, Fla., who had identified Sam Souder as the same man who had been in the bank in Titusville on Aug. 22 or 23.

Witness Admitted Mistake.

To show how easily she might have been mistaken he cited the case of Sheriff Berthe, who testified positively that he searched the Souder farm on May 12 and this morning admitted it a mistake and rectified it on the witness stand.

R. H. Beatty, co-counsel for the defense then took up the argument for S. M. Souder. He reminded the jury how easily men may be mistaken with regard to time or date. He referred to the testimony of Andy Wessberg, who was janitor at that time, who testified he had given S. M. Souder he keys to the attic on the Sunday the courthouse burned but later it developed that this incident occurred on Arbor day previous to that time. He referred to the remarks of Attorney Gibbs, who had said the jury didn't need to consider Baker, who had been jointly indicted with Souder. Attorney Beatty scored this heavily. He made a very touching appeal to the jury to the injustice of a conviction uon circumstantial evidence. The jury was visibly moved by his words.

Attorney Prince, special prosecutor from Grand Island, gave the closing argument for the prosecution. The state had the theory that he records of the county had been taken upstairs and buried under the rubbish in the old attic. He brought out the coincidence of Sam Souder being in Titusville, Fla., at the same time the coupons were found there.

The case was submitted to the jury with instructions about 6:30 p. m.

Barton is said to have admitted an attempted holdup at Sixteenth and G streets last Thursday bu denied implication in another holdup at Twenty-seventh and Randolph streets two weeks ago in which $20 was taken. Riley claimed that Burton accompanied him and helped him in the robbery, officers said.

Barton and Miss Wade were taken to the county jail by officers.

Two holdups, netting $25 and $175, occurred in Lincoln Saturday night and one suspect, Francis Riley, 19, 537 South Ninth street, was arrested by officers for investigation.

The holdup in which Riley is said to have been implicated was at Fifth and Garfield streets. Jacob Meng, 241 F street an employe at the Miller Grocery, was slugged and robbed of $25 about 7 o'clock. Riley is said to have been carrying a .45 caliber army automatic pistol in which there were no cartridges.

Meng was not injured but "played dead" so that he would not be struck again. Jake Hill, who had made arrangements with officers to tip off the affair, was with Riley, it was said, but took no part in the holdup.

Shopmen Are Victims.

Two employes at the Havelock railroad shops, Carl Kalina, 204 South Eleventh steet, and Archie R. Merrill, 905 G street, were held up by an unmasked bandit about 5:45 p. m. just as they were entering University Place from the north in a car, and robbed of $75 and $100 respectively.

The bandit held an automatic pistol on the men while he robbed them. He stood behind each man while he went through his pockets.

Kalina, who owned the car, was forced to stop because of trouble with the engine. The two men were working on the engine when the

LIQUOR RAIDS AT WASHINGTON

WHEELER DEMANDS FULLEST PUBLICITY

Washington Times Asserts "At Least Two Members Of Cabinet, Members Of Congress and Judiciary" Among Customers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Holiday dry raids tonight had netted thirteen alleged bootleggers and resulted in the capture by the police of exclusive client lists containing several thousand names, some of which are said to merit the description "high in the social life" of Washington.

The drys, headed by Wayne Wheeler, generalissimo of the anti-saloon league, are clamoring that the lists be made public.

"Every friend of law and order should insist upon the prosecution of these conspirators," said Wheeler in a manifesto.

"The purchaser of bootleg liquor is a more cowardly violator of the law than the bootlegger himself. They can and should be prosecuted under Section 6 of the prohibition code, relative to conspiracy."

The demand of the drys for prosecutions and publicity was immediately demanded by Assistant District Attorney Presmont, in charge of the cleanup. He issued a statement saying:

Promises Prosecution.

"Everybody whom the evidence discloses had any connection in the case, whether it be purchaser, runner, or affice employe will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Thus far, none of the names have been permitted to become public.

The Washington Times, however, asserted today.

"At least two members of the cabinet, members of congress, members ofthe judiciary, and leaders in Washington society circles, are said to be numbered in the list of customers."

The trial of the liquor sleuths led to a warehouse where there was cached $35,000 worth of liquor, according to the police, but before it could be seized the representatives of a foreign legation put in appearance and put the diplomatic seal on the liquor.

There was nothing left for the raiders to do but make a formal report to the state department, which is understood to be making a private inquiry as to whether liquor consigned to any of the embassies or legations got into wrong channels.

Premier Is Given Confidence Vote

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The chamber of deputies tonight adopted a motion of confidence in the government of Premier Raymond Poincare by a vote of 331 to 211.

The vote came after Premier Poincare threatened to resign. Finance Minister De Lasteyrie was bitterly opposed to a bill incorporated in the general budget measure.

De Lasteyrie pointed out the subsidy bill would add greatly to the already large budget deficit and declared he would resign before consetning to its adoption.

A compromise project finally was agreed on which will increase the budget 270,000,000 francs annually and the vote of confidence followed.

BONUS MEASURE TO BE PRESSED

Backers Hope to Have Bill Considered Shortly After Holidays.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Another attempt to force consideration of the soldier bonus by the ways and means committee will be made when the house reconvenes after the Christmas holidays.

Representative Rainey, democrat of Illinois, declared tonight that he was prepared to offer a motion to proceed with consideration of the bonus before the Mellon tax reduction bill is taken.

Chairman Green, concedes that action on the bonus cannot be long deferred. He hopes to have the technical administrative changes in the bill ready for report by January 10. Some decision must be made on the bonus soon after that, he said.

If any organized attempt is made to block the bonus, the advocates of the measure are prepared to move the discharge of the committee and throw the question on the floor of the house. This would be made possible by the new house rules, which all leaders expect to be adopted.

Once the bonus is disposed of, Green said, the committee would immediately begin work on the taxation features of the bill.

(Special to The Star.)

FREMONT, Neb., Dec. 22.—John Parpiehal, 60, of Clarkson, was killed and his son, aged 12, was seriously injured when an automobile was struck by train 310 on the Northwestern at Herman's crossing, three miles west of Clarkson Saturday.

The train was delayed an hour and a half at the scene of the accident.

DEMAND HUGHES PROVE ASSERTION

Progressives Insistent On Investigation of "Soviet Documents."

Secretary Of State Not Disposed to Grant Critics' Request.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Senators favoring recognition of Russia, will demand after the holiday that Secretary Hughes prove authenticity of documents he made public as Russian soviet instructions to American communists to prepare for a social revolution here.

A number of progressive senators have agreed to unite in insisting that Hughes furnish proof of the genuineness of these documents. Senator Borah, Idaho, a member of the foreign relations committee will be the spokesman for the administration.

The senators were impelled to this course by announcement from the state department today that Hughes would not submit the disputed documents to an arbitration tribunal to decide their genuineness.

They are the instructions published a few days ago which the state department alleges had been sent to Zinoviev, Russian communist to communist workers in the United States to practice shooting and otherwise prepare to "raise the red flag over the white house."

Senators said the country must be given the truth by the Zinoviev instructions.

If they are false the air will be cleared considerably on the subject of alleged Russian red propaganda.

Hughes takes the position, it was indicated tonight at the state department, that this government is fully convinced of the genuineness of the documents and does not have to submit them to scrutiny as demanded by the Tchitecherin.

Progressive senators are aroused not only over the disputed documents but because of Hughes general attitude on Russia.

Colombia Feels New Tremors

(United Press.)

BOGOTA, Columbia, Dec. 22.—The capitol was thrown into panic today by a severe earthquake shock which rocked buildings and threw some people from their beds.

With the population already nervous by reading reports of great loss of life in the quakes which destroyed four towns along the Ecuadorian border, hundreds of people immediately left their homes nad fled into the open country.

Later in the day the general alarm was increased by messages from Gachala, seventy kilometers west of Bogota, saying that town had been practically destroyed by the quake. Two were killed and more than 1,000 rendered homeless.

Today's quakes were felt in a district about one hundred kilometers northeast of Narino earthquake section and in the opposite direction from Bogota.

WOMAN RECEIVES 'BLACKHAND' NOTE

Mrs. N. A. Wolford Threatened With Death Unless She Meets Demand.

Police Believe Letter Requesting $10 Written By a Child.

An anonymous letter threatening death and signed by a "blackhand" was received Saturday night by Mrs. N. A. Wolford, 629 North Sixteenth street, according to a report to the police by Mrs. Wolford.

The letter was written on a piece of stationery and the "blackhand," which appeared to have been traced from the writer's hand, was placed in the center of the sheet. The threat was scrawled in such a manner as to appear to have been written by a child. The tracing of the hand was small and led the officers to believe that it had been made by a small boy or a woman.

The note read, "Send me $10 or I will kill you. Leave it at the corner of Fifteenth and T streets December, 25."

The police are investigating.

Youngs was a banker in Pittsburgh when he enlisted in the Canadian army in 1917.

WANT CLINE TO BE REGENT

FRIENDS ARE TO CONDUCT CAMPAIGN

Friends Say He Is Eminently Fitted For Important Post —Formerly Engaged In Public School Management And Supervision.

As the result of a meeting in Lincoln last Friday, attended by two dozen alumni and other friends of the University of Nebraska, Earl M. Cline of Lincoln, formerly of Nebraska City, has been drafted to make the race in the First congressional district as a candidate for membership on the board of regents for that institution.

Though personally reluctant to be a candidate for any office, Mr. Cline yielded to the unanimous judgment of those attending the conference that he was the man eminently fitted for the duties of university regent. His nomination petition was filed with Secretary of State Pool on Saturday, along with a receipt for the $10 filing fee paid in Lancaster county, by a committee comprising former Regent J. E. Miller, W. E. Hardy, Verne Hedge, Leonard A. Flansburg, and Geoge W. Holmes.

The office pays no salary, and regents receive nothing but their traveling and hotel expenses when attending meetings or inspecting the university and its branches.

Friends Will Conduct Campaign.

Members of the University club who were instrumental in securing Mr. Cline's consent to run, have undertaken to see that his candidacy is brought to the favorable notice of the voters in he First district, and that he will be relieved of any activities for the purpose of securing election.

The following announcement was made by Mr. Cline after the filing had been made:

"I have been asked by a number of friends to become a candidate for regent of the university from the First congressional district.

"I have always been deeply interested in the welfare and progress of the university and after due consideration, I have decided to file for this non-political office, with the understanding that I will not conduct any campaign for election. If the voters of the district see fit to elect me to this office, I am willing to accept it and shall give the best service of which I am capable to the university and the state."

Formerly in Educational Work.

At the present time Mr. Cline is engaged in the practice of law, being a member of the firm of Hall, Cline and Williams. Before entering the legal profession, he was engaged in public school management and supervision. Though one of the youngest men in the state in that line of work, he won recognition among the leading educators of Nebraska.

He is a native Nebraskan, born at Weeping Water on December 18, 1887, being now 36 years of age. He re-

OLD WORLD IS NOT AT PEACE

(Copyright, 1923, by United Press.)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—There is very little "peace on earth and good will among men" on this side of the world.

Nineteen hundred odd years after the angels sang their "glad tidings of great joy," Europe, is in political and armed turmoil. Tonight almost on the eve of the fifth Christmas after the "war to end wars" telegraph and cable wires were bringing into London stories of threatened warfare, of rule by military law, of privation and suffering.

There was a gleam of light in the fact, however, that for the first time since the world war dwindled away into a number of smaller conflicts, there is very little actual warfare in progress this Christmas and none exists in Europe. In China, Sun Yat Sen is fighting the Peking government, and in Mexico, De La Huerta is rebelling against the regime of President Obregon.

While the children in thousands of British and American homes are being regaled tonight with tales of Santa Clause, the wires brought in the following dispatches anent conditions in other nations:

Envoy Withdrawn.

Athens—Rumania has withdrawn her ambassador to Greece, as a gesture of displeasure at the ejection of King George from the throne. George is married to a Rumanian princess. This action constitutes a rupture of diplomatic relations. The thrones of Serbia, Bulgaria and Rumania are shaking in sympathy with that of Greece, as the royal families of all these countries are closely allied by marriabe ties. The general impression is that "anything may happen."

Berlin—Germany is in financial and economic chaos, as the result of French pressure and the devaluation of the mark. There will be

Elks have been preparing for this big event for a long time and promise to have everything in full readiness, so that none will be disappointed. Thousands of boys and girls are cared for by the Elks Santa every Christmas, this being counted the big event in the lodge calendar.

MANIAC SLAYS THREE WOMEN, BOY AND WIFE

Maine Lumberman, Crazed By Jealousy, Shoots And Kills Five Before Ending His Own Life.

(International News Service.)

COOPER MILLS, Me., Dec. 22.—Crazed by jealousy and his eagerness for revenge, John Snow, a lumberman, 35, shot and killed four women and a boy here today, then committed suicide by shooting.

The other dead:

Mrs. Ida Snow, 20, his wife.

Mrs. Ruel Brann, 70, her grandmother.

Mrs. Eva Eaton, 30, an aunt.

Mrs. Frank Jewett of Whitefield, wife of Deputy Sheriff Frank Jewett.

Kenneth Jewett, their 15-year-old son.

Snow is a Pole. He had been under $500 bond o keep the peace because of previous threats he made to kill his wife.

Snow has been obsessed with the idea of borrowing the Jewett automobile for the seven mile trip from Whitefield to Coopers Mills to visit his wife, from whom he had been separated.

Request Refused.

Sheriff Jewett refused Snow's request several times. Kenneth refused Snow the automobile a few days ago.

Today Snow appeared at the Sheriff's home to report. Kenneth again refused. Snow, becoming suddenly crazed, pulled a revolver from his pocket and chasing the sheriff's son who had run from the house, overtook him and sent a bullet crashing through the back of the boy's head.

Mrs. Jewett heard the shot and came to the doorway. Seeing the crazed Snow, the frightened woman locked the door and hid under a bed.

Snow forced an entrance. Finding Mrs. Jewett in her hiding place, he shot her through the forehead.

Snow went to the garage and taking the Jewett machine drove to he lonely farm house near Coopers Mills where his wife lived with her aged grandmother and aunt.

Snow stopped the automobile in the yard. Mrs. Snow saw him and ran. Snow saw her through a window. He went into the kitchen where the aged grandmother hovered, protectingly, over the cradle where lay Snow's 6-months-old son.

Snow ran a few steps towards his wife and fired a bullet into her body just as she was stepping through the half opened window.

Making sure he had killed his wife, Snow turned to Mrs. Brown who was standing over the cradle.

Another report rang out and the aged woman toppled over, crumpling up beside her sleeping great grandchild.

Mrs. Eaton, who was upstairs in the house, came down the stairway at the sound of the shots. Snow stood waiting, revolver in hand. He fired a bullet into her body. Like her niece and grandmother, she fell dead, the fifth victim.

Snow strode toward the cradle. He took one look at the sleeping infant and stalked out into the yard. Standing beside the machine he fired a shot into his head and fell dead.

Mother Gives Up Her Baby After A Court Victory

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Dec. 22.—Love stepped into the controversy here today over John Michael, five-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Maher, upsetting the ruling of Superior Judge Louis Ward, who awarded the custody of "Baby Mike" to the Mahers over the objections of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fleming, his adopted parents.

"The court said I was entitled to my baby but Mrs. Fleming is a good mother and I think I will give him back to her," said the baby's blood mother.

Ill at her her home, the foster mother said she knew "Baby Mike" would return to her. Mrs. Fleming collapsed at the conclusion of the bitter trial waged to gain legal control of the Maher baby.

While love triumphed over the law, "Baby Mike" had nothing to say. He sat in court and sucked a pink thumb.

DEMOLAY CHAPTER HEARS DR. JENKS

Omahan Urges Members to Prepare to Face The Realities of Life.

Mid-Winter Convocation Of Lincoln Order Is Held Saturday Evening.

While ambition is the keynote of every man's life, youth must be prepared to face the realities of life, Dr. Hart Jenks, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Omaha, said Saturday night at the mid-winter convocation of the Lincoln chapter of De Molay at the Scottish Rite temple. A banquet preceded an initiation of a class of about seventy-five into the second degree. There were about 150 at the banquet.

Dr. Jenks was talking on the "Aspirations of Youth," and centered his address around the life of Joseph. He pointed out that while Joseph was a dreamer and aspired to great things, he prepared himself so that when the opportunity came he was able to grasp it and realize on his dream.

The world is willing to crush the dreamer, Dr. Jenks said, "but" he continued, "the strong man will rise no matter what his difficulties and come into his own, for ambition leads to power and not to death."

It is alright to build castles in the air, the speaker told his audience, but "the real test of a man's worth comes when he is face to face with the realities of life. If you cannot get the place you want," he said, "you need not lose spirit, but continue along paths of right and go as far ahead as you can, and success will be yours."

Temptation attacks a man where he is strongest, according to Dr. Jenks, but yielding shows weakness, he said, as he urged the boys to do right regardless of whether they thought they were getting what they think is rightfully theirs. He said opportunity comes to every fan and that one must be prepared to meet it when it comes or let it go by never to return.

Turning again to the life of Joseph the speaker said that when temptation came to him, Joseph trusted in God, overcame the tempter and, holding to the proper course through the province of God, and doing his best always, he was prepared and when his opportunity came was ready to become one of the outstanding characters of Bible history.

Other speakers at the banquet were J. W. Searson, co-author with Frank S. Land, founder of the DeMolay, in writing the citizenship program of the organization. Mr. Searson gave a personal message for Mr. Land. Rev. Leland and Dr. Frederick Eiche were also on the program. Wendel Berge, master councelor of the DeMolay, was toastmaster. The Brinton Boys' orchestra furnished the music, while the mothers and sisters of the members of the organization did the serving, with the help of some of the boys.

At a short business session held before the banquet, John Ricker was elected junior councilor.

MOSCOW, Dec. 22.—Official Moscow tonight still viewed with mingled satisfaction and irritation, the action of Secretary Hughes in Washington in making public alleged copies of Russian propaganda documents in the United States.

Russian officials were angry at what it termed the "faking" of the American secretary of state and satisfied because they declared there would be no difficulty in proving the articles are false if given a chance.

Professor J. E. Weaver, plant ecologist at the university, leaves Tuesday to attend the meetings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Cincinnati. Doctor Weaver will present a paper giving the results of four years of study and measurements of the environment under which native and crop plants grow in the great plains of Colorado, and the prairies of Kansas and Nebraska. By means of newly devised methods the amount of water given off by crops and other plants in undisturbed soil has measured for the first time and compared with the precipitation. It has been found that if all the water vapor lost from growing plants would again condense and fall as rain there would be more than enough to give the mean annual precipitation without any outside supply such as is suposed to come in from the Gulf of Mexico and elsewhere.

DEMOLAY CHAPTER HEARS DR. JENKS

Omahan Urges Members to Prepare to Face The Realities of Life.

Mid-Winter Convocation Of Lincoln Order Is Held Saturday Evening.

While ambition is the keynote of every man's life, youth must be prepared to face the realities of life, Dr. Hart Jenks, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Omaha, said Saturday night at the mid-winter convocation of the Lincoln chapter of De Molay at the Scottish Rite temple. A banquet preceded an initiation of a class of about seventy-five into the second degree. There were about 150 at the banquet.

Dr. Jenks was talking on the "Aspirations of Youth," and centered his address around the life of Joseph. He pointed out that while Joseph was a dreamer and aspired to great things, he prepared himself so that when the opportunity came he was able to grasp it and realize on his dream.

The world is willing to crush the dreamer, Dr. Jenks said, "but" he continued, "the strong man will rise no matter what his difficulties and come into his own, for ambition leads to power and not to death."

It is alright to build castles in the air, the speaker told his audience, but "the real test of a man's worth comes when he is face to face with the realities of life. If you cannot get the place you want," he said, "you need not lose spirit, but continue along paths of right and go as far ahead as you can, and success will be yours."

Temptation attacks a man where he is strongest, according to Dr. Jenks, but yielding shows weakness, he said, as he urged the boys to do right regardless of whether they thought they were getting what they think is rightfully theirs. He said opportunity comes to every fan and that one must be prepared to meet it when it comes or let it go by never to return.

Turning again to the life of Joseph the speaker said that when temptation came to him, Joseph trusted in God, overcomi the tempter and, holding to the proper course through the province of God, and doing his best always, he was prepared and when his opportunity came was ready to become one of the outstanding characters of Bible history.

Other speakers at the banquet were J. W. Searson, co-author with Frank S. Land, founder of the DeMolay, in writing the citizenship program of the organization. Mr. Searson gave a personal message for Mr. Land. Rev. Leland and Dr. Frederick Eiche were also on the program. Wendel Berge, master councelor of the DeMolay was toastmaster. The Brinton Boy orchestra furnished the music, while the mothers and sisters of the members of the organization did the serving, with the help of some of the boys.

At a short business session held before the banquet, John Ricker was elected junior councilor.

Federal Authorities Comb Border Country For Alleged Negro Gambler.

Wife Reitrates Charge Husband Sought To Sell Her For $500,000.

LOS ANGELES, Dec 22—Federal authorities announced tonight that the border country near El Paso, Tex., was being combed [illegible] to determine whether or not there is such a person as Lou Harris, wealthy negro gambler of Juarez, Mexico to whom Eiser LaMaie, well known throughout Oklahoma and Texas as a film producer and theatrical manager is alleged by his wife Mrs Helen LaMaie to have tried to sell her for $500,000. LaMaie in a statement replying to his wife's charges declares that Harris is only mythical man and a product of his imagination. Federal officers in hearing Mrs. LaMaie's charges however, declared tonight they believed Harris actually existed, as he is reported from Fort Worth Tex., to have deserted his border haunts two months ago.

In the meantime handwriting experts will be employed, it was said, to decide the veracity of Mrs LaMaie's startling story, as the result of LaMaie's claim that the 'wife sale' plot was a hoax and that he wrote the letters which he purported to be from Harris. Whether or not the department of justice will continue its investigation of Mrs. LaMaie's charges depends largely on the handwriting tests and the search for Harris, it was stated.

Says Claim False

Mrs. LaMaie declares that her husband's claim that the 'wife sale' was a hoax is false.

"I believe Harris exists" she said. "Several times my husband pointed out a negro to me whom he said was Harris."

LaMaie in claiming there was no such person as Harris, explained he had told his wife about Harris to discourage her in her craving for money. LaMaie said he told her of the proposed Harris deal thinking it would sicken her but she was interested in the idea when told $250 000 of the money would go to her.

Mrs LaMaie denied this however.

Mrs LaMaie injected a mysterious "Mystic Order of the Black Rose" into the case today declaring that her husband had told her of the organization. She said he had referred to the society in his letters and had mentioned an asserted plot to make her "queen" of the order which she understood was for the "equalization" of the rights of the Ethiopian and Caucasian races.

UPHAM BACKING DEMOS' EFFORTS

Republican Treasurer Wants To See Opposing Party Convention at Chicago.

(United Press)

CHICAGO, Dec 22—Chicago's democratic and republican chieftains turned the political hatchet today and passed pledge cards to the city's big business men to raise $125 000 to bring the national convention of the democratic party here next summer."

"We have rolled up our sleeves and gone to work in earnest," said George E. Brennan, Illinois democratic leader. "Every dollar needed will be pledged before we go to Washington to put in Chicago's bid, but we will have to work for it."

Fred W Upham treasurer of the republican national committee who is said to have had thirty-seven of forty-eight votes in the republican organization pledged to Chicago when he yielded to party leaders in favor of Cleveland is Brennan's first lieutenant in the pre-convention campaign for funds.

Upham has promised his full support to the democrats in their agitation. The movement has taken three roads. Collection of a fund sufficient to cover expenses has begun. Plans are being made for a gigantic hall to accommodate the democrats and all future meetings of national importance. A citizens committee is to be appointed to carry both projects to fruition.

Student Volunteer Convention to Open With 5,000 Visitors

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec 22—From nearly every state in the union and from many foreign lands five thousand delegates to the international student volunteer convention will gather here next week for their quadrennial meeting.

Nearly every college and university in the world will be represented according to Thomas S Sharp executive secretary of the movement.

The delegates are students and educators of higher educational institutions who have pledged themselves to further missionary work throughout the world. Many of the delegates are students who are working their way through college to prepare themselves for the life work of a missionary.

Yale university with seventy delegates will have the largest representation of any institution. Other American universities which are expected to send large delegations are Illinois, Minnesota, Chicago, California, Nebraska, Harvard and Michigan.

GOES TO ILLINOIS

Guy E Mills who has been with the Cushman Motor Works for the past eleven years as purchasing agent and storekeeper, is leaving today for Bloomington Ill., where he has accepted a similar position with the Keiser Van Leer company, jobbers of heavy hardware, factory and mill supplies of Bloomington. Mrs Mills with their three children will remain in Lincoln until the close of school in June.

FONTAINE CASE IS TO BE REOPENED

To Probe Charge That Harry Payne Whitney Is Father Of Dancer's Child.

(United Press)

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec 22—Justice Ellis J Stanley in Albany today opened the door for a legal probe into the paternity of the son of Evan Burrows Fontaine in her $1,000,000 breach of promise suit against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, son of Harry Payne Whitney.

The determination of the paternity of the child will be one of the pivotal points upon which the action will hinge. Miss Fontaine alleges Whitney is the father of the child and much of the evidence to sustain her case will center around this question.

Judge Staley cleared the way by dismissing a previous decision in the supreme court in Saratoga Springs at the request of Charles [illegible] of New York attorney for Miss Fontaine.

This will have two effects. It will divest the action of a number of technical entanglements into which it has become enmeshed and will permit a new action on the same state of facts to be started in Westchester county, the present home of Miss Fontaine.

Many Entanglements.

So complex have been these entanglements that the case never reached actual trial. Charges of fraud have been hurled from both sides and much time has been consumed in settling these.

'Sonny' Whitney, the alleged father of the child will be served with a summons and complaint in which all the charges cited in the original summons will be reiterated. Unless again interrupted by legal pitfalls, the action may reach trial in White Plains, West Chester county, in the spring.

Miss Fontaine's present marital status will be argued before Justice Staley. Outerbridge Horsay, attorney for Whitney opposed the motion claiming the dancer is still married and has no legal right to sue Whitney. He argued that if the old action is dismissed a new one will be brought by Miss Fontaine to persecute and harass his client without any hope of recovery.

Mr Firestone contended the previous marriage of Miss Fontaine has been annulled and she has every legal right and good cause to bring the action.

Gentlemen: Your agent, Mr W. J Schumacher has just made settlement with me on my Twenty Payment Life Policy No 13466 maturing today.

My cash settlement of $3 203 52 on a $2 500 00 policy is surely a wonderful settlement and I want to tell everyone I can now well pleased I am with the results of this policy in your good company.

The fact that I have carried this policy at an older age makes my cash settlement bigger of course on the same amount carried by a younger person, but the younger person carrying a policy has the same rate of earning I have had and can carry more insurance for the amount of premium I have paid.

I want you to count me a booster not only for insurance on this plan but for a company making as good settlements as your company.

Some More About Contingent Claims

You recollect that in our study of contingent claims last week, Alfred Hazlett, receiver of the American Bank of Beatrice, won in Supreme Court in the case of Hazlett vs Estate of Blakely (70 Neb 613). Hazlett brought suit against the Blakely estate to enforce the "double liability" imposed upon stockholders in a bank corporation. Blakely was the owner of $1 000 of American Bank stock when he died.

His widow was administratrix of the estate and she contested Hazlett's claim on the ground that he had failed to file his claim in time. The County Court and District Court agreed with her but the Supreme Court held that the time limit did not begin to run until Hazlett had secured judgment in District Court for the $1,000 "double liability."

General Section 1363, Compiled Statutes of Nebraska, 1922 provides for an action against heirs in the event that a claim is established after distribution has been made and the Executor has not sufficient funds to pay the newly established claim, or, perhaps, has made final settlement and has been discharged.

Alfred Hazlett again figures in our investigations. In the case of Brinkworth v Hazlett 64 Neb 592—another of the American Bank receivership and "double liability" cases—Hazlett lost.

Delia B. Hotchkiss owned four shares of the bank stock. She died July 2 1897 leaving real and personal property more than sufficient to pay her debts. She left a Will but had named no Executor so W H Mahannah was appointed administrator with the Will annexed on September 24 1897. On April 21 1899 he made a final settlement and distributed $537 to a daughter Mrs. Bridges, $537 to Mrs. Brinkworth, and some smaller legacies.

Prior to this settlement, November 15, 1898, Receiver Hazlett had begun suit in District Court against 59 stockholders among whom was Delia B Hotchkiss name, although she had died more than a year before. On June 22, 1899 Hazlett filed an amended and supplemental petition setting up the death of Mrs Hotchkiss, and the administration on her estate and asked judgment against Mrs Bridges Mrs Brinkworth and others for $400 on the stock liability.

Judgment was rendered against the defendants in District Court, and Mrs Brinkworth came to the Supreme Court on a writ of error. In recommending that the judgment against Mrs Brinkworth and other legatees be reversed and dismissed Commissioner Hastings says:

> "It seems clear that the basis of a proceeding against an heir or devisee to recover property assigned him by the Probate Court, is an allowed or established claim."

And as Hazlett has failed to include among his defendants the administrator or asked to have one specially appointed for the suit he had neither an allowed claim in Probate Court, nor a money judgment in District Court against the Hotchkiss estate he had laid no foundation for bringing suit against Mrs. Brinkworth and the other legatees.

SIGNING ORDER IN HOTEL CASE ENDS LONG LITIGATION

Final Act Is Performed By Referee McClenahan Saturday Afternoon.

Referee Baylor Acquiesces But Not Satisfied With Price Paid.

Late Saturday afternoon saw the writing of the final chapter in the long drawn out litigation over the properties of the Nebraska Hotel and Nebraska Building & Investment companies, bankrupts. At 5 o'clock sharp the final order of confirmation of the sale of the properties to E. C. Eppley, Omaha, for $937,500, was signed.

The order was signed by D. H. McClenahan, referee in bankruptcy; F. B. Baylor, trustee of the bankrupt estates, and E. C. Eppley, by his attorney, John J. Ledwith. The order entitles the trustee to draw $100,000 immediately on the full payment. This amount has been deposited in a Lincoln bank. The title will not be turned over to Eppley until the full amount of the purchase price has been paid. The actual cash which will be received from the sale after all credits have been paid will amount to $341,350.91. It is thought that this will pay all creditors' claims and leave a small dividend for the stockholders.

Trustee Baylor, however, stated in court that he could not, in all justice to the stockholders, join with the creditors in recommending the order authorizing the sale of the properties to Mr. Eppley on his offer although under the circumstances he did not feel disposed to interpose further objection to their will. If the court should so order, however, he would stand ready to make the sale, he said.

Baylor's Statement.

In a general review of the case Trustee Baylor said:

On the twenty-first day of December, 1923, at a meeting of the creditors of the above named bankrupts, called by the referee on the request of certain creditors, to consider an offer of Eugene C. Eppley to purchase the properties of the Nebraska Hotel company, bankrupt.

At such a time, the trustee feels a frank expression from him is due the court, the creditors and others having an interest in the estates. This is especially true in view of the many public statements and reports circulated, misrepresenting the real attitude and purposes of the trustee in the discharge of his duties and responsibilities as such officer, and mis-stating the facts with reference to events that have occurred in the proceedings herein.

At the outset, the trustee desires to make clear that he finds himself unable to join with creditors in their petitions for an order of the court authorizing the sale to Eugene C. Eppley under the terms set out. He cannot truthfully state to the court that he is convinced sale will promote the best interest of the bankrupt estates.

On the other hand, the trustee does not feel free to further interpose objections to the will of the creditors, but stands ready, if the court so directs upon the advice of creditors, to make the sale and compromise prayed for by creditors.

Eppley's Offer.

The Eppley offer proposes to purchase the six hotels and other interests of the bankrupt estates for the sum of $875,000.

The trustee has been unable to determine whether more, or less, than $875,000.00 can be secured, at private sale, from others than Eppley, or at a public sale, for the reason that he has never come into possession of the properties, although legally entitled thereto excepting as to Hotel Fontenelle, nor has he been able to secure any information as to the earnings of any said properties since April 1, 1921. This possession and information has wrongfully been withheld from the trustee by the said Eppley, and in the case of the Hotel Fontenelle from the Interstate Hotel company. The trustee has repeatedly asked Mr. Eppley for possession of these properties and for information as to their earnings during his occupancy.

In the matter of possession of the hotel properties, the referee and the United States circuit court of appeals for this circuit have decided that Eppley's possession is unlawful but, nevertheless, he has retained possession of the properties by taking advantage of review proceedings. Eppley has refused to produce the books, and, when testifying, states he does not know, even approximately, about the earnings of these hotels he has been operating and refuses to find out.

Refuse to Bid.

The trustee has been forced to realize that his lack of possession of the properties and of information as to the earning power of these properties and litigation affecting these properties, have been unsurmountable obstacles in getting other persons than Epply interested in bidding for these properties.

Sincere effort has been made by the trustee at all times to get bidders for these properties. But, while many responsible parties have expressed a desire to bid on said properties, and some have indicated higher values than reflected by the Eppley bid, they have generally finally informed the trustee, "you must first get possession of these properties, ascertain their earnings, and get rid of the litigation over possession and title, before we can bid.

As bearing on the value of these properties, the trustee sets forth a comparison of the appraised value of the properties, as shown by the appraisers' report filed herein, with the Eppley offer, as follows:

Hotel	Eppley Offer	Appraised Value
Lincoln, Lincoln....	$275,000	$ 340,000.00
Capital Prop., Linc.	85,000	100,000.00
Lincoln, Franklin...	35,000	35,000.00
Lincoln, Table Rock	10,000	20,000.00
Evans, Columbus...	75,000	85,000.00
Lincoln, Scottsbluff.	80,000	109,534.34
Interstate Hotel Co. stock	315,000	*313,000.00
Total	$875,000	$1,002,534.34

*Average.

For the reasons stated the trustee finds himself unable to determine what these properties might bring under circumstances permitting free and competitive bidding.

Filipino Who Claims He Was Forced To Wed By Official Of Islands, Given A Divorce

A marriage intermixed with a melodramatic plot in the Phillipines was brought to and end Saturday by Judge W. M. Morning ewhen he granted a divorce to Felicisimo M. Paguio, Filipino student at the University of Nebraska, from Flaviana C. Paguio.

The Filipino claimed that he had been forced to marry Flaviana by a high official of the islands, Julio Duenas, who was said to be the father of Flaviana's illegitimate child.

Felicisimo declared that he had been invited by Flaviana to go riding one evening. Next day Duenos, assisted by a confederate, threatened Felicisimo with a gun and forced him to marry the woman, the petion told the court. The marriage took place in Manila, April 7, 1911. Felicisimo was then 18 and his wife 26.

After the marriage, Felicisimo's wife struck him and beat him and often went to Manila to see Julio Duenos, the husband asserted. Felicisimo was teaching school in the Phillipines but finally left his wife and went to Hong Hong to escape the notoriety, he said.

In an effort to patch up the difficulties, Felicisimo went to Pilar, P. I., with his wife. He hoped to get away from Julio Duenos' influence and thus live happily. The attempt was fruitless and Felicisimo came to the United States in 1917 and entered the University of Nebraska. He completed the arts and science course and received his A. B. degree and was in the law school two years when his health failed. He went then to Denver University, Denver, Colo., where he is now but he will return to the University of Nebraska when he regains his health.

Bar Association's Decision to Charter British Vessel Causes Stir.

Formal Statemnt Forthcoming From United States Shipping Board.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Fresh fuel was added today to the controversy aroused by the American Bar association chartering a British liner instead of an American vessel, to carry its members to London next summer.

The United States shipping board issued a formal statement charging that its representatives were refused permission to attend the meeting of the association's arrangements committee at which the British boat was selected.

The board's statement follows:

"Officials of the United States line heard of the proposed trip of the American Bar association in October 1922, and the assistant traffic manager at once took personal charge and got into touch with Frederick E. Wadhams and arranged numerous meetings, not only with him but with the committee when considering the matter, one of which meetings was held in the office of John W. Davis, chairman of the London meeting committee at which rates, ships and technical features were discussed.

Leviathan Offered.

"Both the steamship Leviathan and the steamship George Washington were offered to the committee. The United States lines were asked whether they were willing to meet any offers by an English line and said that they were, which was confirmed by a letter stating 'we are prepared to make the same terms and conditions as were advanced by any competitors.'

Mr. Kemp, secretary; Mr. Adams, treasurer, and Mr. Davis, president, were invited on the trial trip of the Leviathan and Messrs. Kemp and Wadhams attended, at which time every phase of the trip was discussed. Later meetings were held and the steamship George Washington was offered with the agreement to turn all of its accommodations amounting to 948 persons into first class for the purposes of the trip, the association to sell and allot accommodations as they desired.

A new committee of the bar association was suddenly appointed which held a meeting on October 31, which the United States lines requested permission to attend, which permission was denied. Shortly thereafter the information was received that the British ship Berengaria has been "picked."

EARLY TRIAL FOR MYSTERY WOMAN

Mrs. Margaret Weaver Alleged To Have Urged Slaying Of Klan Attorney.

(United Press.)

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22.— Mrs. Margaret Weaver, woman of mystery in the murder of W. S. Coburn, klansman, by Phil E Fox, publicity director of the ku klux klan, will be given an early trial as an accessory before the fact, officials announced tonight.

A detective, armed with requisition papers, was en route tonight to Birmingham, Ala., where Mrs. Weaver was under arrest.

Throughout the trial of Fox, which closed last night with his conviction of murder and sentence of life imprisonment, Mrs. Weaver's name was frequently mentioned in connection with the klan editor's visit to disorderly houses and resorts.

Mrs. Weaver, instead of "the voice of God," was the inspiration for the murder, the state contended. Witnesses during Fox's trial told of the arrest of the defendant and the woman, scantily clad, in a hotel, of wild taxicab rides they took about the city for days before the murder and of seeing Mrs. Weaver hand Fox a revolver a few hours before Coburn was shot down in his office.

SCHOOLS TAKE UP TURKEY RAISING

Regents Take Steps to Develop Industry at Agricultural Colleges.

Turkey raising is to receive attention hereafter as a regular feature of the poultry departments at the state agricultural college in Lincoln, he school of agriculture at Curtis, and the three agricultural experiment stations of the University of Nebraska, located at North Platte, Scottsbluff, and Valentine.

So many private growers throughout the state are now engaged in producing fowls for Christmas and Thanksgiving feasts that the board of regents, for the state university has taken steps to develop the industry at the several branches of the institution which are devoted to agricultural, stock raising, and poultry activities.

Regent W. P. Warner of Dakota City, who raises turkeys on his own farms in Nebraska and Minnesota, is chiefly responsible for the establishment of that occupation as part of the regular work at the places named. Mr. Warner believes that Nebraska can grow as many turkeys, and just as good ones, as any other state in the union.

In northern and western Nebraska, especially in the sandhill territory, many of the ranch owners have flocks of turkeys which range over the country and pick up a large part of their own living.

The great number of birds offered for sale in Lincoln and other Nebraska cities this year, and the moderate prices asked for them, show how the industry has been growing and production increasing.

Lodge To Spread Christmas Cheer

The Lincoln Maccabees lodge and its Woman's Benefit association will hold community celebration Christmas eve at Walsh hall, 144 South Twelfth street.

Plans are being made for distribution of baskets and other relief among needy members of the organization, and the affair is announced as a part of a nation-wide movement within the lodge for increased social work.

Throughout America the celebrations will be held by members of the Maccabees lodges, and it is expected that the event will become an annual affair.

M'MULLEN FOR TAX REDUCTION

Candidate For Governor Pledges Himself to Program of Economy.

Adam McMullen, republican gubernatorial aspirant, pledged himself to a program of economy and tax reduction, in a statement given out Saturday at the time he delivered his nomination application to the secretary of state's office. Mr. McMullen said:

"The favorable reception given my candidacy for the republican nomination for governor at the last primary, and a consciousness of the expressions of continued good-will reaching me from all parts of the state, impel the belief that I am, in a sense, obligated to beome a candidate at this time. Therefore, I have, today, entered my personal filing as provided by law.

"Having lived in Nebraska since childhood and having enjoyed the educational advantages of our public schools and university, and having experienced a fair share of our business and agricultural opportunities, I stand ready, in return, to render back to the state any public service I may be able to perform that might add to its advancement and material well being.

"In years past I have served my home community in executive and administrative capacities, and at different times I have been honored with membership in both branches of our legislature.

"I believe I can say that I understand, in a large measure, the needs of our people, especially the needs of the farmer, whose problems are my problems and whose hopes and endeavors and economic requirements are intimately and actively my own.

"If nominaed and elected to the office of governor I shall do my best to help to administer the business of the state in an efficient and economical manner, and the only pledge I shall make in the coming campaign is the same pledge and only pledge made by me in the past campaigns, and that is a pledge to the people that wherever, through my recommendation or official action, the burden of taxation can be lessened or the conditions of the state improved in any way, it will be promptly done."

Wife Files a Cross Petition To Divorce Suit

May L. Williams, wife of James L. Williams, who recently brought suit for divorce against his wife and suit for $10,000 damages against Police Sergeant Frank Towle for alienating the affections of his wife, filed an answer and cross petition for divorce in district court Saturday.

Mrs. Williams claims that her husband is afflicted with a loathsome disease and was at the time she married him, December 28, 1898. This was not known to her at the time, she says.

After their marriage he beat and struck her and in 1909, because of his mode of life, he suffered a stroke of paralysis through which she nursed him carefully, the petition says. He was ill for a year, she says, and during this time she secured employment and supported the family.

She asks that her maiden name, May L. Mitchell, be restored.

Insurance Policies Christmas Gift to Cadillac Employes

Novel Christmas gifts in the form of insurance policies were presented to the employes of the Harry Williams Cadillac company last week at a Christmas party held in the company's show rooms.

Mr. Williams explained to the employes that instead of giving turkeys and other customary gifts the company was presenting them with insurance policies, payable to their beneficiaries in case of death. The company had paid the annual premiums and would continue to do so, so long as they remained in the employ of the company.

The total amount of the policies amounted to around $22,000 and the policies ranged from one to two thousand dollars and will increase each year.

SIGNING ORDER IN HOTEL CASE ENDS LONG LITIGATION

Final Act Is Performed By Referee McClenahan Saturday Afternoon.

Referee Baylor Acquiesces But Not Satisfied With Price Paid.

Late Saturday afternoon saw the writing of the final chapter in the long drawn out litigation over the properties of the Nebraska Hotel and Nebraska Building & Investment companies, bankrupts. At 5 o'clock sharp the final order of confirmation of the sale of the properties to E. C. Eppley, Omaha, for $937,500, was signed.

The order was signed by D. H. McClenahan, referee in bankruptcy; F. B. Baylor, trustee of the bankrupt estates, and E. C. Eppley, by his attorney, John J. Ledwith. The order entitles the trustee to draw $100,000 immediately on the full payment. This amount has been deposited in a Lincoln bank. The title will not be turned over to Eppley until the full amount of the purchase price has been paid. The actual cash which will be received from the sale after all credits have been paid will amount to $341,350.91. It is thought that this will pay all creditors' claims and leave a small dividend for the stockholders.

Trustee Baylor, however, stated in court that he could not, in all justice to the stockholders, join with the creditors in recommending the order authorizing the sale of the properties to Mr. Eppley on his offer although under the circumstances he did not feel disposed to interpose further objection to their will. If the court should so order, however, he would stand ready to make the sale, he said.

Baylor's Statement.

In a general review of the case Trustee Baylor said:

On the twenty-first day of December, 1923, at a meeting of the creditors of the above named bankrupts, called by the referee on the request of certain creditors, to consider an offer of Eugene C. Eppley to purchase the properties of the Nebraska Hotel company, bankrupt.

At such a time, the trustee feels a frank expression from him is due the court, the creditors and others having an interest in the estates. This is especially true in view of the many public statements and reports circulated, misrepresenting the real attitude and purposes of the trustee in the discharge of his duties and responsibilities as such officer, and mis-stating the facts with reference to events that have occurred in the proceedings herein.

At the outset, the trustee desires to make clear that he finds himself unable to join with creditors in their petitions for an order of the court authorizing the sale to Eugene C. Eppley under the terms set out. He cannot truthfully state to the court that he is convinced sale will promote the best interest of the bankrupt estates.

On the other hand, the trustee does not feel free to further interpose objections to the will of the creditors, but stands ready, if the court so directs upon the advice of creditors, to make the sale and compromise prayed for by creditors.

Eppley's Offer.

The Eppley offer proposes to purchase the six hotels and other interests of the bankrupt estates for the sum of $875,000.

The trustee has been unable to determine whether more, or less, than $875,000.00 can be secured, at private sale, from others than Eppley, or at a public sale, for the reason that he has never come into possession of the properties, although legally entitled thereto excepting as to Hotel Fontenelle, nor has he been able to secure any information as to the earnings of any said properties since April 1, 1921. This possession and information has wrongfully been withheld from the trustee by the said Eppley, and in the case of the Hotel Fontenelle from the Interstate Hotel company. The trustee has repeatedly asked Mr. Eppley for possession of these properties and for information as to their earnings during his occupancy.

In the matter of possession of the hotel properties, the referee and the United States circuit court of appeals for this circuit have decided that Eppley's possession is unlawful but, nevertheless, he has retained possession of the properties by taking advantage of review proceedings. Eppley has refused to produce the books, and, when testifying, states he does not know, even approximately, about the earnings of these hotels he has been operating and refuses to find out.

Refuse to Bid.

The trustee has been forced to realize that his lack of possession of the properties and of information as to the earning power of these properties and litigation affecting these properties, have been unsurmountable obstacles in getting other persons than Epply interested in bidding for these properties.

Sincere effort has been made by the trustee at all times to get bidders for these properties. But, while many responsible parties have expressed a desire to bid on said properties, and some have indicated higher values than reflected by the Eppley bid, they have generally finally informed the trustee, "you must first get possession of these properties, ascertain their earnings, and get rid of the litigation over possession and title, before we can bid.

As bearing on the value of these properties, the trustee sets forth a comparison of the appraised value of the properties, as shown by the appraisers' report filed herein, with the Eppley offer, as follows:

Hotel	Eppley Offer	Appraised Value
Lincoln, Lincoln	$275,000	$ 340,000.00
Capital Prop., Linc.	85,000	100,000.00
Lincoln, Franklin	35,000	35,000.00
Lincoln, Table Rock	10,000	20,000.00
Evans, Columbus	75,000	85,000.00
Lincoln, Scottsbluff	80,000	109,534.34
Interstate Hotel Co. stock	315,000	*313,000.00

*Average.

For the reasons stated the trustee finds himself unable to determine what these properties might bring under circumstances permitting free and competitive bidding.

EARLY TRIAL FOR MYSTERY WOMAN

Mrs. Margaret Weaver Alleged To Have Urged Slaying Of Klan Attorney.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22.— Mrs. Margaret Weaver, woman of mystery in the murder of W. S. Coburn, klansman, by Phil E. Fox, publicity director of the ku klux klan, will be given an early trial as an accessory before the fact, officials announced tonight.

SCHOOLS TAKE UP TURKEY RAISING

Regents Take Steps to Develop Industry at Agricultural Colleges.

Turkey raising is to receive attention hereafter as a regular feature of the poultry departments at the state agricultural college in Lincoln, he school of agriculture at Curtis, and the three agricultural experiment stations of the University of Nebraska, located at North Platte, Scottsbluff, and Valentine.

So many private growers throughout the state are now engaged in producing fowls for Christmas and Thanksgiving feasts that the board of regents for the state university has taken steps to develop the industry at the several branches of the institution which are devoted to agricultural, stock raising, and poultry activities.

Regent W. P. Warner of Dakota City, who raises turkeys on his own farms in Nebraska and Minnesota, is chiefly responsible for the establishment of that occupation as part of the regular work at the places named. Mr. Warner believes that Nebraska can grow as many turkeys, and just as good ones, as any other state in the union.

In northern and western Nebraska, especially in the sandhill territory, many of the ranch owners have flocks of turkeys which range over the country and pick up a large part of their own living.

The great number of birds offered for sale in Lincoln and other Nebraska cities this year, and the moderate prices asked for them, show how the industry has been growing and production increasing.

Lodge To Spread Christmas Cheer

The Lincoln Maccabees lodge and its Woman's Benefit association will hold community celebration Christmas eve at Walsh hall, 144 South Twelfth street.

Plans are being made for distribution of baskets and other relief among needy members of the organization, and the affair is announced as a part of a nation-wide movement within the lodge for increased social work.

Throughout America the celebrations will be held by members of the Maccabees lodges, and it is expected that the event will become an annual affair.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The Rumanian minister to Greece has been ordered to return to Bucharest, according to a dispatch from Athens tonight.

M'MULLEN FOR TAX REDUCTION

Candidate For Governor Pledges Himself to Program of Economy.

Adam McMullen, republican gubernatorial aspirant, pledged himself to a program of economy and tax reduction, in a statement given out Saturday at the time he delivered his nomination application to the secretary of state's office. Mr. McMullen said:

"The favorable reception given my candidacy for the republican nomination for governor at the last primary, and a consciousness of the erpressions of continued good-will reaching me from all parts of the state, impel the belief that I am, in a sense, obligated to beome a candidate at this time. Therefore, I have, today, entered my personal filing as provided by law.

"Having lived in Nebraska since childhood and having enjoyed the educational advantages of our public schools and university, and having experienced a fair share of our business and agricultural opportunities, I stand ready, in return, to render back to the state any public service I may be able to perform that might add to its advancement and material well being.

"In years past I have served my home community in executive and administrative capacities, and at different times I have been honored with membership in both branches of our legislature.

"I believe I can say that I understand, in a large measure, the needs of our people, especially the needs of the farmer, whose problems are my problems and whose hopes and endeavors and economic requirements are intimately and actively my own.

"If nominaed and elected to the office of governor I shall do my best to help to administer the business of the state in an efficient and economical manner, and the only pledge I shall make in the coming campaign is the same pledge and only pledge made by me in the past campaigns, and that is a pledge to the people that wherever, through my recommendation or official action, the burden of taxation can be lessened or the conditions of the state improved in any way, it will be promptly done."

Wife Files a Cross Petition To Divorce Suit

May L. Williams, wife of James L. Williams, who recently brought suit for divorce against his wife and suit for $10,000 damages against Police Sergeant Frank Towle for alienating the affections of his wife, filed an answer and cross petition for divorce in district court Saturday.

Mrs. Williams claims that her husband is afflicted with a loathsome disease and was at the time she married him, December 28, 1898. This was not known to her at the time, she says.

After their marriage he beat and struck her and in 1909, because of his mode of life, he suffered a stroke of paralysis through which she nursed him carefully, the petition says. He was ill for a year, she says, and during this time she secured employment and supported the family.

She asks that her maiden name, May L. Mitchell, be restored.

Insurance Policies Christmas Gift to Cadillac Employes

Novel Christmas gifts in the form of insurance policies were presented to the employes of the Harry Williams Cadillac company last week at a Christmas party held in the company's show rooms.

Mr. Williams explained to the employes that instead of giving turkeys and other customary gifts the company was presenting them with insurance policies, payable to their beneficiaries in case of death. The company had paid the annual premiums and would continue to do so, so long as they remained in the employ of the company.

The total amount of the policies amounted to around $22,000 and the policies ranged from one to two thousand dollars and will increase each year.

ARCHITECTS SEEK REORGANIZATION

Would Have Regrouping Of Governmental Departments Under One Head.

Supervising Architect Hold Responsible Position At Small Pay.

OMAHA, Dec. 22.—The American Institute of Architects, it is announced, will join with the Federated American Engineering societies and other allied organizations in a nationwide movement to bring about the reorganization of the department of the interior as provided in the Brown plan, which was approved by the late President Harding.

Milton B. Medary, Jr., of Philadelphia and Thomas R. Kimball of Omaha, who was advisory architect on the new Nebraska capitol project, have been appointed to represent the institute at the public works conference to be held under the auspices of the Engineering Federation in Washington on January 9. The question of public works was described as one of the most vital before the institute, which took a leading part in the effort started several years ago to eliminate waste in the federal government through reorganizing departments and bureaus. More than 200 organizations, including representation from contractors, will send delegates to the Washington conference.

The plan supported by the institute and the engineering societies carries out to a greater or less extent the recommendations previously made by these bodies. Practically all the construction work now scattered through some thirty or more departments and bureaus is to be combined in a new bureau of public works under the interior department.

If this plan is approved by congress, the work of the supervising architect's office will be transferred to the interior department and come under the division of public works.

To Combine Departments.

"The government," says a report of the institute's committee on public works," engages in construction work of all kinds, from that which may be regarded as purely engineering work, such as land reclamation work or river and harbor work, to that which is considered purely architectural, such as public buildings and monuments.

"No sharp line can be drawn dividing architectural from engineering work. The technical knowledge of the engineer is necessary to the architect in practically every problem involving construction, and the artistic skill of the architect is of value to the engineer in the great majority of the construction problems with which he has to deal.

"Better understanding, greater appreciation, closer co-operation between the two professions are more and more in evidence year by year. If all the construction activities of the government were brought together into one department or bureau, the co-ordination of the work of the architect and engineer, would inevitably produce better results and redound to the advantage of the country at large.

"Under existing conditions, the supervising architect occupies an anomalous position, enjoying almost none of the advantages of government employment. In normal times, the volume of work handled by his office probably far exceeds that of any office in private practice, and the problems which he must solve, call for as high a degree of professional skill as is demanded of the foremost private practitioner.

Salary Inadequate.

"The officer, however, is a subordinate one, without dignity or prestige, and it carries a salary less than that paid by many private practitioners to their head draftsmen.

"The architectural profession includes within its membership many men of outstanding ability, men who occupy commanding positions in their communities and with national, and even international reputations. They are not less public spirited than members of other professions, not less ready to sacrifice their personal interests in the public service, but it is scarcely to be expected that they will abandon their private practice, with its honors and emoluments, for a subordinate government position which carries neither.

"Whatever form the re-organization and regrouping of government departments may take, it seems clear that the design and construction of all public buildings will be placed under one officer, and that officer, an architect, as a matter of course.

"With the scope of its work thus greatly enlarged, it will become more important than ever that the office should be able to command the services of the very ablest men in the profession, and this can be brought about only by elevating the office to a position of honor and dignity second only to that of a cabinet officer."

LOVE OF CLASSEN EQUALLY DIVIDED

So Omaha Man Lives With Sisters Until Trio Is Arrested.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 22.—Unable to prove that the body given up by the Missouri river was that of her war veteran husband, who disappeared in April after declaring he would take the easiest way out of suffering caused by being gassed in France, Mrs. Inez Stephensen, sobbed as she told Judge Dineen today she would "release Ferdinand C. Lassen from his bond of love so he can marry sister."

"I loved him, he wanted to marry me to make a home for my two babies, but when the body was found and said it was my husband's, I could not prove it, it was so decomposed," she said.

"So I became the amour of Ferdinand T. Classen.

"My sister came, young and beautiful. She loved him. He said he loved us both equally, and that the three of us should have a love nest together. We did, for weeks, and were happy."

When the body was found, authorities notified the veteran's mother at Neligh, Neb., but the message was not delivered, for she was ill and it was believed the world would be fatal.

"We decided Thursday to marry," said Jarmedt Fay Vonnat, the young, beautiful sister.

Police arrested the trio on complaint of the welfare board, Red Cross and humane society, interested parties because of Mrs. Stephenson's children.

Dairy Cattle Die After Eating What Was Intended For Making Booze.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 22.—This is a story of seven healthy cows that died, written especially for those who plan to imbibe during the holidays.

Last week "Booze Banisher Bob" Samardick, federal agent, raided the dairy farm of John Hanson, Sarpy county, arrested two men and seized two stills, liquor and mash.

"Don't take my mash," pleaded Hanson. "I promise I will use it only to feed my cows."

"I'll let you keep the mash, but don't feed it to the cattle, it isn't good for them," said Bob.

"It makes 'em fat," replied Hanson.

Today Hanson telephoned Bob that he was right, that seven fine cows had just died from eating the mash.

(United Press.)

MacDonald has the support of all branches of labor for the premiership if the king calls him. Something may be expected to happen immediately after parliament convenes in January.

MacDonald Will Accept Post As Prime Minister

(United Press.)

ELGIN, Eng., Dec. 22.—"I am prepared to take office as prime minister of Great Britain," Ramsey MacDonald declared in a speech at a labor party meeting here tonight, "because all members of our party are agreed that the country would benefit by the experience of having a labor government."

MacDonald has the support of all branches of labor for the premiership if the king calls him. Something mey be expected to happen immediately after parliament convenes in January.

"Labor believes," he said, "that in international affairs it would have more authority in seeking to establish conditions of peace and justice than any other government.

"Similarly, in national affairs, it would be able to suggest legislation more effectively than other parties."

Many Bandits Held By Coast Officers

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 22.—The arrest of five bandits here today makes a total of sixteen arrests in the campaign of the past two days against a gang of bandits and store thieves. In the raid today the police recovered more than $40,000 worth of loot and an arsenal of firearms and burglars tools.

The series of raids began Friday morning.

The big round-up resulted in the divulgence of plans for a daring $10,000 payroll holdup that was to be held in the heart of the downtown district.

LOAN ANNOUNCES HE WILL CONTEST FOR SENATORSHIP

Enter Lists Against Norris And Lieutenant Governor Johnson.

Adam McMullen Files As Republican Candidate For Governor.

Two current political prognostications became realities on Saturday when Adam McMullen of Beatrice filed as a republican primary candidate or governor and Charles H. Sloan of Geneva ex-congressman from the Fourth district, announced that he will seek the nomination for United States senator on that ticket.

Spirited contests for both offices are thus assured in the primary. Mr. Sloan's action is a challenge to Senator George W. Norris, whose friends claim to have inside information that he will probably run again, despite his repeated denials of such an intention. He was Lieutenant Governor Fred Johnson as an opponent, already filed, whether Norris gets it or not. For the governorship, Speaker A. N. Mathers had made his entry a week ahead of Mr. McMullen.

During the past week, friends of Norris have been busy arranging to get petitions signed up placing him in nomination. This movement is said to have the backing of Senator R. B. Howell, Norris's junior colleague. Bob Smith of Omaha was in Lincoln a few days ago to consult C. A. Sorenson and other friends of Norris about the matter. Smith is Howell's chief political lieutenant in Douglas county and in the republican state committee.

Former Norris Manager for Sloan.

But while friends of Norris have been busy in his interest, Sloan's boosters have not been allowing any grass to grow under their feet. Among those taking an active part in behalf of the Geneva man is Frank P. Corrick of Lincoln, who six years ago supported Norris against Sloan, when the two were rival candidates for the senatorship after Norris won in the primary Corrick and Frank Harrison together managed his campaign or re-election.

Petitions asking that Sloan's name be placed on the primary ballot are being circulated under the direction of Mr. Corrick and L. D. Richards of Fremont. These will shortly be filed with the secretary of state. Corrick and Richards were associated together in 1920 in behalf of Leonard Wood's presidential candidacy, the former being in charge of the Wood headquarters in Lincoln and the latter going as a delegate to the national convention.

Some bitterness has already developed in the senatorial fight, as Mr. Richards has told his friends that Norris is not a republican and that he will not support the senator in case he should be renominated.

Sloan's friends assert that he would have beaten Norris for the nomination in 1918 had it not been that Ross Hammond also got into the race and thus split the opposition vote in the middle.

Ex-Congressman Will Make Race.

While in Lincoln on Saturday, looking after some legal business, Mr. Sloan confirmed the report that he will try again for the senatorship.

"I have been receiving a great many suggestions, by letter and otherwise, from my friends urging me to be a candidate," he said. "I am also advised that petition blanks are being sent out and will be circulated, to have my name placed on the ballot. When these are filed, I shall accept the nomination."

The former congressman declined to make any further statement regarding the matter, but will issue one later.

He served in congress from 1911 to 1919, and since then has been practicing law and managing his extensive farm interests. His home is on a farm near Geneva. He is also interested with his brother, Frank W. Sloan, in the banking business.

Mr. Sloan was born at Monticello, Ia., and is a graduate of mes, Ia., state agricultural college. In his youth he was a teacher, and for three years he filled the position of superintendent of schools at Fairmon, beginning in 1884. He represented York and Fillmore counties as state senator in the legislature of 1895.

During his congressional career, Mr. Sloan introduced the bills providing for eradiction of hog cholera and bovine tuberculosis, which resulted in the first appropriations being made for governmental aid in those lines of work.

Oddie Recommends New Department

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Creation of a federal department of mines to supervise the coal industry, was advocated today by Senator Oddie, republican, of Nevada, chairman of the senate committee on mines. Oddie declared the proposed bureau should be authorized to investigate the coal industry and report to congress recommendations for legislation to prevent recurrent periods of paralysis.

STAR VAN MOVES MAN

Ford's Secretary Is Blamed For Bursting Of Presidential Bubble

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 22.—E. G. Leibold, secretary to Henry Ford, knew all about the Ford-for-president boom and for months was in formal conference with leaders of the movement, Robert R. Pointer, who called the ill-fated Ford-for-president conference here for December 12, charged today.

"If they want Ford for president, why don't they nominate him?" Liebold on one occasion asked, according to Pointer.

It was Liebold who told Pointer on December 6 to call off the nationwide Ford-for-president conference scheduled to begin here December 12, Pointer revealed. Leibold spoke for Ford when he vetoed the conference Pointer said.

As early as the summer of 1922, when the original Ford-for-president club was formed in Dearborn, Leibold was consulted by its founders in regard to various details of the organization, Pointer declared.

Last October a meeting of Ford boosters was held at West Wood Inn near here. The allied Ford-for president clubs movement was launched.

Arranged to Meet.

A group in the west, composing the so-called economic conference, had arranged, however, to meet in Omaha in November and to then and there nominate Henry Ford for president on a third ticket.

"My opinion, said Pointer, "was that it would be advisable for that organization to postpone any such action and for its delegates to come to Detroit December 12 and meet with representatives from all sections.

"Accordingly I went to Mr. Leibold's office and told him what I thought about the matter. I said that, if he had no objection, I would go out to Omaha, talk to the folks at the conference and try to persuade them to put off nominaing Mr. Ford until the Detroit meeting.

"Mr. Leibold approved of my going to Omaha. I succeeding in achieving my object.

"If I had not taken this course, there is no doubt that Mr. Ford would have been nominated at Omaha.

Belief Justified.

"I wouldn't have done what I did if I had not had the best of reason to believe that was acting with full authority. "My frequent talks with Mr. Leibold certainly justified me in that belief.

"When I saw Mr. Leibold in his office on the afternoon of December 6 and he informed me Mr. Ford did not want the conference to take place I turned to him and inquired:

"Why didn't you tell me that before you let me spend my money to go to Omaha?"

"'Oh, your money may not have been wasted after all,' Mr. Leibold replied," Pointer said.

"'Well, do you want me to tell these people that Mr. Ford has decided not to be a candidate for president?' Pointer asked.

"'Don't tell them that'," Pointer said Leibold replied.

"I heard nothing more from the Ford offices until Mr. Ford himself last Wednesday announced that he would not run and that he was for Coolidge."

NEBRASKA SCHOOL BUSINESS.

Louis Fallers of Syracuse was a caller at the college Monday.

Miss Lucile Tiehen has accepted a position in the game warden's office at the state house.

The N. S. B. faculty members enjoyed their annual Christmas party at the Beers-Hill-Gardner home, 740 South Eleventh street, Thursday evening.

Miss Gertrude and Naomi Goering departed for their home at Davenport, owa, Thursday night. Both are graduates of the Nebraska School of Business, and have been employed in Lincoln since completing their courses.

President Blakeslee has been absent from his office a portion of the week owing to an attack of sciatic rheumatism. However, he was sufficiently recovered by Saturday to leave in company with Mrs. Blakeslee, for Kearney, where they will spend Christmas with his mother and other relatives.

Mr. Bryant, Miss Gardner, and Mr. and Mrs. Blakeslee will attend the annual convention of the National Commercial Teachers' federation in Chicago, Dec. 26-29. While away, Mr. Blakeslee will also attend a conference of the American Association of Vocational Schools, of which he is the national secretary.

Miss Elsie Donnelly has been compelled to discontinue her school work for the present owing to a severe attack of appendicitis. She was operated on at a local hospital on Friday of last week, and had recovered sufficiently by Wednesday, to return to her home at Fullerton, Neb., accompanied by her father, who had come to Lincoln for that purpose.

An unusually pleasing program was carried out at a special Christmas convocation held in the assembly hall Wednesday afternoon. Dr. A. A. Brooks, of Trinity Methodist church, delivered a Christmas address; Miss Sarah Sheffield rendered a group of violin numbers and Oscar Bennett sang a solo. Each was accompanied on the piano by Harold Avery. An old-fashioned Christmas tree with candy and gifts created much merriment among the grown-up youngsters. The program was prepared by Miss Gardner and Mr. Jones, and the decorations were in charge of Messrs. Bryant and Thomas.

TO CLAIM HALF GOULD'S ESTATE

Divorced Wife Of American Millionaire Wants Share Of Wealth.

Barred By French Court From Using Former Husband's Name On Stage.

(International News Service.)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Edith Kelly Gould, divorced wife of Frank J Gould, American multimillionaire, announced in an exclusive interview with International News Service tonight that she intended to bring suit for half of her former husband's estate, which, she claims, amounts to $1,500,000.

"I am going to continue to use the name of Gould in England notwithstanding the Paris decision in favor of my husband's suit to prevent my using it," said Mrs. Gould.

"Whether I will do so in France is a question of the future. I have turned down several French contracts to appear in French theatres. in fact, I do not propose to appear there.

"I intend bringing an action against my former husband within the next few days. Under the French law I am entitled, as a divorcee, to claim half of my husband's estate. The case will be heard in the ersailles courts."

Gould won an action in the French courts to prevent his former wife from using his name in bill board advertisements after she returned to the stage.

GREATEST HERO MUSTERED OUT

Master Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, Singled Out By Pershing, Retired.

Killed Twenty Germans Single Handed In Argonne During World War.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, Ind., Dec. 22.—The army lost its greatest hero today.

Master Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, named by General Pershing out of 3,000 heroes, as the most conspicuous example of bravery beyond the call of duty, was retired with full military honors, while his comrades of the Fort passed in review before him.

With ten medals pinned to his breast representing the highest honors his own and allied countries could pay him, Woodfill stood rigidly at attention and heard himself mustered out of the army.

The ceremony ended twenty-two years of continuous service in the army during which he followed the flag in Alaska, the Philippines, on the Mexican border and in France.

It was Sergeant Woodfill, then Lieutenant Woodfill, commanding an infantry company, who on October 12, 1918, killed twenty Germans single handed as he led his company into the Argonne.

For this act, Woodfill was given the congressional medal of honor and a Montengrin decoration. It was this act which led General Pershing, in naming the bodyguard for the burial of the unknown soldier in Washington to pick Woodfill as a member of the bodyguard and as the outstanding American hero of the war.

Throughout the regimental parade today, Woodfill watched the marching lines of khaki with an expression in which regret seemed to be the dominating emotion.

"I feel I have performed my duty but I'm ready to go again if necessary," he said.

The bureau is able to show these documents to be authentic," Burns said. NEBRASKANS MAY JUDGE IN LONDON

Move On To Send Cattle Judging Team to Contest In English Capital.

Blue Hill Man Asks Governor To Sponsor Raising Necessary Expenses.

C. L. Westcott, superintendent of schools at Blue Hill, Neb., has written to Governor Bryan requesting him to use his influence in raising money to send the Webster county live stock judging team and its coach, County Agent H. R. Fausch, to a stock judging contest to be held at London, England, in the near future. The Webster county stock judging team consisting of three boys, won world honors at the International Live Stock judging contest recently held at Chicago.

Superintendent Westcott says in his letter to the governor that it will cost between three and four thousand dollars to send the team to London, but believes it would be to the interest of the state to finance the team.

Letter to Governor.

Following is the letter sent to Governor Bryan:

"Great honor has been brought upon the state of Nebraska which has given her not only nation-wide prominence but world-wide as well.

"County Agent H. R. Fausch of Webster county and his team, composed of Cecil Means of Red Cloud, Earl Portnier of Guide Rock and Alfred Summerfield of Blue Hill, have brought back world honors from the International Stock Judging contest recently held at Chicago, having previously won first honors at the Nebraska state fair, the Interstate fair at Sioux City, and the Royal stock show at Kansas City.

"A stock judging contest will soon be held at London. Nebraska must be represented Not to be represented at this time would be a deadly blow to the civic pride and the agricultural interests of not only our own state but the great middle west as well.

"It rests with Nebraska to finance this worthy cause, and furnish the funds necessary to send this excellent coach and his splendid team to the contest at London.

"The cost will run between $3,000 and $4,000. The First National bank of Blue Hill has consented to act as custodian to receive funds.

"Will you not use your influence as governor of this great agricultural state to have Nebraska as a commonwealth finance this cause or direct your efforts in the proper field for the raising of the amount?"

Reception for Team.

The people of Blue Hill and vicinity held a reception for the Webster county stock judging team last night at the high school auditorium.

The team consists of Cecil Means of Red Cloud, Earl Portnier of Guide Rock and Alfred Summerfeld of Blue Hill, coached by County Agent H. R. Fausch of Webster county. They were entertained at a 6 o'clock dinner at the home of Superintendent and Mrs. Westcott after which they adjourned to the high school, where the reception was held.

On account of the roads the crowd was not large, but was enthusiastic. The Blue Hill band gave a short concert. The high school sang songs and then gave each member of the team and Mr. Fausch three cheers.

Mr. Fausch gave a talk on the work—of the boys—their spirit of loyalty and co-operation throughout the contests.

Mr. Fausch then introduced each member of the team who spoke upon some phase of the stock shows held at the different places where they were contestants.

In an address following the talks by the boys of the team, Superintendent Westcott said:

States Highest Honors.

"Never before has Nebraska been awarded a world's honor of this kind.

"Never has an under college team brought back to Nebraska such honor and placed this great commonwealth in the front rank of all states and of the world as when this team brought back world honors from the International Stack show at Chicago.

"A great stock judging contest is soon to be held in London. Does not the coach and his team deserve to be sent by this state? Nebraska must be represented. After a team has brought back such splendid awards won on meritorious work, are we as a great agricultural state of the middle west not to respond?

"We have the boys—the team and the occasion—surely we will see them through.

"Trains have been chartered to tour the country Whole passenger service ships have been bought to play across the waters for occasions of far less importance than this.

"Are the agricultural interests of the great middle west—of Nebraska—and of Webster county, to be allowed to suffer as it will if we do not send this team to London?

"No yet. The cost will only be $3,000 or $4,000, to put this team across the waters.

"Nebraska should rise as one man, collect the funds and cable the news across the water: 'We are coming, London. Nebraska's World Champion Stock Judging team.'

"Huge sums of money have been spent yearly to get athletic teams to our borders. The sum asked for this team is but paltry in comparison. Is there an association or organization that will sponsor this move? Perhaps the state may do it.

"So far to date Mr. Fausch and the team have footed the major part of the expenses that had been incurred.

"The First National bank of Blue Hill will act as custodian for the collection of funds.

"Citizens of Nebraska, we must show them beyond the water that this great commonwealth in the heart of the agricultural interests of the United Staes, can not be beaten

"This team must have a chance."

CHRISTMAS BUYING SETS NEW RECORD

American People Have Spent More For Gifts Than Ever Before.

Treasury Officials Interpret Buying As Sure Prosperity Sign.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—If this this Christmas is not the cheeriest and happiest in the country's history, it will not be because of lack of generosity among the American people. They have spent more money for gifts than ever before.

Reports reaching the postoffice department and the federal reserve board indicated that the Christmas buying which reached its peak from the Atlantic to the Pacific during the last twenty-four hours, surpassed all previous years.

Officials of the treasury department, on the basis of financial advices to the federal reserve board, interpret the unprecedented spending as a certain indication of general prosperity. Banks reported large withdrawals during the month, but before this outpouring of money got underway deposits had broken all records, especially in the savings banks.

Every nation in the world contributed something to America's national Christmas tree, commerce department officials pointed out tonight.

Imports Total Big.

The great quantities of imports that have been brought from far corners of the earth to satisfy the demands of American consumers have passed into their hands with the result that many retail establishments report their stocks exhausted. It is unofficially estimated that Christmas will cost the American people at least five billions of dollars.

Telegraphic reports to the post office department indicated an average increase of 16 per cent in amount of first class mail handled, and an increase of 18 per cent in parcel post.

The increases range from 5 to 50 per cent in the thirty-seven widely scattered cities which report on the volume of their business as compared with December, 1922.

Some of the increases reported were Dallas, Tex., 20 per cent in first class and 27.5 percent in parcel post mail; Kansas City, 5 and 19 per cent; Louisville, 10 and 18.5 per cent; Chicago 8.3 and 5.7 per cent; Milwaukee 12 and 18 per cent; St. Louis, 8 and 18 per cent.

"Story Telling" - Evangelism Now Being Practised

(United Press.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"Story telling evangelism," a new form of teaching the gospel, was revealed here today by Miss Elinor Millar, of Moody Bible Institute.

With it she announced, she will carry teachings of the Bible to society's drawing rooms and into the salons of large ocean liners.

Already Miss Millar has travelled twice around the world teaching the Bible on ocean liners and in large cities.

"This method of evangelism reminds me of my fishing days in New Zealand," she said. "A dog fish would come to a bit of meat, but the trout would only respond to a pretty fly.

"Thus flowers, a pretty room, a little music and a cup of tea bring women of the world to truths I want to tell," she said.

"Once they are interested, society women become ardent listeners," she said. "I do not believe in choking the Bible down the people's throats. I always find an opportune time to give my little message.

"I chat with them and when they have heard my message through little stories, they like it."

SLOAN ANNOUNCES HE WILL CONTEST FOR SENATORSHIP

Enter Lists Against Norris And Lieutenant Governor Johnson.

Adam McMullen Files As Republican Candidate For Governor.

Two current politcal prognostications became realities on Saturday when Adam McMullen of Beatrice filed as a republican primary candidate or governor and Charles H. Sloan of Geneva ex-congressman from the Fourth district, annouaced that he will seek the nomination for United States senator on that ticket.

Spirited contests for both offices are thus assured in the primary. Mr. Sloan's action is a challenge to Senator George W. Norris, whose friends claim to have inside information that he will probably run again, despite his repeated denials of such an intention. He was Lieutenant Governor Fred Johnson as an opponent, already filed, whether Norris gets it or not. For the governorship, Speaker A. N. Mathers had made his entry a week ahead of Mr. McMullen.

During the past week, friends of Norris have been busy arranging to get petitions signed up placing him in nomination. This movement is said to have the backing of Senator R. B. Howell, Norris's junior colleague. Bob Smith of Omaha was in Lincoln a few days ago to consult C. A. Sorenson and other friends of Norris about the matter. Smith is Howell's chief politcal lieutenant in Douglas county and in the republican state committee.

Former Norris Manager for Sloan.

But while friends of Norris have been busy in his interest, Sloan's boosters have not been allowing any grass to grow under their feet. Among those taking an active part in behalf of the Geneva man is Frank P. Corrick of Lincoln, who six years ago supported Norris against Sloan, when the two were rival candidates for the senatorship after Norris won in the primary Corrick and Frank Harrison together managed his campaign or re-election.

Petitions asking that Sloan's name be placed on the primary ballot are being circulated under the direction of Mr. Corrick and L. D. Richards of Fremont. These will shortly be filed with the secretary of state. Corrick and Richards were associated together in 1920 in behalf of Leonard Wood's presidential candidacy, the former being in charge of the Wood headquarters in Lincoln and the latter going as a delegate to the national convention.

Some bitterness has already developed in the senatorial fight, as Mr. Richards has told his friends that Norris is not a republican and that he will not support the senator in case he should be renominated.

Sloan's friends assert that he would have beaten Norris for the nomination in 1918 had it not been that Ross Hammond also got into the race and thus split the opposition vote in the middle.

Ex-Congressman Will Make Race.

While in Lincoln on Saturday, looking after some legal business, Mr. Sloan confirmed the report that he will try again for the senatorship.

"I have been receiving a great many suggestions, by letter and otherwise, from my friends urging me to be a candidate," he said. "I am also advised that petition blanks are being sent out and will be circulated, to have my name placed on the ballot. When these are filed, I shall accept the nomination."

The former congressman declined to make any further statement regarding the matter, but will issue one later.

He served in congress from 1911 to 1919, and since then has been practicing law and managing his extensive farm interests. His home is on a farm near Geneva. He is also interested with his brother, Frank W. Sloan, in the banking business.

Mr. Sloan was born at Monticello, Ia., and is a graduate of mes, Ia., state agricultural college. In his youth he was a teacher, and for three years he filled the position of superintendent of schools at Fairmon, beginning in 1884. He represented York and Fillmore counties as state senator in the legislature of 1895.

During his congressional career, Mr. Sloan introduced the bills providing for eradiction of hog cholera and bovine tuberculosis, which resulted in the first appropriations being made for governmental aid in those lines of work.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Creation of a federal department of mines to supervise the coal industry, was advocated today by Senator Oddie, republican, of Nevada, chairman of the senate committee on mines. Ford's Secretary Is Blamed For Bursting Of Presidential Bubble

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 22.—E. G. Leibold, secretary to Henry Ford, knew all about the Ford-for-president boom and for months was in formal conference with leaders of the movement, Robert R. Pointer, who called the ill-fated Ford-for-president conference here for December 12, charged today.

"If they want Ford for president, why don't they nominate him?" Liebold on one occasion asked, according to Pointer.

It was Liebold who told Pointer on December 6 to call off the nationwide Ford-for-president conference scheduled to begin here December 12, Pointer revealed. Leibold spoke for Ford when he vetoed the conference Pointer said.

As early as the summer of 1922, when the original Ford-for-president club was formed in Dearborn, Leibold was consulted by its founders in regard to various details of the organization, Pointer declared.

Last October a meeting of Ford boosters was held at West Wood Inn near here. The allied Ford-for president clubs movement was launched.

Arranged to Meet.

A group in the west, composing the so-called economic conference, had arranged, however, to meet in Omaha in November and to then and there nominate Henry Ford for president on a third ticket.

"My opinion, said Pointer, "was that it would be advisable for that organization to postpone any such action and for its delegates to come to Detroit December 12 and meet with representatives from all sections.

"Accordingly I went to Mr. Leibold's office and told him what I thought about the matter. I said that, if he had no objection, I would go out to Omaha, talk to the folks at the conference and try to persuade them to put off nominaing Mr. Ford until the Detroit meeting.

"Mr. Leibold approved of my going to Omaha. I succeeding in achieving my object.

"If I had not taken this course, there is no doubt that Mr. Ford would have been nominated at Omaha.

Belief Justified.

"I wouldn't have done what I did if I had not had the best of reason to believe that was acting with full authority. My frequent talks with Mr. Leibold certainly justified me in that belief.

"When I saw Mr. Leibold in his office on the afternoon of December 6 and he informed me Mr. Ford did not want the conference to take place I turned to him and inquired:

"Why didn't you tell me that before you let me spend my money to go to Omaha?"

"'Oh, your money may not have been wasted after all,' Mr. Leibold replied," Pointer said.

"'Well, do you want me to tell these people that Mr. Ford has decided not to be a candidate for president?' Pointer asked.

"'Don't tell them that'," Pointer said Leibold replied.

"I heard nothing more from the Ford offices until Mr. Ford himself last Wednesday announced that he would not run and that he was for Coolidge."

ST. ELIZABETH'S SPECIAL SERVICE

The same musical program will be repeated at 8:15 Christmas morning, with one exception. NEBRASKA SCHOOL BUSINESS.

Louis Fallers of Syracuse was a caller at the college Monday.

Miss Lucile Tiehen has accepted a position in the game warden's office at the state house.

The N. S. B. faculty members enjoyed their annual Christmas party at the Beers-Hill-Gardner home, 740 South Eleventh street, Thursday evening.

Miss Gertrude and Naomi Goering departed for their home at Davenport, owa, Thursday night. Both are graduates of the Nebraska School of Business, and have been employed in Lincoln since completing their courses.

President Blakeslee has been absent from his office a portion of the week owing to an attack of sciatic rheumatism. However, he was sufficiently recovered by Saturday to leave in company with Mrs. Blakeslee, for Kearney, where they will spend Christmas with his mother and other relatives.

Mr. Bryant, Miss Gardner, and Mr. and Mrs. Blakeslee will attend the annual convention of the National Commercial Teachers' federation in Chicago, Dec. 26-29. While away, Mr. Blakeslee will also attend a conference of the American Association of Vocational Schools, of which he is the national secretary.

Miss Elsie Donnelly has been compelled to discontinue her school work for the present owing to a severe attack of appendicitis. She was operated on at a local hospital on Friday of last week, and had recovered sufficiently by Wednesday, to return to her home at Fullerton, Neb., accompanied by her father, who had come to Lincoln for that purpose.

An unusually pleasing program was carried out at a special Christmas convocation held in the assembly hall Wednesday afternoon. Dr. A. A. Brooks, of Trinity Methodist church, delivered a Christmas address; Miss Sarah Sheffield rendered a group of violin numbers and Oscar Bennett sang a solo. Each was accompanied on the piano by Harold Avery. An old-fashioned Christmas tree with candy and gifts created much merriment among the grown-up youngsters. The program was prepared by Miss Gardner and Mr. Jones, and the decorations were in charge of Messrs. Bryant and Thomas.

TO CLAIM HALF GOULD'S ESTATE

Divorced Wife Of American Millionaire Wants Share Of Wealth.

Barred By French Court From Using Former Husband's Name On Stage.

(International News Service.)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Edith Kelly Gould, divorced wife of Frank J Gould, American multimillionaire, announced in an exclusive interview with International News Service tonight that she intended to bring suit for half of her former husband's estate, which, she claims, amounts to $1,500,000.

"I am going to continue to use the name of Gould in England notwithstanding the Paris decision in favor of my husband's suit to prevent my using it," said Mrs. Gould.

"Whether I will do so in France is a question of the future. I have turned down several French contracts to appear in French theatres. in fact, I do not propose to appear there.

"I intend bringing an action against my former husband within the next few days. Under the French law I am entitled, as a divorcee, to claim half of my husband's estate. The case will be heard in the ersailles courts.'

Gould won an action in the French courts to prevent his former wife from using his name in bill board advertisements after she returned to the stage.

GREATEST HERO MUSTERED OUT

Master Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, Singled Out By Pershing, Retired.

Killed Twenty Germans Single Handed In Argonne During World War.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, Ind., Dec. 22.—The army lost its greatest hero today.

Master Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, named by General Pershing out of 3,000 heroes, as the most conspicuous example of bravery beyond the call of duty, was retired with full military honors, while his comrades of the Fort passed in review before him.

With ten medals pinned to his breast representing the highest honors his own and allied countries could pay him, Woodfill stood rigidly at attention and heard himself mustered out of the army.

The ceremony ended twenty-two years of continuous service in the army during which he followed the flag in Alaska, the Philippines, on the Mexican border and in France.

It was Sergeant Woodfill, then Lieutenant Woodfill, commanding an infantry company, who on October 12, 1918, killed twenty Germans single handed as he led his company into the Argonne.

For this act, Woodfill was given the congressional medal of honor and a Montengrin decoration. It was this act which led General Pershing, in naming the bodyguard for the burial of the unknown soldier in Washington to pick Woodfill as a member of the bodyguard and as the outstanding American hero of the war.

Throughout the regimental parade today, Woodfill watched the marching lines of khaki with an expression in which regret seemed to be the dominating emotion.

"I feel I have performed my duty but I'm ready to go again if necessary," he said.

NEBRASKANS MAY JUDGE IN LONDON

Move On To Send Cattle Judging Team to Contest In English Capital.

Blue Hill Man Asks Governor To Sponsor Raising Necessary Expenses.

C. L. Westcott, superintendent of schools at Blue Hill, Neb., has written to Governor Bryan requesting him to use his influence in raising money to send the Webster county live stock judging team and its coach, County Agent H. R. Fausch, to a stock judging contest to be held at London, England, in the near future. The Webster county stock judging team consisting of three boys, won world honors at the International Live Stock judging contest recently held at Chicago.

Superintendent Westcott says in his letter to the governor that it will cost between three and four thousand dollars to send the team to London, but believes it would be to the interest of the state to finance the team.

Letter to Governor.

Following is the letter sent to Governor Bryan:

"Great honor has been brought upon the state of Nebraska which has given her not only nation-wide prominence but world-wide as well.

"County Agent H. R. Fausch of Webster county and his team, composed of Cecil Means of Red Cloud, Earl Portnier of Guide Rock and Alfred Summerfield of Blue Hill, have brought back world honors from the International Stock Judging contest recently held at Chicago, having previously won first honors at the Nebraska state fair, the Interstate fair at Sioux City, and the Royal stock show at Kansas City.

"A stock judging contest will soon be held at London. Nebraska must be represented. Not to be represented at this time would be a deadly blow to the civic pride and the agricultural interests of not only our own state but the great middle west as well.

"It rests with Nebraska to finance this worthy cause, and furnish the funds necessary to send this excellent coach and his splendid team to the contest at London.

"The cost will run between $3,000 and $4,000. The First National bank of Blue Hill has consented to act as custodian to receive funds.

"Will you not use your influence as governor of this great agricultural state to have Nebraska as a commonwealth finance this cause or direct your efforts in the proper field for the raising of the amount?"

Reception for Team.

The people of Blue Hill and vicinity held a reception for the Webster county stock judging team last night at the high school auditorium.

The team consists of Cecil Means of Red Cloud, Earl Portnier of Guide Rock and Alfred Summerfeld of Blue Hill, coached by County Agent H. R. Fausch of Webster county. They were entertained at a 6 o'clock dinner at the home of Superintendent and Mrs. Westcott after which they adourned to the high school, where the reception was held.

On account of the roads the crowd was was not large, but was enthusiastic. The Blue Hill band gave a short concert. The high school sang songs and then gave each member of the team and Mr. Fausch three cheers.

Mr. Fausch gave a talk on the work—of the boys—their spirit of loyalty and co-operation throughout the contests.

Mr. Fausch then introduced each member of the team who spoke upon some phase of the stock shows held at the different places where they were contestants.

In an address following the talks by the boys of the team, Superintendent Westcott said:

States Highest Honors.

"Never before has Nebraska been awarded a world's honor of this kind.

"Never has an under college team brought back to Nebraska such honor and placed this great commonwealth in the front rank of all states and of the world as when this team brought back world honors from the International Stack show at Chicago.

"A great stock judging contest is soon to be held in London. Does not the coach and his team deserve to be sent by this state? Nebraska must be represented. After a team has brought back such splendid awards won on meritorious work, are we as a great agricultural state of the middle west not to respond?

"We have the boys—the team and the occasion—surely we will see them through.

"Trains have been chartered to tour the country. Whole passenger service ships have been bought to play across the waters for occasions of far less importance than this.

"Are the agricultural interests of the great middle west—of Nebraska—and of Webster county, to be allowed to suffer as it will if we do not send this team to London?

"Not yet. The cost will only be $3,000 or $4,000, to put this team across the waters.

"Nebraska should rise as one man, collect the funds and cable the news across the water: 'We are coming, London. Nebraska's World Champion Stock Judging team.'

"Huge sums of money have been spent yearly to get athletic teams to our borders. The sum asked for this team is but paltry in comparison. Is there an association or organization that will sponsor this move? Perhaps the state may do it.

"So far to date Mr. Fausch and the team have footed the major part of the expenses that had been incurred.

"'The First National bank of Blue Hill will act as custodian for the collection of funds.

"Citizens of Nebraska, we must show them beyond the water that this great commonwealth in the heart of the agricultural interests of the United States, can not be beaten.

"This team must have a chance."

CHRISTMAS BUYING SETS NEW RECORD

American People Have Spent More For Gifts Than Ever Before.

Treasury Officials Interpret Buying As Sure Prosperity Sign.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—If this this Christmas is not the cheeriest and happiest in the country's history, it will not be because of lack of generosity among the American people. They have spent more money for gifts than ever before.

Reports reaching the postoffice department and the federal reserve board indicated that the Christmas buying which reached its peak from the Atlantic to the Pacific during the last twenty-four hours, surpassed all previous years.

Officials of the treasury departmnt, on the basis of financial advices to the federal reserve board, interpret the unprecedented spending as a certain indication of general prosperity. Banks reported large withdrawals during the month, but before this outpouring of money got underway deposits had broken all rebords, especially in the savings banks.

Every nation in the world contributed something to America's national Christmas tree, commerce department officials pointed out tonight.

Imports Total Big.

The great quantities of imports that have been brought from far corners of the earth to satisfy the demands of American consumers have passed into their hands with the result that many retail establishments report their stocks exhausted. It is unofficially estimated that Christmas will cost the American people at least five billions of dollars.

Telegraphic reports to the post office department indicated an average increase of 16 per cent in amount of first class mail handled, and an increase of 18 per cent in parcel post.

The increases range from 5 to 50 per cent in the thirty-seven widely scattered cities which report on the volume of their business as compared with December, 1922.

Some of the increases reported were Dallas, Tex., 20 per cent in first class and 27.5 percent in parcel post mail; Kansas City, 5 and 19 per cent; Louisville, 10 and 18.5 per cent; Chicago 8.3 and 5.7 per cent; Milwaukee 12 and 18 per cent; St. Louis, 8 and 18 per cent.

MOVE TO NEW OFFICE.

OAKLAND, Calif., Dec. 22.—The Oakland Post-Enquirer today moved into new quarters in a building purchased for the newspaper establishment. The entire building, three stories and basement, together with a three-story annex to house the press departments, will be occupied by the newspaper.

"Story Telling" - Evangelism Now Being Practised

(United Press.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—"Story telling evangelism," a new form of teaching the gospel, was revealed here today by Miss Elinor Millar, of Moody Bible institute.

With it she announced, she will carry teachings of the Bible to society's drawing rooms and into the salons of large ocean liners.

Already Miss Millar has travelled twice around the world teaching the Bible on ocean liners and in large cities.

"This method of evangelism reminds me of my fishing days in New Zealand," she said. "A dog fish would come to a bit of meat, but the trout would only respond to a pretty fly.

"Thus flowers, a pretty room, a little music and a cup of tea bring women of the world to truths I want to tell," she said.

"Once they are interested, society women become ardent listeners," she said. "I do not believe in choking the Bible down the people's throats. I always find an opportune time to give my little message.

Senator Reed Not Running For Office

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 22.—Senator Jim Reed of Missouri, is not running for anything.

The Missouri democrat, back home for the holidays, denied tonight he was seeking the democratic presidential nomination.

Reports appearing in a newspaper that a supreme court judge in New York resigned to manage a campaign for Reed for president were dismissed by Reed as insolence.

John Barrymore Plays Very Interesting Hamlet in Realistic Shakespeare Style.

Lionel Invades New York With Italian Play "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

BY BRETT PAGE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The Barrymore brothers now hold the center of the stage in New York. John Barrymore has returned to Broadway with his very interesting Hamlet, and Lionel Barrymore is here again in a David Belasco production of an Italian play, called "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." "Hamlet" is for a limited time only preparatory to a tour, but Lionel Barrymore's play may be regarded as a fixture for some time to come.

Tom Cushing and Mr. Belasco have made the adapation of the slight play and the latter has mounted the play and created the atmosphere in that realistic style which one has come to associate with his direction. There is a storm in the last act which keeps you wondering whether you will be able to get a taxicab when you come out of the theater. For an evening's entertainment there must be the rare combination of play and players, and these we have in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," albeit with the honors going to the star and his associates more than to the play.

Lionel Barrymore has a part which through successive plays and stories has been crystallized into a formula: that of the pantaloon who goes to the doctor for his melancholy and is told to "go see Pantaloon." In this case the poor clown is in love with Simonetta, the young woman whom he had taken under his protection when at the age of eight she has lost her father, a slack wire performer. They had endured the hardships of the Italian provinces together, and together had climbed to the head of their profession. He is Flik, the great clown, and she is a singer in vaudeville with a grand opera voice.

A Melancholy Malady.

The day Simbnetta puts her hair up, Flik's manner toward her changes. He has fallen in love. The girl's affection does not contemplate and cannot realize such a development of their years of companionship. Flik falls into a melancholy which is punctuated by outbursts of tears. For his malady, which he can scarcely understand, he consults a nerve specialist. In the anteroom he finds Luigi Ravelli, a wealthy and dissolute young Venetian, who has uncontrollable outburst of causeless laughter. In his life there have been too many women; he is world-weary and cynical. Thinking that each can help cure the other, they strike upastrange friendship—with Simonetta accompanying them on their outings.

The inevitable happens. Ravelli falls in love with the young singer. Flik loses his melancholy, nerving himself to a proposal. Ravelli loses his senseless, mocking laughter, when he realizes that with Simonetta he can find happiness. On the last night of the season he brings her a wonderful string of pearls. It is the night Flik has picked for his avowal. The clown finds the pearls in Simonetta's dressing room and, misinterpreting the motive because of Ravelli's reputation, he denounces the young man. There is a powerful scene between the two which is brought to an end when Ravelli says that he wishes to marry Simonetta.

Tragedy of Love Unreturned.

Simonetta, too, has misunderstood Ravelli's advances, and for a time it seems as if Flik has won. But while he has gone to make her excuses for not going to the dance given in the theater at the close of the performance Ravelli makes his intentions plain, and poor Flik returns with the story of his love trembling on his lips only to find that Simonetta has something to tell him instead of waiting to hear what he has to say. The third act is disappointing. Simonetta learns the truth and out of pity comes to offer her hand to Flik, pretending that she does not really love Ravelli. He sees through the ruse and dismisses her. Then in his wild grief he kills himself.

Mr. Barrymore does some very fine acting, and he is ably seconded by Ian Keith as Ravelli. Their great conflict in the second act is a notable scene. Irene Fenwick (Mrs. Barrymore) plays Simonetta acceptably; but one cannot help but think that the part calls for an actress who has more of youth and less of sophistication in the playing of the part. Henry Robert, Sidney Toler, and Rose Morrison were prominent in the star's support.

A Sure-Fire Comedy.

"Meet the Wife" is a sure-fire stuff. It was written by Lynn Starling and produced by Stewart and French, the two responsible for "The Torch Bearers" of last season. In its satire it suggests that comedy success, but it stands on its own in its fresh, keen development of character and situation.

"Meet the Wife" is much better than its title, which suggests the rough-and-ready, the blunt, bombastic and [illegible]. Its shrewd author and the almost perfect cast of players give it piquancy and charm and [illegible] its sharp comic exaggeration. [illegible] as one watches the running [illegible] of point after point one wonders [illegible] how much credit should go to the author and how much to [illegible] it is [illegible] time and [illegible] moments [illegible] realize that the curtain [illegible] not on a stage set [illegible] home.

The [illegible] of Mary Boland is an [illegible] a constant delight. She [illegible] Mrs. Gertrude Lennox, the [illegible] about whom most of the [illegible] middle age, gushing, [illegible] pseudo-intellectual, dominating [illegible] pursuit of culture. [illegible] a gorgeous comic character.

Love, Life and Laughter

[illegible]

The [illegible] explains, first gently and [illegible] with vigorous humor, how Mrs. Gertrude Lennox invites Philip Lord, the celebrated English novelist, to [illegible] town to address the literary club which she presides, and to stay at her home. Mrs. Lennox has a daughter, exquisitely acted by Eleanor Griffith, whom she is trying to marry off to a thin young man with asthma and an excellent family background. The daughter hates him. The eminent novelist solves this minor complication, but establishes a major one of his own. This latter phase of the play furnishes most of the fun, but to disclose it here would be unfair.

Ernest Lawford is beautifully suave as the novelist and Charles Dalton gives an excellent portrayal of Harvey Lennox, the bewildered business man husband of Gushing Gertrude. Clifton Webb scores a triumph as the young man with the asthma and the "background," and Humphrey Bogart is acceptable as a young newspaperman who has fallen in love with the daughter of the house. Altogether it is one of the smoothest performances I have seen this season.

A New Mystery Play.

If it is unfair to tell the story of a play such as "Meet the Wife," it is a thousand times less fair to disclose the plot of a mystery story. Such a plot is now agitating playgoers who are able to get tickets to "In the Next Room," a play by Eleanor Robson and Harriet Ford from a novel by Burton Stevenson. If you liked "The Bat" and "The Cat and the Canary" you will like "In the Next Room." It has such thrills that murmurs of warning to the harrassed actors go over the audience in waves, and there are also occasional shrieks which even sophistication cannot repress.

Philip Vantine, a colector of objects of art, has purchased a boule shipped to his home on Washington Square. No sooner does it arrive than he has strange callers, visitors who display unmistakably interest in the cabinet. A man left in the room alone with it is found dead on the floor a few minutes later. A second death with the same mysterious marks upon the victim brings the first act to an end. The mystery deepens and so does the terror during the two acts which follow.

The play is capitally acted. As in "Meet the Wife" one can well believe that one is looking through the wall into the drawing room of the art collector. The characters act as persons would under such circumstances, and the direction is excellent. Prominent in the cast are Wright Kramer, Mary Kennedy, Arthur Albertson, Merle Maddern and Claude King.

Otis Skinner in Gotham.

Otis Skinner has brought "Sancho Panza" to New York. The remarkable sagacious squire of Don Quixote has some picturesque adventure, but on the whole the play would better serve as the book for a light opera. There aer elements of extravaganza which one finds it hard to associate with fine romantic actor. There are, too, moments of real beauty in the play. Sancho Panza is made governor of Barataria, and as such he dispenses justice and sets things to rights generally. There is a salty humor about him that is refreshing, but the story which the play tells is too thin. A word must be said for Dappie, the patient ass. This animal, as sagacious as his master, is played by Robert Rosaire. Without saying a word—for the beast is not related to Balaam's mount—he makes one of the big hits of the evening.

With a laudable ambition to do the unusual and to give America the chance to see a production which has over 800 performances to its credit abroad, Richard Herndon has brought over the Swedish Ballet. While the dancers are Swedish and are said to enjoy a subsidy from the Swedish government, the ballots themselves are distinctively French. French of a new school, that of the younger men who are striving to find something different, something more advanced, something better. One can truthfully say that they have produced something different. Only those who are futurists, cubists, and followers of equally advanced "isms" can maintain that these men have brought to the ballet something better than delightfully artificial work of the old ballet and the charmingly picturesque freedom which we owe to the school of Isadora Duncan.

Ballets and Satires.

The futility of life for the most of us is sardonically depicted in a ballet called "The Skating Rink." Dull, phlegmatic figures skate round and round in an endles routine of boredom. A madman—a poet—bursts into the assemblage. The women are interested in him. He seizes one and makes off with her. This creates only a momentary diversion, and soon the endles circling of the figures shows that life itself has not ben affected by his visit.

"The Newlyweds on the Eiffel Tower" was a humorous satire upon the bourgeoisie. Its music was piquant—when it could be understood. "Man and His Desire" was the most ambitious ballet on the program. Man, robbed of his personality by Night and Slumber, is bewildered in a tropical forest at night. There are the queer sounds of the tropical forest as he dances. Queer shapes come out of the shadows. At last Desire appears, and with her Man leaves the stage. The music is by Darius Milhaud, one of that advanced French group known as the "Six." Other members of this devoted band of futurists also contributed to the other ballets. "Man and His Desire" is too long. Man is depicted by Jean Berlin, but the character is static and therefore monotonous. A ballet based on Swedish folk dances deserved the applause it received.

French Musical Play.

"One Kiss" is a musical play which in Paris was a success as "Ta Bouche." Clare Kummer made the American book, but was not able to equal in interest the imported music. It is a pleasant evening's entertainment but is not the smashing hit that "Good Morning, Dearie" was. I mention this former Broadway success because many of the players who were in that cast are seen in this prodcction. Louise Groody and Oscar Shaw are prominent. Ada Lewis and Jack Hazard also have important roles.

A play which seems set for a Broadway run is "Time." This is a play of middle-class life, with many reminiscent touches from other plays. However, the combination of incidents is a happy one, and the audience enjoyed it. A middle-aged man falls in love with his wife's best friend. They are likely to go to extremes, but a very wise grandmother sets things right. Marie Curtis played this part capitally. There are two young lovers who are the lever which the grandmother uses in her scheme—her granddaughter and the son of the "other woman."

'WAR' PRISONERS GIVEN FREEDOM

Twenty-Seven Men Pardoned By Coolidge Depart From Leavenworth.

Anxious Friends And Relatives Ready To Greet Them At Gates.

(United Press.)

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 22.—Twenty-seven "political prisoners" pardoned by President Coolidge were released from Leavenworth penitentiary tonight.

Warrants for release of the men arrived from Washington early today and the prisoners were given their freedom as fast as they could be checked out.

Anxious relatives and friends of the war time convicts were here to greet the men when they were given their freedom.

Anticipating the orders from Washington, most of the prisoners had reservations prepared for them on out-going trains tonight and plans made to take them to their homes by Christmas.

Three of the prisoners who received commutation of sentences from the president, were held for immigration authorities.

These prisoners, Jacob Tori, Harry Lloyd and Burt Lorton, will be held until the immigration officers have investigated their cases further.

Very little ceremony attended the prisoner's liberation. They walked out stoically and hastened to the railroad station.

For the most part, they left in groups, exchanging an occasional word of comment. Their farewells to executives of the prison will be difficult, they agreed.

Convicted on common grounds, they had developed a close friendship while serving their long sentences.

A. Fransik, F. J. Gallagher, C. J. Bourg, Alexander C. Curnos, Charles H. McKinnon, James Rowan, James P. Thompson, Elmer Anderson, Harry Brewer, Robert Connellan, Roy P. Connor, Pet De Bernardi, Mortimer Downing, Franke Elliott, John Graves, Henry Hammer, Wm. Hood, Harry Gray, Chris A. Luder, Phil McLaughlin, George O'Connell, John Porthas, Edward Quigley, James Quinlan, Myron Sprague, George P. Votter, and Vincent Santilli were released.

There are more than eight cases of measles in Crete, while east, south and southeast there are so many cases that the attendance at country schools has been greatly cut down.

The girls' and boys' glee clubs of the Crete high school gave a vesper service of Christmas carols at the high school auditorium last Sunday afternoon, under the direction of Mrs. Nellie Payne Simpson, director of music in the public schools. Others taking part in the service were Prof. Charles V. Kettering of Doane college and Mrs. Maud Campbell of University Place.

On New Year's day Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Russell will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home on West Thirteenth street. Their son, Will, of Lodgepole, sent a large live turkey for use at the wedding dinner. A number of close friends, beside the relatives, will help them celebrate the day. Mr. and Mrs. Russell came to Crete forty-two years ago and have resided in and around this city since that time.

Former Senator Wants Damages For Accusations

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 22.—Charging he was falsely arrested, William R. Thompson, ex-United States senator from Kansas, demanded $150,000 damages today from the Monarch Transer and Storage company, in a suit filed in circuit court here.

Thompson charged in his petition that the storage company had made false accusations which resulted in his indictment recently by a grand jury on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

The charges against Thompson grew out of a check he gave the transfer concern for moving his household good to Tulsa, Okla.

The company claimed he stopped payment on the check. Thompson was overcharged he said, and there was no intention to defraud the company and motion to quash the indictment was sustained by the court.

John Barrymore Plays Very Interesting Hamlet in Realistic Shakespeare Style.

Lionel Invades New York With Italian Play "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

BY BRETT PAGE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The Barrymore brothers new hold the center of the stage in New York. John Barrymore has returned to Broadway with his very interesting Hamlet, and Lionel Barrymore is here again in a David Belasco production of an Italian play, called 'Laugh, Clown, Laugh." Tragedy of Love Unreturned.

Simonetta, too, has misunderstood Ravelli's advances, and for a time it seems as if Flik has won. But while he has gone to make her excuses for not going to the dance given in the theater at the close of the performance Ravelli makes his intentions plain, and poor Flik returns with the story of his love trembling on his lips only to find that Simonetta has something to tel him instead of waiting to hear what he has to say. In fact as one watches the cunning scoring of point after point one wonders just how much credit should go to the author and how much to the players. This play may not be litterature, but it is life; time and again in the quiet, casual moments there is the feeling that the curtain has been lifted not on a stage set, but on a room in a home.

The acting of Mary Boland is an achievement, a constant delight. She plays Mrs. Gertrude Lennox, the character about whom most of the approaching middle age, gushing, bromidic, pseudo-intellectual, domineering, in desperate pursuit of culture. It is a gorgeous comic characterization.

Love, Life and Laughter

A play which seems set for a Broadway run is "Time." This is a play of middle-class life, with many reminiscent touches from other plays However, the combination of incidents is a happy one, and the audience enjoyed it. A middle-aged man falls in love with his wife's best friend. They are likely to go to extremes, but a very wise grandmother sets things right. Marie Curtis played this part capitally. There are two young lovers who are the lever which the grandmother uses in her scheme—her granddaughter and the son of the "other woman."

'WAR' PRISONERS GIVEN FREEDOM

Twenty-Seven Men Pardoned By Coolidge Depart From Leavenworth.

Anxious Friends And Relatives Ready To Greet Them At Gates.

(United Press.)

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 22.—Twenty-seven "political prisoners" pardoned by President Coolidge were released from Leavenworth penitentiary tonight.

Warrants for release of the men arrived from Washington early today and the prisoners were given their freedom as fast as they could be checked out.

Anxious relatives and friends of the war time convicts were here to greet the men when they were given their freedom.

Anticipating the orders from Washington, most of the prisoners had reservations prepared for them on out-going trains tonight and plans made to take them to their homes by Christmas.

Three of the prisoners who received commutation of sentences from the president, were held for immigration authorities.

These prisoners, Jacob Tori, Harry Lloyd and Burt Lorton, will be held until the immigration officers have investigated their cases further.

Very little ceremony attended the prisoner's liberation. They walked out stoically and hastened to the railroad station.

For the most part, they left in groups, exchanging an occasional word of comment. Their farewells to executives of the prison will be difficult, they agreed.

Convicted on common grounds, they had developed a close friendship while serving their long sentences.

A. Fransik, F. J. Gallagher, C. J. Bourg, Alexander C. Curnos, Charles H. McKinnon, James Rowan, James P. Thompson, Elmer Anderson, Harry Brewer, Robert Connellan, Roy P. Connor, Pet De Bernardi, Mortimer Downing, Franke Elliott, John Graves, Henry Hammer, Wm. Hood, Harry Gray, Chris A. Luder, Phil McLaughlin, George O'Connell, John Potthas, Edward Quigley, James Quinlan, Myron Sprague, George P. Votter, and Vincent Santilli were released.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell came to Crete forty-two years ago nad have resided in and around this city since that time.

Former Senator Wants Damages For Accusations

KANSAS CITY, o., Dec. 22.—Charging he was falsely arrested, William R. Thompson, ex-United States senator from Kansas, demanded $150,000 damages today from the Monarch Transer and Storage company, in a suit filed in circuit court here.

Thompson charged in his petition that the storage company had made false accusations which resulted in his indictment recently by a grand jury on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

The charges against Thompson grew out of a check he gave the transfer concern for moving his household good to Tulsa, Okla.

The company claimed he stopped payment on the check. Thompson was overcharged he said, and there was no intention to defraud the company and motion to quash the indictment was sustained by the court.

More Than Forty Million Tires to Be Sold This Year

Speaking of recent developments in the tire manufacturing field, Seneca G. Lewis, vice president-general manager of the Pennsylvania Rubber company of America, Inc., says:

"There is no chance for anyone to convince us that as manufacturers of automobile tires we are associated with a decadent industry. Conservative estimates place the number of tires to be sold during 1923 at comfortably in excess of 40 million, and the ruber industry as a whole has now reached approximately the billion dollar mark in years sales. Tire making is youngest among our great manufacturing activities, with the possible exception of motor cars, a necessarily contemporaneous development. With scores of other lines, it has suffered on account of overdevelopment of potential productive facilities, but it is safe to say that no big business has, within the last two years, revived its own past and discounted its future in a more dispassionate or unprejudiced manner.

"Since early August we have, while increasing sales, reduced selling overhead to the extent of over 20 per cent through consolidation of outside organization and intensified effort, and this is no more than is being accomplished by those in our industry who by virtue of the quality of their product and their treatment of the trade may be considered as representative of a great and growing industry devoted to economical transportation for the Nation.

The great American public is a good sport and a game loser, but it does not fall twice for the same form of imposition. The "fade out" of the nodescript tires made for the socalled bargain house type of merchandising and tire manufacturing promotions without integrity of plans or product has, to a great degree, already taken place.

"The time of the individual tire has arrived. The public ultimately seeks and aligns itself with merit. This is the history of every branch of manufacture, and fair earnings are in sight for those tire makers who, while maintaining both quality and their faith with the public, eliminate useless demoralizing expense in the selling of what must now be considered an every day necessity.

"In connection with standardization of methods tending toward betterment, in our estimation nothing could have been more fortunate than the selection of W. O. Rutherford as president of the Ruber Association of America. As vice president of the B. F. Goodrich company, and one who has risen through all departments of selling, r Rutherford has been equipped by experience for his present post, and fortunately, he is endowed with the ability to reconcile conflicting opinion through friendly leadership."

Gray Motor Is Now Being Shown On Europe's Hills

Having annexed the world's economy record of 33.8 miles per gallon of gas on its famous run from San Francisco to New York, the Gray car is now establishing hill climbing records in Europe. Word to this effect was received by Gray Motor officials this week from their European representative, C. A. Robertson, headquarters in Paris, ccording to M. Kucera, local distributor.

Mr. Robertson in telling of the Gray performance in France had, in part, the following to say, "Yesterday we made a demonstration of the Gray for a prospective customer, a French dentist Ho was driven in the car out along the road to Versailles on which there are two formidable hills, that of St. Cloud and further on that known as Cote de Picardy, both so long and steep that the local cars do not often make them on high. Our man with his customer went out to the base of these hills and waited for some French made cars to come along, and then modestly suggested that they try a little race on high speed to the top of the hills. This they did for most of the afternoon, all being quite excited with the sport of it, since the little Gray car won out in every instance until demonstrator and customer began to think themselves invincible. They easily won out over a number of well known European makes. Needless to say, the prospective customer came into town and purchased a Gray.

"As to gasoline consumption, our demonstration also showed that the Grays are maintaining the reputation of this wonder car, evidenced by its trials in America.

"Business conditions are gradually improving on this side and I look forward to a big sale of American cars in these countries in the near future. The Gray car seems to be just the type of car needed here, and its success and acceptance on this side is assured."

Chance to Test Your Headlights

Statistics show that 90 per cent of the automobile accidents last year were due to poor headlights. The lighting divison of the automotive engineers has planned to establish a standard system of automobile head lights. They have constructed the auto Balopticlan display cabinet which demonstrates the difference between good and poor lights. This machine is loaned to one distributor in each territory throughout the United States.

The Parkhurst Auto Electrical company have this on display in their window and ask that you avail yourself of this opportunity to get the correct information about head lights.

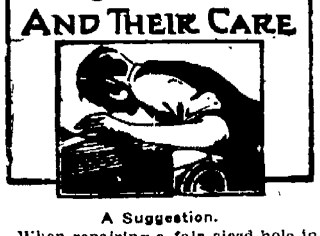
MOTORS AND THEIR CARE



A Suggestion.

When repairing a fair-siezd hole in an inner tube, it is best to place a patch on both sides, and then vulcanize.

Care of the "Spare."

A spare tire on the running board or on the back of thec car requires air just as regularly as the tires on the wheels.

Electrical Lore.

To increase the flow of current from the generator to the battery, tighten the adjustment of the fan belt which drives the generator.

Concerning the Battery.

A battery in a car should be securely anchored in the carrier. If the box is too large the battery can be made stationary by adding wooden wedges around the side.

Many Arguments Against Speeding.

When the Enigne is Overheated.

Care should be taken, when the engine is hot, not to pour cold water into the radiator too rapirly. When cold water strikes the overheated cylinders, it is apt to crack them, due to the contraction which takes place

Requisites for Cold Weather.

For the comfort of a motorist and his passengers during the winter months, a car should be euipped with anti-skid chains, heater, robe, wind shield cleaner, a good pair of glove, motormeter, and a primer on the dash to make starting easy.

Parking Tips.

It eases the steering process when worming in and out of a parking space to keep the car moving, if only just creeping, when tugging at the wheel. Advance the gas a little when starting to back into the tight parkspace. It may save a stall.

Equipment for Washing Cars.

The equipment needed to properly wash a car qshould include two clean soft sponges, two good-sized pails, one or two sofjt chamois skins, some flannel cloths, a cake of pure castile soap, clear running water, a hose without a nozzle on it, and a soft duster.

Importance of Perfect Control.

In the electrical system, nuts and screws that hold the connections in place should be clean and be screwed tight, so that there is no possibility of their working loose, either through jarring of the car on the road or the swaying of the wires themselves.

In adjusting brakes, both bands should be made to act with equal force.

Always wipe off the top of the storage battery before unscrewing the caps to fill with distilled water.

Insufficient inflation of a tire may cause separation of the tread rubber from the carcass or body of the casing.

Do not ignore road signs, as each one is intended to signal a message of caution, and not merely hung up as a decoration.

It is always well to carry a selection of rubber tubing with which to make a temporary repair should a pipe break on the road.

When stopping, always apply the brakes gradually, except in emergency. By following this rule, it will save many dollars in repair bills.

Leakage at the stuffing box may usually be stopped by tightening the nut around the pump shaft, but persistent leakage calls for repairs.

With loose pistons or improperly fitting piston rings, it is posible for the gasoline to pass down into the crank-case before the explosion.

Consumption of Cylinder Oil.

Always keep careful track of your oil consumption, as it means better efficiency of your engine. If you find you are using an excessive amount, it indicates that there is an extensive leak or that the engine is sucking it up into the combustion space.

Cleaners and How to Use Them.

The most common solvents of grease and caked oil are gasoline and kerosene. One of the best methods of using these cleaning fluids is to have a tank or large kettle in which is suspended two sieves with fine mesh, one completely submerged in the fluid and the other suspended far enough above so as to allow drainage. The parts to be cleaned are put into the sieve, which is suspended in the gasoline or kerosene and allowed to remain until the grease is dissolved, when they are dumped into the sieve suspended above so as to drain until perfectly dry. Hot soda water (washing soda solution) is also a very effective solvent of grease and may be used in the same manner in the same equipment. Where soda or lye is used the parts should be cleaned and well oiled before replacing, as they are liable to rust.

Tips to Save "Gas."

Well-inflated tires.

Proper carburetor adjustment.

Brakes in correct working order

Lubicate all working parts to assure smooth running.

Disengage the clutch whenever possible, and coast.

Obtain sufficient momentum when approaching a heavy grade to carry the car a considerable distance up the grade beore making it necessary to change gears.

Excessive Oil Bad For Engine.

Too much oil in a car will cause the engine to smoke; it soots up the plugs, making the engine miss explosions; it accumulates in the head of the cylinders, causing pre-ignition and knocking; it makes the valves leak and lose compression and power; and makes the engine overheat, which causes a further loss of power. Bluish-white smoke pouring from the exhaust pipe is a symptom of trouble which is approaching slowly but inevitably.

Preparing for Cold Weather.

Before any anti-freeze solution is placed in the radiator, the circulating system should be inspected for leaks and repairs made, if necessary. It is usually a good plan to replace the hose connections at this time of the year. Do not use anti-freeze compounds containing calcium chloride or other similar salts, as they corrode the inside of the radiator. The only satisfactory liquid is alcohol and water. During the winter, the fan belt can be loosened. This will reduce the flow of air through the radiator and will allow the motor to run warmer than it otherwise would.

When Changing Crankcase Oil.

The practice of using kerosene as a flush when cleaning the oil out of a crankcase is not advised It has been found that kerosene becomes trapped in pockets in the crankcase and impairs the lubricating qualities of the fresh oil when drained in the reservoir.

Save Time and Temper.

When headlight rims have become stuck or rusted it is possible to remove them by placing a square screwdriver on top of the left rivet and then hitting squarely above the pin with a hammer. This serves to start the rim turning, and the rest is easy.

Suggestions for Care of Car.

The average motorist, no matter how efficient he is in his driving, is habitually careless in his neglect of his automobile. Operators neglect to oil frictional parts; they make repairs with pieces of rope or wire instead of replacing a broken casting, and pay little attention to their machines as long as they run. The following hints are intended for the proper care of the car:

Gears should not grind or rattle

The clutch should never grab or slip.

Keep the car sheltered from the elements.

Adjust loose or worn parts as soon as discovered.

Understand an automobile before attempting to run it. Clean it up after using it.

Never race the engine, especially when stoping or starting the car, shifting gears, or standing idle.

Never let the engine get overheated. A late spark, a lean mixture, an obstructed cooling system, or an overload may cause excessive heating.

Keep the engine running smoothly, if it develops a limp or gallop, there is a cause. The ignition may be at fault, or the carburetor, or the engine itself, which means either the valves or the pistons and rings.

Watch the oil closely. Remember that anything can be overdone. Too much oil in the crank case causes oil pumping, loss of power, smoke and foul plugs. Too much on the magneto may cause failure of ignition. Too much on exposed bearings collects dust and helps wear out the parts. Parts which move very slowly or intermittently may require no oil at all.

Finally, the car must have intelligent adjustment, cleaning and, if necessary, repairing between the time of closing one season and opening the next.

Sticking bolts and nuts can be prevented by applying a little graphite.

Occasional weak spark and misfiring is often caused by oil finding its way to the platinum points.

Brass polish should never be used on nickel trimmings, as abrasive particles in the polish scratch the surface.

BRITISH GOLFERS TO STAY AT HOME

Englishmen Not Likely to Bid for Recapture Of Walker Cup.

BY LUTHER A. HUSTON.
(International News Service.)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Unless a considerable number of British golfers can be induced to break the seals on their respective bankrolls, the chance of England sending a team to America to compete for the Walker cup next year are not much brighter than Howard Carter's chances of finding King Tut alive in his 3,000-year-old tomb.

It is frankly admitted sending a Walker cup team to the United States is purely a question of pounds, shillings and pence—and that at present there is not a sixpence in sight. The depressing part of it from a British standpoint, is that the folks who could provide the money apparently do not care whether a team goes to America or not. Their attitude seems to be that if "America wants the bally old cup, let her keep it."

The last time England sent a team to play for the cup those in charge of the enterprise took a chance that British golfers would rally round and dig up the shekels when the bills began to come in. But the boys failed dismally to rally, and the committee had to scramble to raise a deficit of about $4,000. The committee swallowed its medicine, but it does not intend to ask for a second dose.

The United States Golf association has formally invited the British to send a team to compete for the Walker cup in 1924. It was reported this invitation was declined, but this is not true. The British simply deferred decision pending a canvass of the financial situation. If the money can be raised a team will be sent.

In order to avoid depending upon the generosity of individual members of the various golf clubs, it has been suggested that an English golf union be formed, composed of all golf clubs which desired recognition by a central authority. These clubs would be compelled to contribute an annual subscription to a "management fund" out of which the expenses of such events as the Walker cup tournament would be paid. Clubs failing to pay this subscription would be denied permission to compete in championship tournaments of any sort.

The union also, it is planned, would undertake a campaign on broad lines to develop golfing talent. Youngsters who show promise, but not financially able to give the necessary attention to their development would be taken in hand by the union and given facilities for perfecting their skill.

If a Walker cup team is selected to go to the United States it is certain that Roger Wethered, the British amateur champion, and Cyril Tolley will be members, and likewise E. W. Holderness, the former amateur champion. For the other places the choice would seem to lie between W. L. Hope, the Scotchman, who was defeated by Max Marston in the amateur championship tournament of 1923; Charles Hodgson, a redoubtable shooter from Yorkshire; O C. Bristowe, reserve man on the team that visited the United States in 1923; Major C. O. Hezlet and Jack Wilson, the ex-Scottish champion. It might be that W. L. Hartley and Geoffrey MacCallum would receive consideration, but these two are youngsters who probably need more experience before being thrust into strenuous international competition.

More Than Forty Million Tires to Be Sold This Year

Speaking of recent developments in the tire manufacturing field, Seneca G. Lewis, vice president-general manager of the Pennsylvania Rubber company of America, Inc., says:

"There is no chance for anyone to convince us that as manufacturers of automobile tires we are associated with a decadent industry. Conservative estimates place the number of tires to be sold during 1923 at comfortably in excess of 40 million, and the ruber industry as a whole has now reached approximately the billion dollar mark in years sales. Tire making is youngest among our great manufacturing activities, with the possible exception of motor cars, a necessarily contemporaneous development. With scores of other lines, it has suffered on account of overdevelopment of potential productive facilities, but it is safe to say that no big business has, within the last two years, revived its own past and discounted its future in a more dispassionate or unprejudiced manner.

"Since early August we have, while increasing sales, reduced selling overhead to the extent of over 20 per cent through consolidation of outside organization and intensified effort, and this is no more than is being accomplished by those in our industry who by virtue of the quality of their product and their treatment of the trade may be considered as representative of a great and growing industry devoted to economical transportation for the Nation.

The great American public is a good sport and a game loser, but it does not fall twice for the same form of imposition. The "fade out" of the nodescript tires made for the so-called bargain house type of merchandising and tire manufacturing promotions without integrity of plans or product has, to a great degree, already taken place.

"The time of the individual tire has arrived. The public ultimately seeks and aligns itself with merit. This is the history of every branch of manufacture, and fair earnings are in sight for those tire makers who, while maintaining both quality and their faith with the public, eliminate useless demoralizing expense in the selling of what must now be considered an every day necessity.

"In connection with standardization of methods tending toward betterment, in our estimation nothing could have been more fortunate than the selection of W. O. Rutherford as president of the Ruber Association of America. As vice president of the B. F. Goodrich company, and one who has risen through all departments of selling, r. Rutherford has been equipped by experience for his present post, and fortunately, he is endowed with the ability to reconcile conflicting opinion through friendly leadership."

Gray Motor Is Now Being Shown On Europe's Hills

Having annexed the world's economy record of 33.8 miles per gallon of gas on its famous run from San Francisco to New York, the Gray car is now establishing hill climbing records in Europe. Word to this effect was received by Gray Motor officials this week from their European representative, C. A. Robertson, headquarters in Paris, ccording to M. Kucera, local distributor.

Mr. Robertson in telling of the Gray performance in France had, in part, the following to say, "Yesterday we made a demonstration of the Gray for a prospective customer, a French dentist. He was driven in the car out along the road to Versailles on which there are two formidable hills, that of St. Cloud and further on that known as Cote de Picardy, both so long and steep that the local cars do not often make them on high. Our man with his customer went out to the base of these hills and waited for some French made cars to come along, and then modestly suggested that they try a little race on high speed to the top of the hills. This they did for most of the afternoon, all being quite excited with the sport of it, since the little Gray car won out in every instance until demonstrator and customer began to think themselves invincible. They easily won out over a number of well known European makes. Needless to say, the prospective customer came into town and purchased a Gray.

"As to gasoline consumption, our demonstration also showed that the Grays are maintaining the reputation of this wonder car, evidenced by its trials in America.

"Business conditions are gradually improving on this side and I look forward to a big sale of American cars in these countries in the near future. The Gray car seems to be just the type of car needed here, and its success and acceptance on this side is assured."

Chance to Test Your Headlights

Statistics show that 90 per cent of the automobile accidents last year were due to poor headlights. The lighting divison of the automotive engineers has planned to establish a standard system of automobile head lights. They have constructed the auto Baloptician display cabinet which demonstrates the difference between good and poor lights. This machine is loaned to one distributor in each territory throughout the United States.

The Parkhurst Auto Electrical company have this on display in their window and ask that you avail yourself of this opportunity to get the correct information about head lights.

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

A Suggestion.

When repairing a fair-siezd hole in an inner tube, it is best to place a patch on both sides, and then vulcanize.

Care of the "Spare."

A spare tire on the running board or on the back of thec car requires air just as regularly as the tires on the wheels.

Electrical Lore.

To increase the flow of current from the generator to the battery, tighten the adjustment of the fan belt which drives the generator.

Concerning the Battery.

A battery in a car should be securely anchored in the carrier. If the box is too large the battery can be made stationary by adding wooden wedges around the side.

Many Arguments Against Speeding.

Running at high speed means increased fuel consumption, greater strain on the car and occupants, including the driver, premature tire destruction, increased danger of accidents, and results in lower mileage.

When the Enigne is Overheated.

Care should be taken, when the engine is hot, not to pour cold water into the radiator too rapirly. When cold water strikes the overheated cylinders, it is apt to crack them, due to the contraction which takes place

Requisites for Cold Weather.

For the comfort of a motorist and his passengers during the winter months, a car should be euipped with anti-skid chains, heater, robe, wind shield cleaner, a good pair of glove, motormeter, and a primer on the dash to make starting easy.

Parking Tips.

It eases the steering process when worming in and out of a parking space to keep the car moving, if only just creeping, when tugging at the wheel. Advance the gas a little when starting to back into the tight park-space. It may save a stall.

Equipment for Washing Cars.

The equipment needed to properly wash a car qshould include two clean soft sponges, two good-sized pails, one or two sofjt chamois skins, some flannel cloths, a cake of pure castile soap, clear running water, a hose without a nozzle on it, and a soft duster.

Importance of Perfect Control.

In the electrical system, nuts and screws that hold the connections in place should be clean and be screwed tight, so that there is no possibility of their working loose, either through jarring of the car on the road or the swaying of the wires themselves.

In adjusting brakes, both bands should be made to act with equal force.

Always wipe off the top of the storage battery before unscrewing the caps to fill with distilled water.

Insufficient inflation of a tire may cause separation of the tread rubber from the carcass or body of the casing.

Do not ignore road signs, as each one is intended to signal a message of caution, and not merely hung up as a decoration.

It is always well to carry a selection of rubber tubing with which to make a temporary repair should a pipe break on the road.

When stopping, always apply the brakes gradually, except in emergency. By following this rule, it will save many dollars in repair bills.

Leakage at the stuffing box may usually be stopped by tightening the nut around the pump shaft, but persistent leakage calls for repairs.

With loose pistons or improperly fitting piston rings, it is posible for the gasoline to pass down into the crank-case before the explosion.

Consumption of Cylinder Oil.

Always keep careful track of your oil consumption, as it means better efficiency of your engine. If you find you are using an excessive amount, it indicates that there is an extensive leak or that the engine is sucking it up into the combustion space.

Cleaners and How to Use Them.

The most common solvents of grease and caked oil are gasoline and kerosene. One of the best methods of using these cleaning fluids is to have a tank or large kettle in which is suspended two sieves with fine mesh, one completely submerged in the fluid and the other suspended far enough above so as to allow drainage. The parts to be cleaned are put into the sieve, which is suspended in the gasoline or kerosene and allowed to remain until the grease is dissolved, when they are dumped into the sieve suspended above so as to drain until perfectly dry. Hot soda water (washing soda solution) is also a very effective solvent of grease and may be used in the same manner in the same equipment. Where soda or lye is used the parts should be cleaned and well oiled before replacing, as they are liable to rust.

Tips to Save "Gas."

Well-inflated tires.

Proper carburetor adjustment.

Brakes in correct working order.

Lubicate all working parts to assure smooth running.

Disengage the clutch whenever possible, and coast.

Obtain sufficient momentum when approaching a heavy grade to carry the car a considerable distance up the grade beore making it necessary to change gears.

Excessive Oil Bad For Engine.

Too much oil in a car will cause the engine to smoke; it soots up the plugs, making the engine miss explosions; it accumulates in the head of the cylinders, causing pre-ignition and knocking; it makes the valves leak and lose compression and power; and makes the engine overheat, which causes a further loss of power. Bluish-white smoke pouring from the exhaust pipe is a symptom of trouble which is approaching slowly but inevitably.

Preparing for Cold Weather.

Before any anti-freeze solution is placed in the radiator, the circulating system should be inspected for leaks and repairs made, if necessary. It is usually a good plan to replace the hose connections at this time of the year. Do not use anti-freeze compounds containing calcium chloride or other similar salts, as they corrode the inside of the radiator. The only satisfactory liquid is alcohol and water. During the winter, the fan belt can be loosened. This will reduce the flow of air through the radiator and will allow the motor to run warmer than it otherwise would.

When Changing Crankcase Oil.

The practice of using kerosene as a flush when cleaning the oil out of a crankcase is not advised. It has been found that kerosene becomes trapped in pockets in the crankcase and impairs the lubricating qualities of the fresh oil when drained in the reservoir.

Save Time and Temper.

When headlight rims have become stuck or rusted it is possible to remove them by placing a square screwdriver on top of the left rivet and then hitting squarely above the pin with a hammer. This serves to start the rim turning, and the rest is easy.

Suggestions for Care of Car.

The average motorist, no matter how efficient he is in his driving, is habitually careless in his neglect of his automobile. Operators neglect to oil frictional parts; they make repairs with pieces of rope or wire instead of replacing a broken casting, and pay little attention to their machines as long as they run. The following hints are intended for the proper care of the car:

Gears should not grind or rattle.

The clutch should never grab or slip.

Keep the car sheltered from the elements.

Adjust loose or worn parts as soon as discovered.

Understand an automobile before attempting to run it. Clean it up after using it.

Never race the engine, especially when stopipng or starting the car, shifting gears, or standing idle.

Never let the engine get overheated. A late spark, a lean mixture, an obstructed cooling system, or an overload may cause excessive heating.

Keep the engine running smoothly, if it develops a limp or gallop, there is a cause. The ignition may be at fault, or the carburetor, or the engine itself, which means either the valves or the pistons and rings.

Watch the oil closely. Remember that anything can be overdone. Too much oil in the crank case causes oil pumping, loss of power, smoke and foul plugs. Too much on the magneto may cause failure of ignition. Too much on exposed bearings collects dust and helps wear out the parts. Parts which move very slowly or intermittently may require no oil at all.

Finally, the car must have intelligent adjustment, cleaning and, if necessary, repairing between the time of closing one season and opening the next.

Sticking bolts and nuts can be prevented by applying a little graphite.

Occasional weak spark and misfiring is often caused by oil finding its way to the platinum points.

Brass polish should never be used on nickel trimmings, as abrasive particles in the polish scratch the surface.

BRITISH GOLFERS TO STAY AT HOME

Englishmen Not Likely to Bid for Recapture Of Walker Cup.

BY LUTHER A. HUSTON.

(International News Service.)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Unless a considerable number of British golfers can be induced to break the seals on their respective bankrolls, the chance of England sending a team to America to compete for the Walker cup next year are not much brighter than Howard Carter's chances of finding King Tut alive in his 3,000-year-old tomb.

It is frankly admitted sending a Walker cup team to the United States is purely a question of pounds, shillings and pence—and that at present there is not a sixpence in sight. The depressing part of it from a British standpoint, is that the folks who could provide the money apparently do not care whether a team goes to America or not. Their attitude seems to be that if "America wants the bally old cup, let her keep it."

The last time England sent a team to play for the cup those in charge of the enterprise took a chance that British golfers would rally round and dig up the shekels when the bills began to come in. But the boys failed dismally to rally, and the committee had to scramble to raise a deficit of about $4,000. The committee swallowed its medicine, but it does not intend to ask for a second dose.

The United States Golf association has formally invited the British to send a team to compete for the Walker cup in 1924. It was reported this invitation was declined, but this is not true. The British simply deferred decision pending a canvass of the financial situation. If the money can be raised a team will be sent.

In order to avoid depending upon the generosity of individual members of the various golf clubs, it has been suggested that an English golf union be formed, composed of all golf clubs which desire recognition by a central authority. These clubs would be compelled to contribute an annual subscription to a "management fund" out of which the expenses of such events as the Walker cup tournament would be paid. Clubs failing to pay this subscription would be denied permission to compete in championship tournaments of any sort.

The union also, it is planned, would undertake a campaign on broad lines to develop golfing talent. Youngsters who show promise, but not financially able to give the necessary attention to their development would be taken in hand by the union and given facilities for perfecting their skill.

If a Walker cup team is selected to go to the United States it is certain that Roger Wethered, the British amateur champion, and Cyril Tolley will be members, and likewise E. W. Holderness, the former amateur champion. For the other places the choice would seem to lie between W. L. Hope, the Scotchman, who was defeated by Max Marston in the amateur championship tournament of 1923; Charles Hodgson, a redoubtable shooter from Yorkshire; O. C. Bristowe, reserve man on the team that visited the United States in 1922; Major C. O. Hezlet and Jack Wilson, the ex-Scottish champion. It is thought that W. L. Hartley and Geoffrey MacCallum would receive consideration, but these two are youngsters who probably need more experience before being thrust into strenuous international competition.

Titles Changed Rapidly In Thrilling Year of Mitten Whirling

GLOVE PASTIME ENJOYED A BOOM IN YEAR OF '23

String of Champions Saw Their Titles Pass to Other Brows; Dempsey vs. Firpo Outstanding Battle.

The closing year of 1923 has been an interesting one and a thrilling one in many respects in the sport world. But to the boxing game must go the honor of furnishing the most thrills.

The Yankees and Giants played true to form and repeated in baseball. The winning of the world's series by the Yanks was not unexpected.

Bill Tilden held sway in tennis, as was predicted. There was one big surprise in golf—the winning of the national open title by Bobby Jones, perennial seeker.

But in boxing upsets occurred every fortnight for a time. Champions were left strown around the ring in careless fashion. The jeweled crowns, emblematic of titles, bounced from head to head.

Two Feather Kings.

The featherweight class alone saw two champions pass. Johnny Kilbane, after an eleven-year reign, went down before the wicked punches of Eugene Criqui, French flash. A few weeks later Johnny Dundee, old in real years and ring years, won the title from Criqui.

Johnny Wilson, timid holder of the middleweight title, lost that crown to Harry Greb.

Jimmy Wilde, veteran world's flyweight champ, was knocked into oblivion by Pancho Illa, little brown man from the Philippines.

Battling Siki, light heavyweight champion of the world by virtue of his knockout victory over Georges Carpentier, laughed at tradition and everything else and met Mike McTigue in Dublin, Ireland, on St. Patrick's Day and got what every Irishmen believed he would get—an eleven-second sock on the button.

Windmill Is Stopped.

And there were other upsets, though of lesser importance. Gene Tunney, former holder of the American light-heavyweight title, got it back by licking the windmill expert, Harry Greb.

Frankie Genaro met Pancho Villa—before Pancho was world's flyweight champ—and won the American flyweight title from Pancho, which later left Genaro in the unique position of having licked the man who held the greater of the two flyweight titles.

Johnny Dundee was the proud holder of the New York-created title of junior lightweight champion until he met Jack Bernstein early in the summer. Then Mr. Bernstein relieved him of it. He won it back the other night.

But the event that stands out more prominently than any of these crown-crashing affairs was the feat of Luis Firpo—call him what you will—in knocking Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, plumb out of the ring in their jungle melee.

Not An Accident.

The fact that Firpo had rocked the champ before that indicated that this bear slap he gave the Manassa Mauler was no accidental swipe.

And if allowed to assume the role of prophet, one might readily predict that 1924 will be almost as hectic a year. Dundee is about through as a fighter. Fate was kind to him after snubbing him for some 12 years.

Johnny Wilson's already booked to meet Harry Greb in a return battle in the hope of regaining his crown. And both fighters are such poor excuses for champions that no one can tell which will prove the worse when they meet.

Pancho Villa is young, full of vigor, and a careful, heady fighter. None of the little boys, outside Genaro, can handle him.

Bantam Crown Dangles.

Joe Lynch, several times bantam champion, may lose his title once more if some up and doing lad catches Joseph on an off night.

Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, believes the longer he stays out of the ring the longer he will keep his crown. But if he does get into action he will have a tough row to hoe.

McTigue, light-heavy king, could lose his crown to any one of two or three light-heavies, including Georges Carpentier.

Jack Dempsey and Benny Leonard still seem to rule their respective roosts unchallenged. Benny, however, is much overweight and will live himself out of his class—if he hasn't done so yet. He can well afford to retire undefeated—as one of the greatest lightweights the game has known.

Local Bowlers In Tournament

Lincoln bowlers are planning a city handicap tourney to be rolled on the Lincoln alleys, December 26 to 31, inclusive. Handicaps will range from 150 to 175 pins and the tourney is open to all local bowlers. Singles, doubles, five-man and all-events are scheduled on the five-day program. Most of Lincoln's league teams have entered in the competition.

STANFORD PLOTS DEFEAT OF BEARS

Pop Warner's Outfit Hopes to Pull Berkeley From Its Lofty Perch.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 22.—Coach Andy Kerr will turn over to Glenn Warner when he comes to Stanford from Pittsburgh next year, all but four of the eleven which started against the California Bears in their last encounter. These are evenly distributed between the backfield and the line. Bob Cravens and Dick Faville will be lost from the forward wall, while from the secondary line will go Captain Scotchy Campbell and Norman Cleveland. Kerr has several first-rate substitutes with which to fill in these vacancies and will no doubt, with Warner, be able to find strong material from the membership of the freshman squad, which this year defeated the California first-year men by a 12 to 0 scohe—the first Stanford freshman victory since 1908.

Among the reserves of this year's squad Fred Ludeke and Fred Loomis, both tackles, will be missing next season. Both varsity tackles, Johnson and Shipkey, however, will have another year.

TEARNEY TAKES RAP AT LINCOLN

Head of Western Suggests His League Is Asked to Do Too Much.

But Is Frank to Admit That Lincoln Would Be Fine Fit Into Circuit.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

President Al R. Tearney of the Western league is tossing cold water on the aspirations of Lincoln to regain membership in the Tearney loop. Secretary Whitten of Lincoln's Chamber of Commerce recently indited letters of invitation to President Tearney, Lee Kayser of Des Moines and James Crawford, members of a special committee named at a recent league pow-wow in Chicago, urging them to come to Lincoln for an investigation of this city's availability to inherit the Sioux City club, which is about to be transferred to a more desirable ball town.

Mr. Keyser, interviewed in Des Moines by The Star's correspondent, spoke favorably of Lincoln and Mr. Crawford, head of the Tulsa club, replied yesterday to Secretary Whitten, stating that the league committee is planning to show up in Lincoln early in January.

The Western league's president, however, doesn't speak of Lincoln as encouragingly as his committee associates. In fact, Prexy Tearney appears to be ice-cold—so far as Lincoln is concerned.

Tearney Turns On Hose.

In response to a message forwarded yesterday by The Star in which the executive head of the Western league was requested to announce the date his committee probably could come to Lincoln, President Tearney "turned on the hose" in the following fashion:

"CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 22.—Sports Editor Star, Lincoln, Neb.—Do not see what can be accomplished by committee unless there are local people interested financially. As I see the situation, it is necessary to bring outside capital, a ball club and franchise, as well as pay local men a prohibitive rental — all this with absolutely no assurances of assistance. Lincoln would be wonderful in our circuit, but steps must be taken there first. Christmas greetings to my Lincoln friends.

"A. R. TEARNEY."

Still Have Right to Hope.

Regardless of the icy blast from the direction of the Western league president, Lincoln fans decline to abandon hope that this city yet will be the choice of the Tearney loop in relocating the Sioux City club. No action by Lincoln can be taken until after the league committee has visited this city and presented a definite proposition. The Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations undoubtedly stand ready to appoint a joint committee to receive the Western league representatives and give consideration to any offer the committee may care to make. Acceptance or rejection, of course, are details which must await the committee's visit. Possibly President Tearney may be more mellow after he and his associates have given Lincoln the "once over."

Forced to Mark Time.

From the standpoint of geographical location, interest in baseball and population, Lincoln has everything to commend itself to Mr. Tearney's league. Another possibility is that President Tearney's message is merely a feeler—he would like to have some manifestation of Lincoln's enthusiasm before his committee goes on the road in quest of Sioux City's successor. The showdown will come at an early date. Club President Crawford of Tulsa has announced that the committee will be here early in January and that means the league president will be one of the visiting party. Until then, Lincoln fans can only mark time.

State Leaguers Willing.

Fear that the Nebraska State league, in which Lincoln men have held a franchise during the past two years, might stand on its baseball rights and resist the promotion of the capital city to the Western league, appears to be groundless. Secretary C. E. Jackman of the Grand Island State leaguers was a Lincoln visitor Saturday, calling at The Star office to suggest that the Nebraska league undoubtedly would be better off if Lincoln were not a member of the State loop.

"It is my conviction," the Grand Island man said, "that we could land not less than three desirable Nebraska towns, enlarging to an eight-club circuit, the moment announcement is made that Lincoln is to get out of our league. These particular towns have the feeling that Lincoln does not belong in the State league, so they have stayed out. So far as Grand Island is concerned, we will vote in a minute to let Lincoln transfer to another circuit."

HELPS HIMSELF TO MERRY GIGGLE

Firpo Has Only Smiles For the Parasites Who Tried To Trap Him.

Argentine Husky Doing His Own Managing; Able to Keep All He Earns.

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — Luis Angel Firpo is disliked and hated more by a certain group within the shadow of the prize ring than any gladiator in knuckle-bouncing history.

All of which worries Luis just about as much as would a scheduled bout with Pancho Villa.

The South American came to these shores less than two years ago unknown, unheralded, scoffed at when he asked for matches, jeered at by the "smart managers." No fighter ever made his debut under conditions more discouraging than this "Wild Bull" from Argentine.

History records the fact that Firpo, firm in the faith in himself, undaunted by rebuffs, continued striving for the chance to make true his long dreamed dreams of greatness in the boxing world. And, in the end, he was offered a fight at $100—and took it.

Then the Story of Hate.

He won—but failed to convince that he was really great. He was given another chance—and again was he triumphant. He made his third bid for glory in another bout of his own making—and once more was his triumph spectacular.

And then—well, this is where begins the story of hate.

Firpo's name sparkled from newspapers, his grim visage frowned out upon the sportive world. He became the enigma of the prize ring. Was he a potential champion — or just a false alarm? No one knew. But sport promoters around the country were quite willing to find out—and pay Firpo for his displays.

Besieged by Parasites.

Of a sudden, Firpo found himself besieged by men who call themselves "fight managers"—and are called "parasites" and much else, who know much of what there is to know about affairs in the fistcuffing world. Each and every one wanted to manage him.

But Firpo, in that grave yet gallant way of his, waved them aside. But they would not take "no." Here was the richest prize in the boxing world; here was somebody who could make a fortune for the manager who tricked him into a contract.

They coaxed, they pleaded, they entreated. They put into their speech all the eloquence that was possible. And why not? For here was one of those "million dollar beauties" and any parasite lucky enough to woo him successfully was certain of at least 25 per cent of all the money Firpo earned, either in the ring, in the moving pictures, or in vaudeville.

Said Nay to Sirens.

But Firpo would not be lured by any siren voice. He said "no" — and that's exactly what he meant. In the end, he made himself a bit more explicit.

"When I came to America first, I thought I might be helped by an American manager. But none wanted to bother with me. I was just a big South American bum. And they had no time for me.

"So I was forced to handle my own affairs. I made all of my early fights myself. I thought it would be difficult, but it was not so after I once got started.

"Now, after I have proved to the Americans that I can fight a little, anyway, you men come to me and wish to manage me. I do not need you now. I have enough offers for fights, so that if I accepted them all would be busy for a year — maybe two years.

Did Not Need Manager.

"A manager's main job is to get work for his fighter. I can get all the work I need without a manager. Why then should I have a manager?"

And then it was that the jilted parasites began to slur Luis Firpo.

They called him "money-mad," they ridiculed him and condemned him for his saving habits; they called him, because of the hate within them, everything they could utter—and then thought the things that are not printable.

Luis Firpo merely ignored the things that were said and went along on his blissful, carefree, gold-lined ways, picking up $15,000 here, $25,000 there, $79,000 in Jersey City, $125,000 in New York. As he did so, he stored it away, while the men who yearned to manage him—and thus bilk him for at least one-fourth of his already acquired $400,000 fortune—generated a hatred that intensifies with every new dollar that Firpo earns.

And the only effect it has upon Luis Angel Firpo, of the Argentine, is to bring to his eyes and to his lips, occasionally, the flicker of a smile.

YANK CLUB SITS ON HIGH SEAT IN DIAMOND SPORT

Triumph of Huggins Clan Over Giants and Ruth's Achievements the Big Events of Year In Baseball.

The outstanding event in baseball in 1923 were:

The triumph of the New York Yankees in the world's series.

The return to fame and popularity of Babe Ruth.

The absence of George Sisler from the game.

The home run hitting of Casey Stengel in the world's series.

The winning of the National and American league batting titles by Rogers Hornsby and Harry Heilmann respectively.

The leading of the two leagues of the American league and Adolf in pitching victorise by George Uhle Luque in the National.

The death of "Wild Bill" Donovan.

The resignation of Frank Chance, Kid Gleason, Lee Fohl, Fred Mitchell and Donie Bush from their 1928 managerial duties.

The return to the draft agreement with the majors of the Pacific Coast league and American association.

There were many other interesting incidents during the year, possibly some that might be rated equal importance with some of the above. But those above will stand as the milestones.

Knocked Off Muggsy's Crown.

John McGraw, Little Napoleon of Baseball, stood on the threshold of the hall of fame when the Giants and the Yankees, league pennant winners, took the field for their third world's series tilt. A victory in the classic meant the winning of three series in succession for McGraw. Huggins faced the ignominy of losing his third straight. McGraw's adherents counted on his generalship alone to pull his team through. The Giants showed a playing strength equal to that of the Yankees and it was Huggins who proved the master strategist of the two.

But of more interest even than that feat was the work of Babe Ruth. The man who once startled the baseball world by slamming out 59 home runs in a season, started last year's campaign a discredited king—unpopular and the object of jeers and cat-calls in many parks.

"Babe" Again a King.

It was a new Ruth, however, who started the season. He not only "came down to earth" and kept in training but he dropped his temperament and found his batting eye. He led the league in home run hitting and at the close of the season was voted the most valuable player in the league to his club. He was an important cog in the Yankee machine.

The absence of George Sisler, first baseman par excellence, from the St. Louis Browns lineup not only deprived that club of a star player and the fans of a popular idol but it undoubtedly changed the complexion of the legue race. Sisler was kept out of the game due to a sinus infection, which hindered his vision. It is not known yet whether or not he will be able to play regularly next season in addition to managing the club.

The resignation of Kid Gleason as manager of the White Sox after a discouraging effort to rebuild this team was a pathetic incident of the year. Gleason, who joined the Sox as coach under "Pants" Rowland, whipped the club into a pennant winning aggregation in 1919 only to see his machine wrecked by the "Black Sox" scandal. Gleason, however, was the first man to realize the need for drastic action and sanctioned the suspension of the eight members implicated.

Hopefully Gleason set about to rebuild his club around Eddie Collins, Ray Schalk and one or two other faithfuls. In 1922 he seemed on the road to the pennant again. New pitching material showed much promise. But last year the team failed to show anything. Discouraged he quit.

Frank Chance essayed a comeback as manager of the Red Sox and resigned following a change in ownership of the club. Lee Fohl, who quit as manager of the Browns to make way for Sisler, succeeded Chance. Donie Bush drew a managerial pass from Owner Griffith of the Washington club. Dave Bancroft succeeded Fred Mitchell as Brave pilot.

Doom of High Finnace.

The return of at least two of the Triple A leagues to draft relations with the majors is important in that it should work for the betterment of both the minors and majors and give the players a square deal. It should, also, help eliminate the high finance now carried on in the baseball market. There is no rhyme or reason for paying $50,000 for an unknown and often undeveloped minor leaguer.

The tragic death of "Wild Bill" Donovan, former pitcher and manager, was a blow to fandom. Donovan had written, with his keen aim and wit many interesting paragraphs in baseball history. He was one of the most popular players of all time. He died in the wreck of the Twentieth Century near Erie, Pa., recently.

Casey Stengel's reward for winning two games of the world's series for the Giants was to be sent to the tail-end Brave team. Those two circuit smacks of his will live in history for some time, however.

Sam Jones and Howard Ehmke entered the no-hit ball of fame within a single week as their contributions to the 1923 history.

Titles Changed Rapidly In Thrilling Year of Mitten Whirling

GLOVE PASTIME ENJOYED A BOOM IN YEAR OF '23

String of Champions Saw Their Titles Pass to Other Brows; Dempsey vs. Firpo Outstanding Battle.

The closing year of 1923 has been an interesting one and a thrilling one in many respects in the sport world. But to the boxing game must go the honor of furnishing the most thrills.

The Yankees and Giants played true to form and repeated in baseball. The winning of the world's series by the Yanks was not unexpected.

Bill Tilden held sway in tennis, as was predicted. There was one big surprise in golf—the winning of the national open title by Bobby Jones, perennial seeker.

But in boxing upsets occurred every fortnight for a time. Champions were left strewn around the ring in careless fashion. The jeweled crowns, emblematic of titles, bounced from head to head.

Two Feather Kings.

The featherweight class alone saw two champions pass. Johnny Kilbane, after an eleven-year reign, went down before the wicked punches of Eugene Criqui, French flash. A few weeks later Johnny Dundee, old in real years and ring years, won the title from Criqui.

Johnny Wilson, timid holder of the middleweight title, lost that crown to Harry Greb.

Jimmy Wilde, veteran world's flyweight champ, was knocked into oblivion by Pancho illa, little brown man from the Philippines.

Battling Siki, light heavyweight champion of the world by virtue of his knockout victory over Georges Carpentier, laughed at tradition and everything else and met Mike McTigue in Dublin, Ireland, on St. Patrick's Day and got what every Irishmen believed he would get—an eleven-second sock on the button.

Windmill Is Stopped.

And there were other upsets, though of lesser importance. Gene Tunney, former holder of the American light-heavyweight title, got it back by licking the windmill expert, Harry Greb.

Frankie Genaro met Pancho Villa—before Pancho was world's flyweight champ—and won the American flyweight title from Pancho, which later left Genaro in the unique position of having licked the man who held the greater of the two flyweight titles.

Johnny Dundee was the proud holder of the New York-created title of junior lightweight champion until he met Jack Bernstein early in the summer. Then Mr. Bernstein relieved him of it. He won it back the other night.

But the event that stands out more prominently than any of these crown-crashing affairs was the feat of Luis Firpo—call him what you will—in knocking Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, plumb out of the ring in their jungle melee.

Not An Accident.

The fact that Firpo had rocked the champ before that indicated that this bear slap he gave the Manassa Mauler was no accidental swipe.

And if allowed to assume the role of prophet, one might readily predict that 1924 will be almost as hectic a year. Dundee is about through as a fighter. Fate was kind to him after snubbing him for some 12 years.

Johnny Wilson's already booked to meet Harry Greb in a return battle in the hope of regaining his crown. And both fighters are such poor excuses for champions that no one can tell which will prove the worse when they meet.

Pancho Villa is young, full of vigor, and a careful, heady fighter. None of the little boys, outside Genaro, can handle him.

Bantam Crown Dangles.

Joe Lynch, several times bantam champion, may lose his title once more if some up and doing lad catches Joseph on an off night.

Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, believes the longer he stays out of the ring the longer he will keep his crown. But if he does get into action he will have a tough row to hoe.

McTigue, light-heavy king, could lose his crown to any one of two or three light-heavies, including Georges Carpentier.

Jack Dempsey and Benny Leonard still seem to rule their respective roosts unchallenged. Benny, however, is much overweight and will live himself out of his class.—if he hasn't done so yet. He can well afford to retire undefeated—as one of the greatest lightweights the game has known.

Local Bowlers In Tournament

Lincoln bowlers are planning a city handicap tourney to be rolled on the Lincoln alleys, December 26 to 31, inclusive. Handicaps will range from 150 to 175 pins and the tourney is open to all local bowlers. Singles, doubles, five-man and all-events are scheduled on the five-day program. Most of Lincoln's league teams have entered in the competition.

STANFORD PLOTS DEFEAT OF BEARS

Pop Warner's Outfit Hopes to Pull Berkeley From Its Lofty Perch.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 22.—Coach Andy Kerr will turn over to Glenn Warner when he comes to Stanford from Pittsburgh next year, all but four of the eleven which started against the California Bears in their last encounter. These are evenly distributed between the backfield and the line. Bob Cravens and Dick Faville will be lost from the forward wall, while from the secondary line will go Captain Scotchy Campbell and Norman Cleveland. Kerr has several first-rate substitutes with which to fill in these vacancies and will no doubt, with Warner, be able to find strong material from the membership of the freshman squad, which this year defeated the California first-year men by a 12 to 0 scohe—the first Stanford freshman victory since 1908.

Among the reserves of this year's squad Fred Ludeke and Fred Loomis, both tackles, will be missing next season. Both varsity tackles, Johnson and Shipkey, however, will have another year.

TEARNEY TAKES RAP AT LINCOLN

Head of Western Suggests His League Is Asked to Do Too Much.

But Is Frank to Admit That Lincoln Would Be Fine Fit Into Circuit.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

President Al R. Tearney of the Western league is tossing cold water on the aspirations of Lincoln to regain membership in the Tearney loop. Secretary Whitten of Lincoln's Chamber of Commerce recently indited letters of invitation to President Tearney, Lee Kayser of Des Moines and James Crawford, members of a special committee named at a recent league pow-wow in Chicago, urging them to come to Lincoln for an investigation of this city's availability to inherit the Sioux City club, which is about to be transferred to a more desirable ball town.

Mr. Keyser, interviewed in Des Moines by The Star's correspondent, spoke favorably of Lincoln and Mr. Crawford, head of the Tulsa club, replied yesterday to Secretary Whitten, stating that the league committee is planning to show up in Lincoln early in January.

The Western league's president, however, doesn't speak of Lincoln as encouragingly as his committee associates. In fact, Prexy Tearney appears to be ice-cold—so far as Lincoln is concerned.

Tearney Turns On Hose.

In response to a message forwarded yesterday by The Star in which the executive head of the Western league was requested to announce the date his committee probably could come to Lincoln, President Tearney "turned on the hose" in the following fashion:

"CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 22.—Sports Editor Star, Lincoln, Neb.—Do not see what can be accomplished by committee unless there are local people interested financially. As I see the situation, it is necessary to bring outside capital, a ball club and franchise, as well as pay local men a prohibitive rental — all this with absolutely no assurances of assistance. Lincoln would be wonderful in our circuit, but steps must be taken there first. Christmas greetings to my Lincoln friends.

"A. R. TEARNEY."

Still Have Right to Hope.

Regardless of the icy blast from the direction of the Western league president, Lincoln fans decline to abandon hope that this city yet will be the choice of the Tearney loop in relocating the Sioux City club. No action by Lincoln can be taken until after the league committee has visited this city and presented a definite proposition. The Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations undoubtedly stand ready to appoint a joint committee to receive the Western league representatives and give consideration to any offer the committee may care to make. Acceptance or rejection, of course, are details which must await the committee's visit. Possibly President Tearney may be more mellow after he and his associates have given Lincoln the "once over."

Forced to Mark Time.

From the standpoint of geographical location, interest in baseball and population, Lincoln has everything to commend itself to Mr. Tearney's league. Another possibility is that President Tearney's message is merely a feeler—he would like to have some manifestation of Lincoln's enthusiasm before his committee goes on the road in quest of Sioux City's successor. The show-down will come at an early date. Club President Crawford of Tulsa has announced that the committee will be here early in January and that means the league president will be one of the visiting party. Until then, Lincoln fans can only mark time.

State Leaguers Willing.

Fear that the Nebraska State league, in which Lincoln men have held a franchise during the past two years, might stand on its baseball rights and resist the promotion of the capital city to the Western league, appears to be groundless. Secretary C. E. Jackman of the Grand Island State leaguers was a Lincoln visitor Saturday, calling at The Star office to suggest that the Nebraska league undoubtedly would be better off if Lincoln were not a member of the State loop.

"It is my conviction," the Grand Island man said, "that we could land not less than three desirable Nebraska towns, enlarging to an eight-club circuit, the moment announcement is made that Lincoln is to get out of our league. These particular towns have the feeling that Lincoln does not belong in the State league, so they have stayed out. So far as Grand Island is concerned, we will vote in a minute to let Lincoln transfer to another circuit."

HELPS HIMSELF TO MERRY GIGGLE

Firpo Has Only Smiles For the Parasites Who Tried To Trap Him.

Argentine Husky Doing His Own Managing; Able to Keep All He Earns.

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

(Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — Luis Angel Firpo is disliked and hated more by a certain group within the shadow of the prize ring than any gladiator in knuckle-bouncing history.

All of which worries Luis just about as much as would a scheduled bout with Pancho Villa.

The South American came to these shores less than two years ago unknown, unheralded, scoffed at when he asked for matches, jeered at by the "smart managers." No fighter ever made his debut under conditions more discouraging than this "Wild Bull" from Argentine.

History records the fact that Firpo, firm in the faith in himself, undaunted by rebuffs, continued striving for the chance to make true his long dreamed dreams of greatness in the boxing world. And, in the end, he was offered a fight at $100—and took it.

Then the Story of Hate.

He won—but failed to convince that he was really great. He was given another chance—and again was he triumphant. He made his third bid for glory in another bout of his own making—and once more was his triumph spectacular.

And then—well, this is where begins the story of hate.

Firpo's name sparkled from newspapers, his grim visage frowned out upon the sportive world. He became the enigma of the prize ring. Was he a potential champion — or just a false alarm? No one knew. But sport promoters around the country were quite willing to find out—and pay Firpo for his displays.

Besieged by Parasites.

Of a sudden, Firpo found himself besieged by men who call themselves "fight managers"—and are called "parasites" and much else, who know much of what there is to know about affairs in the fistcuffing world. Each and every one wanted to manage him.

But Firpo, in that grave yet gallant way of his, waved them aside. But they would not take "no." Here was the richest prize in the boxing world; here was somebody who could make a fortune for the manager who tricked him into a contract.

They coaxed, they pleaded, they entreated. They put into their speech all the eloquence that was possible. And why not? For here was one of those "million dollar beauties" and any parasite lucky enough to woo him successfully was certain of at least 25 per cent of all the money Firpo earned, either in the ring, in the moving pictures, or in vaudeville.

Said Nay to Sirens.

But Firpo would not be lured by any siren voice. He said "no" — and that's exactly what he meant. In the end, he made himself a bit more explicit.

"When I came to America first, I thought I might be helped by an American manager. But none wanted to bother with me. I was just a big South American bum. And they had no time for me.

"So I was forced to handle my own affairs. I made all of my early fights myself. I thought it would be difficult, but it was not so after I once got started.

"Now, after I have proved to the Americans that I can fight a little, anyway, you men come to me and wish to manage me. I do not need you now. I have enough offers for fights, so that if I accepted them all would be busy for a year — maybe two years.

Did Not Need Manager.

"A manager's main job is to get work for his fighter. I can get all the work I need without a manager. Why then should I have a manager?"

And then it was that the jilted parasites began to slur Luis Firpo. They called him "money-mad," they ridiculed him and condemned him for his saving habits; they called him, because of the hate within them, everything they could utter—and then thought the things that are not printable.

Luis Firpo merely ignored the things that were said and went along on his blissful, carefree, gold-lined ways, picking up $15,000 here, $25,000 there, $79,000 in Jersey City, $125,000 in New York. As he did so, he stored it away, while the men who yearned to manage him—and thus bilk him for at least one-fourth of his already acquired $400,000 fortune—generated a hatred that intensifies with every new dollar that Firpo earns.

And the only effect it has upon Luis Angel Firpo, of the Argentine, is to bring to his eyes and to his lips, occasionally, the flicker of a smile.

YANK CLUB SITS ON HIGH SEAT IN DIAMOND SPORT

Triumph of Huggins Clan Over Giants and Ruth's Achievements the Big Events of Year In Baseball.

The outstanding event in baseball in 1923 were:

The triumph of the New York Yankees in the world's series.

The return to fame and popularity of Babe Ruth.

The absence of George Sisler from the game.

The home run hitting of Casey Stengel in the world's series.

The winning of the National and American league batting titiles by Rogers Hornsby and Harry Heilmann respectively.

The leading of the two leagues of the American league and Adolf in pitching victorise by George Uhle Luque in the National.

The death of "Wild Bill" Donovan.

The resignation of Frank Chance, Kid Gleason, Lee Fohl, Fred Mitchell and Donie Bush from their 1923 managerial duties.

The return to the draft agreement with the majors of the Pacific Coast league and American association.

There were many other interesting incidents during the year, possibly some that might be rated equal importance with some of the above. But those above will stand as the milestones.

Knocked Off Muggsy's Crown.

John McGraw, Little Napoleon of Baseball, stood on the threshold of the hall of fame when the Giants and the Yankees, league pennant winners, took the field for their third world's series tilt. A victory in the classic meant the winning of three series in succession for Mc-proved the master stragegist of the Graw. Huggins faced the ignominy of losing his third straight. McGraw's adherents counted on his generalship alone to pull his team through. The Giants showed a playing strength equal to that of the Yankees and it was Huggins who proved the master strategist of the two.

But of more interest even than that feat was the work of Babe Ruth. The man who once startled the baseball world by slamming out 59 home runs in a season, started last year's campaign a discredited king—unpopular and the object of jeers and catcalls in many parks.

"Babe" Again a King.

It was a new Ruth, however, who started the season. He not only "came down to earth' and kept in training but he dropped his temperament and found his batting eye. He led the league in home run hitting and at the close of the season was voted the most valuable player in the league to his club. He was an important cog in the Yankee machine.

The absence of George Sisler, first baseman par excellence, from the St. Louis Browns lineup not only deprived that club of a star player and the fans of a popular idol but it undoubtedly changed the complexion of the legue race. Sisler was kept out of the game due to a sinus infection, which hindered his vision. It is not known yet whether or not he will be able to play regularly next season in addition to managing the club.

The resignation of Kid Gleason as manager of the White Sox after a discouraging effort to rebuild this team was a pathetic incident of the year. Gleason, who joined the Sox as coach under "Pants" Rowland, whipped the club into a pennant winning aggregation in 1919 only to see his machine wrecked by the "Black Sox" scandal. Gleason, however, was the first man to realize the need for drastic action and sanctioned the suspension of the eight members implicated.

Hopefully Gleason set about to rebuild his club around Eddie Collins, Ray Schalk and one or two other faithfuls. In 1922 he seemed on the road to the pennant again. New pitching material showed much promise. But last year the team failed to show anything. Discouraged he quit.

Frank Chance essayed a comeback as manager of the Red Sox and resigned following a change in ownership of the club. Lee Fohl, who quit as manager of the Browns to make way for Sisler, succeeded Chance. Donie Bush drew a managerial pass from Owner Griffith of the Washington club. Dave Bancroft succeeded Fred Mitchell as Brave pilot.

Doom of High Finnace.

The return of at least two of the Triple A leagues to draft relations with the majors is important in that it should work for the betterment of both the minors and majors and give the players a square deal. It should, also, help eliminate the high finance now carried on in the baseball market. There is no rhyme or reason for paying $50,000 for an unknown and often undeveloped minor leaguer.

The tragic death of "Wild Bill" Donovan, former pitcher and manager, was a blow to fandom. Donovan had written, with his keen arm and wit many interesting paragraphs in baseball history. He was one of the most popular players of all time. He died in the wreck of the Twentieth Century near Erie, Pa., recently.

Casey Stengel's reward for winning two games of the world's series for the Giants was to be sent to the tail-end Brave team. Those two circuit smacks of his will live in history for some time, however.

Sam Jones and Howard Ehmke entered the no-hit ball of fame within a single week as their contributions to the 1923 history.

KING PLEADS FOR AMERICA'S ENTRY IN WORLD COURT

Democratic Senator Utilizes Radio In Addressing Thousands Of Listeners.

Says Seven Presidents Have Endorsed Projects Based Upon Tribunal.

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON Dec 22—Scientists latest achievement—the radio—was given full recognition as a political medium tonight when Senator William H King democrat of Utah broadcast to two hundred thousand hidden listeners a ringing appeal for American participation in the permanent court of international justice

The event was accorded political significance for two reasons

First it marked the initial use of the radio for a purely political purpose and secondly it was looked upon as a step opening the long heralded democratic movement to bring about American entry to the world court despite the opposition of the republican senate

King spoke to a hidden audience scattered from beyond the Canadian border westward to the Rocky Mountains south to beyond the Rio Grande out into the Gulf of Mexico to Cuba and on ships out at sea in the Atlantic The address was broadcast by the same radio system used by both President Coolidge and former President Woodrow Wilson in their recent wireless addresses During week it was also used by Senator Pat Harrison democrat of Mississippi to urge stricter immigration laws and by Senator Arthur Capper republican of Kansas to explain the program of the congress farm bloc King's address was somewhat different from those of his predecessors Also it was conceded by political leader to have opened the way definitely to a partisan campaign in the air during the 1924 elections

Depends Upon America

King urged American entry to the court because it was originally proposed by our government He declared world peace depended upon American participation in the court's affairs

He declared seven presidents of the United States—from Cleveland down to Coolidge—had endorsed the projects upon which the present

A world international court is projected not as a vain but as a practical and rational scheme and we are invited and importuned to let the voice of America be heard in the councils of the nations

The world court must be set up by the concord of nations It must be a process of peace

The world court cannot be set up by any one nation King said

The constitution of the world court must be the joint act of all the nations it must arise out of the agreement of nations To have brought the nations into agreement upon a project of this kind is of itself a worthy consummation Practically all nations have agreed but our own government hesitates to affix the nation seal to adherence to the constitution of the permanent court of international justice which has been established at The Hague and to the bench of which a distinguished jurist from among our own countrymen has been elected

On American Project

To refuse to ratify this protocol will by many be regarded as a repudiation of the projects for peace and justice to which our country has been committed by those in authority The project for the international court of justice is an American project It was originally proposed by our government and has had the express approval of Presidents Cleveland McKinley Roosevelt Taft Wilson Harding and Coolidge and by the leading statesmen of our country

In conclusion King declared that even though the world court protocol was imperfect America should joined so that it later might be perfected

'We should go forward in agreement with the other nations which recognize us as equals he added

To take another course would be untrue to our traditions principles and professtations '

HIRAM JOHNSON TRAINS HIS GUNS ON HENRY FORD

Criticizes Manufacturer For Climbing Aboard Coolidge Band Wagon.

Intimates Muscle Shoals Disposition May Have Played Some Part.

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON Dec 22—Senator Hiram Johnson who thus far is the only avowed pledged candidate for the republican nomination at Cleveland next June opened fire on Henry Ford tonight for climbing aboard the Coolidge band wagon

The California senator bluntly suggested that Ford's dramatic removal of himself from the political stage was not unconnected with administration plans for letting the auto manufacturer have Muscle Shoals

American politics present a most interesting psychological study Johnson's statement said

Henry Ford has declared for Mr Coolidge because as he says Mr Coolidge is safe

Immediate the part of the press of the country representing special privilege which has always denounced and caricatured Mr Ford gives him a certificate of character and with open arms welcomes him to its ranks

Perhaps the time is propitious for Emma Goldman and Bill Haywood to return declare for Mr Coolidge and be acclaimed by the same special privileges press

But in the light of Mr Ford's previous utterances just when did Mr Coolidge in Mr Ford's opinion become safe ?

Refers to Weeks

On the thirteenth of October after Mr Coolidge had been in office for more than two months and when Secretary of War Weeks had sold what Ford claimed to be a part of the Muscle Shoals project Mr Ford denounced in unmeasured terms the secretary of war and incidentally the administration as being under the control of private interests inimical to the farmers and the secretary of war made an angry rejoinder

Mr Ford is entitled of course to his political opinions equally of course these opinions cannot control a republican nomination

Mr Ford was for Mr Wilson when Mr Wilson was president Mr Ford was for Mr Harding when Mr Harding was president Mr Ford is for President Coolidge while Mr Coolidge is president

Mr Ford is a marvelous business man

Another development today was the departure of C Bascom Slemp for a southern trip which has for its principal object the ironing out of several factional fights in southern states among the republicans Secretary Slemp will be gone for two weeks His principal destination is Florida but he also will take advantage of the trip to visit Alabama Georgia Mississippi and the Carolinas

BRITISH FAVOR AN AIR PARLEY

Possibility Of International Aircraft Conference Being Discussed.

WASHINGTON Dec 22—A conference over the possibility of calling an international conference for the limitation of aircraft was held at the white house today between President Coolidge and the Duke of Sutherland the British under secretary for air

Following the conference the British secretary indicated that it was not believed that the present would be propitious time for such a conference The unwillingness of France to agree to a reduction in aerial armament coupled with generally unsettled conditions in Europe would render the conference useless the duke said

The position of the British government is well known the duke told newspaper men

Favor Conference

We favor an air conference but in view of the general conditions existing in Europe I do not believe that France would consent to any reduction in air craft Consequently a conference would be fruitless

The opinion of the Duke of Sutherland coincides with the view of the Coolidge administration President Coolidge as did President Harding is anxious that the international race for aerial supremacy be stopped before expenditures reach a burdensome figure but he feels that no conference should be called until there is a prospect of gaining mutual consent to reductions from all of the major powers

WALTON APPLIES TO HIGH TRIBUNAL

Formal Application For Review of Impeachment Asked By Former Governor.

(United Press)

WASHINGTON Dec 22—Formal application that the supreme court of the United States review the impeachment of Governor Walton of Oklahoma was made late today by counsel for Walton

Decision was deferred until the court resumes its sessions in January

A previous attempt to have Justice Van Devanter order the review failed when the justice deferred action

F F Riddle and Henry B Martin counsel for Walton in their petition to the court alleged that Walton was denied a fair hearing Members of both house and senate were in a conspiracy before the trial to impeach and oust Walton the attorneys charged

The Ku Klux Klan the petitioner charged gained control of Oklahoma's state government In support of this alleged Klan activities including floggings were cited to the court

Walton proved the conspiracy by evidence presented during his trial his counsel said but because of the prejudice and conspiracy itself he was denied a fair hearing

The supreme court it was argued should review the case in order that petitioner may not be ousted from his high office with all the attendant disposals

Because of the impeachment the petitioners brief said the state of Oklahoma and its people have been subject to insurrection anarchy and their attendant evils and subjected to the government and domination of the secret society known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and the invisible empire

Grand Master Charles A Chappell who officiated at the corner stone laying exercises on May 26 of this year had charge of the services Past Grand Master H H Wilson who was present in 1892 at the institution of the East Lincoln lodge and who in 1902 was grand master in charge of the dedication of its Vine street temple gave the address of the evening Music other speaking and moving pictures of the corner stone laying were also on the program

The lodge room of the East Lincoln temple is the most beautiful of any blue lodge in Lancaster county Mr Wilson declared He congratulated the members of the organization on their work and Jesse B Miller the architect on his skill

Mr Wilson urged that the place be used for more than two or three meetings a month and suggested that with its facilities the new temple should become an intellectual and social center of the city

In an explanation of some of the principles of the Masonic order Mr Wilson said that the seemingly never changing forms of the organization are but clothes which clothe a society whose thought is always up with the times

Its restrictions of membership do not exclude all non Christians but only those who have no belief in some divine providence It is built on traditions of democracy

Mr Wilson stated that a benefit which the East Lincoln lodge can perform is to present moving pictures of a suitable kind to the children of the district and help to keep them away from thesometimes demoralizing influences of city show houses

History of New Building

Past Master James W Wynkoop a member of the building committee made a short opening address in which he outlined the history of the new temple At the end of his talk other members of the committee arose and by applause from the audience were commended for their work and relieved from further duties The other members are Willis N Watson Charles A Fetterman Frank B Sidles and Joe I Crain

Before dedicating the building to the usages of free Masonry an official inspection of the lodge room was made by officers of the grand lodge The grand master commended the craftsmanship of the endeavor and congratulated the architect on his work

Then the grand lodge was drawn up in the prescribed order and with the presentation to the grand master of vessels of corn wine and oil the building was dedicated to free Masonry virtue and universal benevolence

During the services the Middlekauf quartet sang appropriate selections Later M L Harmer and C W Raymond gave a group of songs The Misses Ray played instrumental selections

The crowd attending the services could get entirely inside the doors even after overflowing onto the floor of the lodge The room is built to hold with its balcony about three hundred people Five or six rows of temporary seats were put in to relieve the congestion but even then a great number were standing or seated on the floor

After the exercises and the program by the local lodge refreshments were served in the basement of the lodge This was followed by an inspection of the building

This lodge is the third which the East Lincoln organization has had When instituted in 1892 by Grand Master Samuel P Davidson who was present Saturday evening the lodge rooms were at 864 North Twenty seventh The temple at Twenty seventh and Vine streets was dedicated in 1902 Ground for the present building was broken on March 26 1923

BOYDEN ASSERTS 'COMMON SENSE' NOW NECESSARY

Unofficial American Reparations Representative Discusses German Situation.

Says Delay In Reaching An Agreement Has Already Cost Allies Billions.

NEW YORK Dec 22—In a speech which he declared expressed wholly personal opinion and which was without significance as to authority whatever R W Boyden the American unofficial delegate on the reparations commission made a strong plea for the use of common sense in dealing with Germany, here tonight.

The American representative Boyden will occupy a listening post on the diplomatic front and tonight gave what he personally thinks about the reparations question with frankness and force before the New England society

The way to make Germany economically and financially weak Boyden declared to make it impossible for her to pay what reparations she would otherwise have to pay to make it impossible for her democratic leaders to keep her really democratic to make her government whatever form it takes feeble is to keep hanging over her for an indefinite future the fear of commercial destruction

That method has been employed until now The result is just what might have been expected If England and the United States were to get her to employ the same method —which God forbid—in pushing their claims against France which with interest would amount to something like eight billions we would in my judgment see something like the same result in France

No Adjustment Made

The treaty failed to adjust the reparations burden to Germany's economic capacity The history of reparations since the treaty went in to effect has in brief been the history of the economic and financial degeneration of Germany resulting from that failure The recent efforts of Secretary Hughes are merely the latest efforts to bring simple common sense to bear upon the problem They deserve our heartiest support

No nation loses a cent by bringing the burden within Germany's capacity No one makes this suggestion out of any sentimental regard for Germany It is made to increase the payments and it will inevitably have that effect You will never get united national effort to pay reparations out of Germany unless the nation has confidence in the success of the effort

The present condition of Germany is not due to the fact that Germany did not know she was beaten or to the fact that the allies did not dictate peace in Berlin or to a conspiracy on the part of Germany to avoid reparations by debasing the mark The results are due to economic causes

The difference between the original capacity of Germany to pay reparations measure approximately the direct loss already suffered by the allies by reason of their mistake Their direct loss represents billions of dollars But unfortunately the loss does not end there You must add more billions representing indirect loss to the business of the world a loss shared by all nations Germany's degeneration throws world economy out of gear Sixty millions persons cannot be changed from an economic asset to an economic liability without affecting the prosperity of you and me

Loss Totals Billions

We ought to remember that peace is a fundamental economic and business factor and any avoidable delay in its restoration means still more billions of loss

I am far from absolving Germany from blame for the results to herself and the world I am talking from the point of view of those nations which won the war and which therefore have the real responsibility

They are in control and it is up to them to make their victory count for their own good and the good of the world

If public opinion understood the difficulties and the facts the attitude of the public—and I include the French and Belgian public—towards reparations the methods employed hitherto would be very different I regret the Ruhr occupation because I believe it to be a breach of the treaty with Germany because I regard it as elementary that we who fought Germany and raised our voices in denunciation of the crime of Alsace Lorraine and the violation of the neutrality of Belgium and the sinking of the Lusitania ought not adopt methods which resemble those we denounced

KING PLEADS FOR AMERICA'S ENTRY IN WORLD COURT

Democratic Senator Utilizes Radio In Addressing Thousands Of Listeners.

Says Seven Presidents Have Endorsed Projects Based Upon Tribunal.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Scientists latest achievement—the radio—was given full recognition as a political medium tonight when Senator William H. King democrat of Utah, broadcast to two hundred thousand hidden listeners a ringing appeal for American participation in the permanent court of international justice.

The event was accorded political significance for two reasons.

First, it marked the initial use of the radio for a purely poltical purpose and secondly it was looked upon as a step opening the long hearalded democratic movement to bring about American entry to the world court, despite the opposition of the republican senate.

King spoke to a hidden audience, scattered from beyond the Canadian border, westward to the Rocky Mountains, south to beyond the Rio Grande, out into the Gulf of Mexico, to Cuba, and on ships out at sea in the Atlantic. The address was broadcast by the same radio system used by both President Coolidge and former President Woodrow Wilson, in their recent wireless addresses. During week it was also used by Senator Pat Harrison, democrat of Mississippi, to urge stricter immigration laws, and by Senator Arthur Capper, republican of Kansas, to explain the program of the congress "farm bloc." King's address was somewhat different from those of his predecessors. Also it was conceded by politicaj leader to have opened the way, definitely to a partisan "campaign in the air' during the '1924 elections.

Depends Upon America.

King urged American entry to the court because it was originally proposed by our government. He declared "world peace depended upon American participation in the court's affairs."

He declared seven presidents of the United States—from Cleveland down to Coolidge—had endorsed the "projects" upon which the present

"A world international court is projected, not as a vain, but as a practical and rational scheme, and we are invited and importuned to let the voice of America be heard in the councils of the nations.

"The world court must be set up by the concord of nations. It must be a process of peace.

"The world court cannot be set up by any one nation,' King said.

"The constitution of the world court must be the joint act of all the nations; it must arise out of the agreement of nations. To have brought the nations into agreement upon a project of this kind is of itself a worthy consummation. Practically all nations have agreed, but our own government hesitates to affix the nation seal to adherence to the constitution of the permanent court of international justice which has been established at The Hague, and to the bench of which a distinguished jurist from among our own countrymen has been elected.

On American Project.

"To refuse to ratify this protocol, will by many be regarded as a repudiation of the projects for peace and justice, to which our country has been committed by those in authority. The project for the international court of justice is an American project. It was originally proposed by our government, and has had the express approval of Presidents Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding and Coolidge, and by the leading statesmen of our country."

In conclusion, King declared that even though the world court protocol was imperfect, America should joined so that it later might be perfected.

"We should go forward in agreement with the other nations which recognize us as equals," he added.

"To take another course would be untrue to aur traditions, principles and profestations."

IOWA COUPLE HELD.

HIRAM JOHNSON TRAINS HIS GUNS ON HENRY FORD

Criticizes Manufacturer For Climbing Aboard Coolidge Band Wagon.

Intimates Muscle Shoals Disposition May Have Played Some Part.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Senator Hiram Johnson, who thus far is the only avowed pledged candidate for the republican nomination at Cleveland next June, opened fire o Henry Ford tonight for climbing aboard the Coolidge band wagon.

The California senator bluntly suggested that Ford's dramatic removal of himself from the political stage was not unconnected with administration plans for letting the auto manufacturer have Muscle Shoals.

"American politics present a most interesting pyschological study," Johnson's statement said.

"Henry Ford has declared for Mr. Coolidge, because, as he says, Mr. Coolidge is 'safe.'

"Immediate the part of the press of the country representing special privilege which has always denounced and caricatured Mr. Ford, gives him a certificate of character and with open arms welcomes him to its ranks.

"Perhaps the time is propitous for Emma Goldman and Bill Haywood to return, declare for Mr. Coolidge, and be acclaimed by the same special privileges press.

"But, in the light of Mr. Ford's previous utterances, just when did Mr. Coolidge, in Mr. Ford's opinion, become 'safe'?

Refers to Weeks.

"On the thirteenth of October, after Mr. Coolidge had been in office for more than two months, and when Secretary of War Weeks had sold what Ford claimed to be a part of the Muscle Shoals project, Mr. Ford denounced in unmeasured terms the secretary of war, and, incidentally, the administration as being under the control of private interests, inimical to the farmers, and the secretary of war made an angry rejoinder.

"Mr. Ford is entitled, of course, to his political opinions; equally, of course, these opinions cannot control a republican nomination.

"Mr. Ford was for Mr. Wilson when Mr. Wilson was president, Mr. Ford was for Mr. Harding when Mr. Harding was president. Mr. Ford is for President Coolidge while Mr. Coolidge is president.

"Mr. Ford is a marvelous business man."

Another development today was the departure of C. Bascom Slemp for a southern trip which has for its principal object the ironing out of several factional fights in southern states among the republicans. Secretary Slemp will be gone for two weeks. His principal destination is Florida, but he also will take advantage of the trip to visit Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and the Carolinas.

TWO ROBBED BY HOLDUPS

bandit appeared from the back of the car and said. "Pretty cold tonight. I just got in off a freight. What town is this back here." He then ordered the men to "Stick 'em up."

After robbing them, he forced them to drive on about three hundred yards and when they looked back he had disappeared.

Robbed of Their Pay.

Kalina and Merritt had just cashed the pay checks they had received that evening.

The bandit was about six feet tall, slim, and wore a black hat, coat and trousers. He was fairly well dressed.

Riley, who is held as a suspect, was arrested while driving up and down on South Eleventh street in front of the law enforcement bureau offices. He was waiting for Hill, who was phoning the officers. He had rented a Ford shortly after the holdup, it was said.

The gun, and billy were found and also the mask he is said to have worn at the timeofthe holdup.

Riley is said to have admitted to officers that he had been implicated in other planned holdups which had not been successful.

He was taken to the city jail after a statement had been taken in shorthand.

Snatches Woman's Purse.

Mrs. Walter Wheatley, 719 South Sixteenth street, reported to police that her purse was snatched by an unknown robber. Mrs. Wheatley was passing the alley at the south end of the city auditorium when the man passed her, snatched her purse and ran down the alley. The incident occurred at 8:15.

No money was in the pocketbook but the key to Mrs. Wheatley's apartment and papers and receipts were taken. The man was about 20 or 25 years old and wore a brown coat and hat.

"Black Sheep" Brother, Now A Millionaire, Turns Santa Claus

(United Press.)

SAND SPRINGS, Okla., Dec 22.—Harry Folk, "lost brother" and "black sheep" who turned up a millionaire and surprised the Folk family, gave his incoming relatives from various parts of the country tonight the "welcome of kings."

Luxuries automobiles, driven by liveried chauffeurs, met twenty-eight relatives from Pennsylvania, Illinois and Iowa and took them to Folk's mansion where they will be entertained over Christmas.

Folk, who admits he was the "stray sheep" of the family, made his fortune in Oklahoma oil. Nine brothers and sisters, most of whom predicted he "would never amount to much," were each mailed tickets to Sand Springs and $600 in cash and invited to bring their families.

Most of the relatives arrived tonight, the others were enroute and will be here tomorrow.

Way to Happiness.

"I want to bring all the joy to my people I am capable of," Folk said tonight. "If I can make the brothers and sister and their little kiddies enjoy a real gathering together I will be happy."

Folk was one of the original "soldiers of fortune." When 19 years old he enlisted in the army and served twenty-five years.

When discharged three years ago, he was a sergeant musician. While station at Fort Sill, Okla., he married Minnie Atkins, a full blood Osage Indian girl, whose oil lands later became worth over ten million dollars.

"Tommy" Atkins, their baby, to whom the lands had been allotted, died and opposition oil interests claimed possession of the lands. After long litigation, the courts decided that Tommy was the legal descendant of Minnie Atkins.

Meanwhile the Indian woman died and left Folk sole heir to royalties from over $10,000,000 worth of oil properties.

Recently he married a young widow here with two children.

ceived his common school education at Falls City, being graduated from the high school there. He is also a graduate of the Peru state normal school. He served successfully as superintendent of schools at Geneva and Nebraska City. While attending the University of Nebraska law college, he taught in the English department of the Lincoln high school.

His law education was received at the University of Nebraska and the University of Michigan. He started practice at Nebraska City, and a year ago removed to Lincoln to become a partner in the firm here.

World War Veteran.

Mr. Cline served with distinction in the world war, as captain in the 355th infantry, 89th division, first at Camp Funston and later overseas. He was wounded in action during the famous St. Mihel offensive on September 12, 1918, which was the first important movement carried out wholly by the American troops according to plans formulated by General Pershing and his staff.

He was the first state commander of the American Legion after it became organized on a permanent basis. For two years he was a member of the national executive committe of the Legion, and he was supported by the Nebraska delegation for national commander several years ago.

Interested in School's Welfare.

Former Mayor J. E. Miller, W. E. Hardy, Leonard A. Flansburg and Verne Hedge, who filed the petition of Mr. Cline, issued the following statement:

"We, and a number of others, have prevailed upon Earl Cline to be a candidate for the office of University Regent. We have done this because of a conviction that he is eminently fitted to serve. He is a loyal university alumnus and deeply interested in the university welfare. He is a man of the highest ability and a forceful character. The management of university affairs calls for sound judgment, and the men in control should be men of aggressive force, who can conceive, direct and carry out those things which are essential to the strength, growth and high standing to which the university of this state is entitled. Earl Cline, we are sure, would enter into this work wholeheartedly and with enthusiasm. In he capacity of Regent we could expect from him action and results and thoroughly believe the university and the state would be exceedingly fortunate to procure his services."

BRITISH FAVOR AN AIR PARLEY

Possibility Of International Aircraft Conference Being Discussed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—A conference over the possibility of calling an international conference for the limitation of aircraft was held at the white house today between President Coolidge and the Duke of Sutherland, the British under-secretary for air.

Following the conference the British secretary indicated that it was not believed that the present would be propitious time for such a conference. The unwillingness of France to agree to a reduction in aerial armament, coupled with generally unsettled conditions in Europe, would render the conference useless, the duke said.

"The position of the British government is well known," the duke told newspaper men.

Favor Conference.

"We favor an air conference, but in view of the general conditions existing in Europe I do not believe that France wouild consent to any reduction in air craft. Consequently a conference would be fruitless."

The opinion of the Duke of Sutherland coincides with the view of the Coolidge administration. President Coolidge, as did President Harding, is anxious that the international race for aerial supremacy be stopped before expenditures reach a burdensome figure, but he feels that no conference should be called until there is a prospect of gaining mutual consent to reductions from all of the major powers.

WALTON APPLIES TO HIGH TRIBUNAL

Formal Application For Review of Impeachment Asked By Former Governor.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Formal application that the supreme court of the United States review the impeachment of Governor Walton of Oklahoma, was made late today by counsel for Walton.

Decision was deferred until the court resumes its sessions in January.

A previous attempt to have Justice Van Devanter order the review failed when the justice deferred action.

F. E. Riddle and Henry B. Martin, counsel for Walton in their petition to the court alleged that Walton was denied a fair hearing. Members of both house and senate were in a conspiracy before the tral to impeach and oust Walton ,the attorneys charged.

The Ku Klux Klan, the petitioner charged, gained control of Oklahoma's tate government. In support of this alleged Klan activities, including floggings, were cited to the court.

Walton proved the conspiracy by evidence presented during his trial, his counsel said, but because of the prejudice and conspiracy itself, he was denied a fair hearing.

The supreme court, it was argued, should review the case in order that "petitioner may not be ousted from his high office with all the attendant disposals."

Because of the impeachment, the petitioners brief said, the state of Oklahoma and its people have been subject to "insurrection ,anarchy and their attendant evils and subjected to the government and domination of the secret society known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and the invisible empire."

NEW TEMPLE IS DEDICATED BY MASONIC BODY

Grand Master Chappell In Charge of Services At East Lincoln Lodge.

H. H. Wilson Urges That Building Be Used As a Social Center.

Dedication services for the new temple of East Lincoln lodge No. 210, A. F. & A. M., at Twenty-seventh and S streets, were held Saturday evening in the main lodge room of the building before a crowd that filled all available space.

Grand Master Charles A. Chappell, who officiated at the corner stone laying exercises on May 26 of this year, had charge of the services. Past Grand Master H. H. Wilson, who was present in 1892 at the institution of the East Lincoln lodge, and who in 1902 was grand master in charge of the dedication of its Vine street temple, gave the address of the evening. Music, other speaking, and moving pictures of the corner stone laying were also on the program.

The lodge room of the East Lincoln temple is the most beautiful of any blue lodge in Lancaster county, Mr. Wilson declared. He congratulated the members of the organization on their work, and Jesse B. Miller, the architect, on his skill.

Mr. Wilson urged that the place be used for more than two or three meetings a month, and suggested that with its facilities the new temple should become an intellectual and social center of the city.

In an explanation of some of the principles of the Masonic order, Mr. Wilson said that the seemingly never-changing forms of the organization are but clothes which clothe a society whose thought is always up with the times.

Its restrictions of membership do not exclude all non-Christians, but only those who have no belief in some divine providence. It is built on traditions of democracy.

Mr. Wilson stated that a benefit which the East Lincoln lodge can perform is to present moving pictures of a suitable kind to the children of the district, and help to keep them away from thesometimes demoralizing influences of city show houses.

History of New Building.

Past Master James W. Wynkoop, a member of the building committee, made a short opening address in which he outlined the history of the new temple. At the end of his talk, other members of the committee arose, and, by applause from the audience, were commended for their work and relieved from further duties. The other members are: Willis N. Watson, Charles A. Fetterman, Frank B. Sidles and Joe I. Crain.

Before dedicating the building to the usages of free Masonry, an official inspection of the lodge room was made by officers of the grand lodge. The grand master commended the craftsmanship of the endeavor, and congratulated the architect on his work.

Then the grand lodge was drawn up in the prescribed order and, with the presentation to the grand masters of vessels of corn, wine and oil, the building was dedicated to free Masonry, virtue, and universal benevolence.

During the services, the Middlekauf quartet sang appropriate selections. Later, M. L. Harmer and C. W. Raymond gave a group of songs. The Misses Ray played instrumental selections.

The crowd attending the services could get entirely inside the doors, even after overflowing onto the floor of the lodge. The room is built to hold, with its balcony, about three hundred people. Five or six rows of temporary seats were put in to relieve the congestion, but even then, a great number were standing or seated on the floor.

After the exercises and the program by the local lodge, refreshments were served in the basement of the lodge. This was followed by an inspection of the building.

This lodge is the third which the East Lincoln organization has had. When instituted in 1892, by Grand Master Samuel P. Davidson, who was present Saturday evening, the lodge rooms were at 864 North Twenty-seventh. The temple at Twenty-seventh and Vine streets was dedicated in 1902. Ground for the present building was broken on March 26, 1923.

OLD WORLD IS NOT AT PEACE

comparatively few Christmas trees in German households. Many government employes are unpaid.

Paris—France, still pursuing her policy of repression against Germany, maintains the largest army in the world, and despite the customary gaiety of Paris, domestic French homelife is suffering from financial depression.

Internal Troubles.

Madrid— Under General Primo Rivera's dictatorship, is more or less under military law and national celebrations of the festive season are tempered with internal troubles.

Rome—Italy is faced with a domestic struggle, for Premier Mussolini is virtually governing without a partliament pending new elections. The grip of the Fascisti is still strong throughout the country.

Miscow—There will be no national celebration of Christmas in Russia. Under the ancient Greek church rites, the celebration would not occur for another twelve days anyway.

Right here at home in Britain, the people are faced with the most serious national unemployment crisis in the country's history. Defeat of Premier Baldwin's tariff proposals at the recent general election has left chaos worse confounded. A labor government is regarded as a certainty during the next few weeks. The laborites and their liberal conferes have no immediate solution for unemployment.

PUEBLA RETAKEN.

TAMPICO, Mex., Dec. 22.—Federal troops have retaken Pueblo from the rebel forces under General Martinez, said dispatches from thei nterior today. In the fighting, which reached its height Friday night, many rebels were slain and captured, the dispatches said.

Packages From Red Cross Going All Parts World

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Tens of thousands of boxes and bags are speeding tonight to the far places of the world to bring messages of Christmas cheer from the American Red Cross.

The destitute of earthquake stricken Japan, the starving in war-torn Europe, crippled American war veterans in government and private hospitals, and the nation's soldiers and sailors ashore and afloat—all will be remembered.

Christmas celebrations for the war veterans have been planned by nearly 3,000 Red Cross chapters throughout the United States, with a view to bringing to the disabled the same entertainment and cheer that they would get in their own homes.

NOTABLE GAINS FOR LOYALISTS

Washington Official Reports Indicate Big Victories For Regulars.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Notable successes have attended the Mexican federal armies in the last twenty-four hours, according to official dispatches reaching the Mexican embassy here.

These dispatches said that rebels of the De La Huerta party have been dislodged from Panzacola and that federal troops have occupied suburbs of Puebla.

Government troops also have continued advances in the state of Jalisco, repairing railroads destroyed by the reebls, the embassy said.

Federals under General Eugenio Martinez registered new advances in the state of Vera Cruz, where the rebels hav withdrawn from Maltrata.

De La Huerta's rebel army is fighting starvation, the dispatches told the embassy. They need both money and supplies and are exacting loans from inhabitants of the towns they hold.

Rebel prisoners freed by President Obregon have asked permission to join the federal army to fight against De La Huerta, the embassy said.

Deny Peace Report.

F. Gonzales Gante, Washington representative of the De La Huerta forces, made public tonight a dispatch from Alvaro Castillo, De La Huerta foreign minister, denying "in the most emphatic manner," the report that De La Huerta had asked Obregon for peace.

Senator Ashurst, Ariozna, tonight made public a telegram received today from J. L. Schleimer. Ashurst said he did not know who Schleimer is. The telegram was sent from Mexico City yesterday. It stated that the "true conditions" in Mexico are:

"All railroads in the republic running on schedule with the exception of a small line between Mexico City and Vera Cruz and a part of the line between Irapuato and Guadalajara.

"Business normal. Public opinion in Mexico is absolutely in favor of the Obregon government."

Rumania And Greece Break

ATHENS, Dec. 22.—Rumania today severed diplomatic relations with Greece by recalling her minister to Athens, who left for Bucharest this afternoon.

Simultaneously the cabinet headed by Premier Gonatas resigned.

Appeals to former Premier Venizelos who is in Paris with a newly acquired bride, to return to the head of affairs in Greece were redoubled.

Recall of the Rumanian minister to Greece is believed due to the expulsion of King George and Queen Elizabeth. The latter is the eldest daughter of Queen Marie of Rumania. The Greecian sovereigns arrived at Bucharest late yesterday, a short time before the order recalling the Rumanian minister was sent.

BOYDEN ASSERTS 'COMMON SENSE' NOW NECESSARY

Unofficial American Reparations Representative Discusses German Situation.

Says Delay In Reaching An Agreement Has Already Cost Allies Billions.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—In a speech which he declared expressed "wholly personal opinion," and which was without significance as to authority whatever, R. W. Borden, the American unofficial delegate on the reparations commission, made a strong plea for the use of "common sense' in dealing with Germany, here tonight.

The American representative, Boyden, will occupy a "listening post" on the diplomatic front, and tonight gave what he personally thinks about the reparations question with frankness and force before the New England society.

"The way to make Germany economically and financially weak," Boyden declared, "t omake it impossible for her to pay what reparations she would otherwise have to pay; to make it impossible for her democratic leaders to keep her really democratic; to make her government, whatever form it takes, feeble; is to keep hanging over her for an indefinite future the fear of commercial destruction.

"That method has been employed until now. The result is just what might have been expected. If England and the United States were to get her to employ the same method—which God forbid—in pushing their claims against France, which with interest would amount to something like eight billions, we would, in my judgment, see something like the same result in France.

No Adjustment Made.

"The treaty failed to adjust the reparations burden to Germany's economic capacity. The history of reparations since the treaty went into effect has in brief been the history of the economic and financial degeneration of Germany resulting from that failure. The recent efforts of Secretary Hughes are merely the latest efforts to bring simple common sense to bear upon the problem. They deserve our heartiest support.

"No nation loses a cent by bringing the burden within Germany's capacity. No one makes this suggestion out of any sentimental regard for Germany. It is made to increase the payments and it will inevitably have that effect. You will never get united national effort to pay reparations out of Germany unless the nation has confidence in the success of the effort.

"The present condition of Germany is not due to the fact that Germany did not know she was beaten or to the fact that the allies did not dictate peace in Berlin, or to a conspiracy on the part of Germany to avoid reparations by debasing the mark. The results are due to economic causes.

"The difference between the original capacity of Germany to pay reparations, measure approximately the direct loss already suffered by the allies by reason of their mistake. Their direct loss represents billions of dollars. But unfortunately the loss does not end there. You must add more billions representing indirect loss to the business of the world, a loss shared by all nations, Germany's degeneration throws world economy out of gear. Sixty millions persons cannot be changed from an economic asset to an economic liability without affecting the prosperity of you and me.

Loss Totals Billions.

"We ought to remember that peace is a fundamental economic and business factor, and any avoidable delay in its restoration means still more billions of loss.

"I am far from absolving Germany from blame for the results to herself and the world. I am talking from the point of view of those nations which won the war and which, therefore, have the real responsibility.

"They are in control and it is up to them to make their victory count for their own good and the good of the world.

"If public opinion understood the difficulties and the facts, the attitude of the public—and I include the French and Belgian public—towards reparations, the methods employed hitherto would be very different. I regret the Ruhr occupation because I believe it to be a breach of the treaty with Germany because I regard it as elementary that we who fought Germany and raised our voices in denunciation of the crime of Alsace-Lorraine, and the violation of the neutrality of Belgium, and the sinking of the Lusitania, ought not adopt methods which resemble those we denounced."

Christmas Program At Capitol School

Christmas was observed at Capitol school Friday with programs in the different rooms. The spirit of the season prevaded the school, from the kindergarten where the children awaited Santa Claus, to the domestic art laboratory where the girls were making candy and into the shop where the boys completed Christmas gifts. Between the ringing of the morning bells, the school orchestra played in the upper hall, giving "The Dance of the Crickets," Seredy-Tocaben, and "A Waltz," Ernest Schmidt. The girls glee club sang, "Giusette" and Verdi's "Merry Christmas.

At 9:30 o'clock the kindergarten children marched through the halls for their special program, wearing caps made for the occasion. At 11:30 o'clock the several grades sang carols in the assembly room. In the afternoon the 1A and 2B grades gave a party for the 1B pupils. They had a Christmas tree, given by the school patrons, and Santa Claus presented gifts to the children, made by the other children. The program for the departmental classes of the school was given at 2:30 o'clock. It was an infrmal dramatization of Dicken's "Christmas Carol" by the 8B. The cast was in costume.

ISSUES MESSAGE.

DUBLIN, Dec. 22.—President Cosgrave today issued a Christmas message to the people of Ireland in which he said: "The rule of the people is now supreme. I feel that we are a year nearer union and peace. I still believe that union means an Ireland peaceful, prosperous and happy."

Fog Halts Cruise Of Mayflower; Coolidge "Party" Is Held Anyway

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—A heavy fog of a type seldom seen in Washington nearly disrupted a political conference of grave consequence today.

President Coolidge was taking a party of political friends down the Potomac on his yaht, the Mayflower, for an afternoon and evening of conference and amusement.

An enveloping fog was settling down on the river. It became so heavy that a consultation of officers in command was held. A telephone call was put into a point twenty miles down the river.

The report was that the "fog was so thick that vision was limited to fifteen feet."

The president of the United States and party of friends were all set for a trip down the river. The navy jazz band had been pressed into service for concert duty. Special movies had been provided. Matters of political import were to be decided; a fine dinner had been arranged. And the Mayflower could not pull away from her berth.

There was a consultation. Then came the decision.

The party will be held anyway, aboard the Mayflower as planned. What difference did it make if they couldn't actually cruise? Go as far as Quantico, Va., merely because that "was a good place to turn around and come back.'

Everything was harmony again.

On board were Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, who is rumored to be a "favorite son" candidate, and Mrs. Watson; John T. Adams, chairman of the republican national committee, and Mrs. Adams; Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace; ex-Governor Clement of eVrmont, and hils daughter and son-in-law, Mr and Mrs. Horace Brown; William Hard, a political writer, and Mrs. Hard; Frank W. Stearns, of Boston, and John and Calvin Coolidge, second.

The number of bonds issued to the investing public this week totalled almost $70,000,000.

On the stock market, the trend of prices was generally lower. The same downward trend prevailed in the price of grain on account of the large offerings by growers.

The average price of twenty representative industrial issues o the New York stock exchange was $93.32 compared with $94.96 last week. The average price of twenty railroad stocks was 82.46 compared with $83.22 last week.

Liberty Bonds Lower.

A majority of Liberty Bonds declined in price during the week. The largest decline was in the Liberty 3½ issue.

Bradstreets' reported 440 business failures this week compared with 438 last week, and 407 the preceding week. Most of them were in the southern states.

Bank clearings in the United States were estimated this week at $8,762,396,461, as compared with $8,271,438,473 last week.

The amount of the cotton crop brought into sight this week totals 287,594 bales, as compared with 362,272 bales last week. The total exports this week were 257,572 bales as compared with 118,136 bales last week. The visible supply of the United States cotton is estimated at 3,371,081 bales, as compared with 3,358,142 bales last week.

The visible supply of United States wheat increased 1,261,000 bushels during the last week. The Canadian visible supply gained 2,664,000 bushels.

AN OMAHA DOCTOR IN MOTOR CRASH

Only Slightly Hurt When Car Goes Off Road and Companion Killed.

Accident Occurs While Physician Visiting Relatives In the East.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 22—An automobile driven by Dr. Peter G. Daschavsky of Omaha, Neb., who has been visiting his mother in Bridgeport, Conn., skidded off the Post road in Southport, Conn., near Buckleys bridge, burst into flames and fell over a ten foot embankment, landing upside down. Dr. Philip Greenberg, local physician, who was a passenger in the car, died in St. Vincents hospital at Bridgeport from severe burns and injuries received in the accident.

Dr. Daschavsky told the police that he was about to pass a motor truck laden with telegraph poles when he observed another automobile coming toward him. He said men he applied both foot and emergency brakes, the car swerved off the road. Dr. Greenberg's clothing was in flames when he was lifted from under the car, which was destroyed. Dr. Daschavsky suffered only slight injuries, having been thrown clear of the wreck.

Dr. Greenberg was graduated from the Yale scientific school in 1916, and from Yale medical school in 1920, where he received his degree of M. D.

LUDENDORFF BEING CLOSELY GUARDED

Fear New Coup May Be Brewing In Bavaria, Reports Declare.

Police Censoring All Mail Addressed to Adolf Hitler, Who Is In Jail.

(United Press.)

BERLN, Dec. 22.—A close watch was being maintained by the German government today over General Ludendorff and Adolf Hitler, his associate in the attempt to declare a separate Bavarian state two months ago. Reports to the government said a new effort at a coup d' etat was brewing in Bavaria and that both Ludendorff and Hitler were implicated. Police officials placed a strong guard around Ludendorff's villa in Munich, where the general has bene a "prisoner of honor" and denied admission to visit Berlin.

The general rushed into the yard once, and shouted:

"You see I am completely surrounded here."

The pan-Germans were taken to the police station, questioned and released on promise not to try to break through the guard lines again. Police also have been censoring all mail coming to and going from Ludendorff's villa for some time, and the jail where Hitler has been confined has bene closely watched following threats of a jail delivery by his fascisti followers.

Several Arrested.

A number of Hitlerites worked close by, have also been arrested in connection with efforts to force his release.

Meantime it was reported that a widespread movement has been started to improve the industrial and financial situation.

Industrial groups are negotiating with London bankers for loans which will be turned over to the government. Some difficulties have been encountered but it was reported tonight prospects were favorable for successful completion of the negotiations.

It was learned the acquiescence of the German government to the proposed Rhenish gold bank was due to assurances received by the industrialists that Premier Poincare of France, will allow circulation of the new German rente marks in the German territory occupied by France through the gold bank.

In other words, it was said, Poincare's acquiescence of entrance of the rente mark into the occupied territory means the mortgages on which these marks are based shall have priority over reparations, thus making the currency more stable.

Accept Offer From M'Millan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — Rear Admiral William A. Moffatt this afternoon accepted an offer of assistance tendered by Captain Donald McMillan, noted arctic explorer, who expressed in a radio message to the navy department a wish to co-operate in the projected aerial expedition to the north pole. McMillan is now aboard his ship Bowdoin, fast in the ice in the polar region.

In his message to Admiral Moffatt McMillan suggested that May or June would be the months best suited for the arctic flight, because there were no winds then. He said there were natives and na abundance of game within 400 miles of the north pole.

The use of a big dirigible, such as the Shenandoah, was advocated by McMillan for the trip.

A special navy board is now working out plans for the expedition.

Hawaiians Asking Road Building Aid

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Governor Wallace R. Farrington of Hawaii, today urged upon the house territories committee the extension of the continental United States good roads and postal laws to Hawaii.

The governor stated that goods roads and the extension of the postal service were needed, and that the Hawaiian government was ready to contribute its proportionate share in order to take advantage of federal aid in building roads.

Former Doughboy Offers Blood To Woman Who Saved His Life

(International News Service.)

PARS, Dec. 22.—Albert B. Hauser of Akron, O., a former doughboy of the First division attempted to give a "Christmas gift" blood transfusion to a good angel who had saved his own life when he wanted to commit suicide for unrequitted love.

The woman for whom Hauser wished to give his life's blood is Mrs. F. W. Moreno, formerly Frances Welwood, of Brooklyn, N. Y., secretary of theAmerican aid society in Paris, who has befriended many a "down and out doughboy."

On October 31 Hauser attempted suicide because his French war bride refused to return to the United States with him. Later, in a despondent mood, he wanted to take his life but was dissuaded by Mrs. Moreno.

Learning that Mrs. Moreno was ill at the American hospital at Neuilly, Hauser went this afternoon to inquire after the condition of his benefactress. He learned that a blood transfusion was necessary.

Leaves Broken Hearted.

After being examined the surgeons declared that Hauser himself was too weak for a blood transfusion. He departed broken hearted for his poor quarters in the small hotel where he is living in the suburb of Colombes.

Hauser is working for the Paris branch of the Goodrich Rubber company at $10 a week, trying to save enough money to return home.

Specialists who attended Mrs. Moreno decided late tonight that she was too weak to stand a blood transfusion. Instead they extracted some of her own blood and re-injected it under the skin. Her condition at midnight was critical.

RASSLERS EDGE UP TO LINCOLN MATCH

Krieger and Fritz Hansen of North Carolina About to Sign For Bout.

Revival of rasseling in Lincoln is booked for early in January, with the eleventh of the month as the probable date on which the bone-crushers will do their stuff. Returning to Lincoln to make ready for his removal to St. Joseph after the holiday season, Adam Krieger, claimant of the world's championship in the junior middleweight brigade, proclaimed Saturday night that he is all but matched with Frizt Hansan, North Carolina grappler, in a main event to be staged next month on a local mat.

Hansen has been touring the north for several months, lately bending the bones of Iowa middleweights and otherwise deporting as a top-classer in his division.

A challenge from Hansen to Krieger's manager provoked a response that the southern athlete might have a match, provided he would make 158 at 5 p. m., the day of the tussel. Hansen is reputed to have given his approval and formal announcement that the match is a go should be forthcoming early next week.

Krieger Wins Two Matches.

Krieger emerged victorious from two mat bouts last week, dumping Carl Furniss, Chicago middle, and Gusc Karros, St. Joseph Greek. Furniss, who once wrestled two-hours draw with Champion Johnny Meyers, gave Krieger a stiff argument at Marysville, Mo. Krieger copped the first fall in 49 minutes, using a step-over toe hold, but the Chicago athlete later hooked Krieger with a double wristlock and Adam conceded the second fall in nine minutes. Resuming the bout, Furniss tried for a flying mare, but Adam slipped away and tossed the Chicagoan on his noodle Furniss hit the boards so hard that the blow knocked him out and Krieger was awarded the third fall and decision.

Wants Another Whirl.

Furniss has challenged for another the extent of 500 smackers.. Adam whirl at Krieger's game, offering to has given his O. K., to the suggestion, but demands that Furniss make 158 at 5 p. m. Krieger's manager said last night he would invite Furniss to go on in the preliminary of the next match in Lincoln, thus to show his stuff before a local audience, all of which may lead up to another Krieger Furniss Joust.

Krieger's next match will be with Ray Chick, former Sidney, Neb., middleweight. Adam and Chicak are scheduled to mingle December 29 at Clarinda, Ia.

LINCOLN TO HAVE GIRL CADET CORPS

Young Women Drilling Under Expert Overseas Drillmaster.

Announcement of the organization of a girls' cadet corps in Lincoln was made Friday by H. A. Geoglein, a member of Company A, Nebraska National Guard, and considered by guardsmen as one of the best drillmasters in the guard. Mr Geoglein has undertaken to drill the girls in foot movements common to the infantry, and also in the manual of arms.

The girls making up the cadet corps are all well known in Lincoln and are taking considerable interest in the work, according to the announcement. They drill once each week, and thus far there has not been one of the thirty already in the corps who has missed being at drill. It is planned to increase the membership to at least fifty and girls who desire to join the corps can make application by writing to corps headquarters which have been established temporarily at 812 Security Mutual building

Mr. Geoglein has as assistants F. H. Weyand and Clarence Stewart, also overseas men.

WIZARD SPRINTER IN ROLE OF SPHINX

Charley Paddock Declines to Get Back at President of the A. A. U.

Demon of Cinder Path Confident of Place On Uncle Sam's Team.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 22.—Charley Paddock's reply to the latest attack on his sportmanship, made by President W. N. Prout of the A. A. U., was a hearty laugh.

Still crippled as a result of an accident in the east some days ago, in which he sprained an ankle, the world's champion sprinter hobbled around his parents' home here this afternoon and refused to worry.

"Only please don't ask me to say anything now," Paddock implored, commenting on Prout's declaration today before the executive committee of the American Olympics, that as long as he was president" he would refuse to sign any certificate of character for Paddock."

"I've got a number of friends and organizations backing me," the track star told a reporter, when informed of the eastern session." "But I'm not able to make any comment at present. My supporters have asked me to keep still for a while and I guess I'll have to."

Paddock is charged with disobeying the A. A. U. dictates by participation in a Paris athletic contest more than a year ago.

Drive for Olympic Funds.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Funds to finance the American Olympic expedition to Paris next summer will be raised by a company which makes a specialty of conducting "drives," according to a resolution adopted by the executive committee of the American Olympic committee in session here this afternoon.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, president of the committee, said that the company would not take a percentage of the money resulting from the drive, but that it would be paid a flat sum that would be available "from a private source."

The "drive" committee has started work and has appointed committees in twenty-eight major cities of the United States, assuming the obligation of raising $350,000 to send the various American teams to Paris.

Julius Barnes, treasurer of the committee, reported that only a little over $15,000 was in the treasury now and that $10,000 had been spent in binding contracts entered into in France in making provisions for the maintenance of the team.

Molla Mallory Invited.

In a discussion that arose when tennis was brought up, the committee voted favorably on a resolution to invite Mrs. Molla Mallory, former American tennis champion, to accompany the team to Paris as a guest if the committee is unable to have her made eligible for competition.

The committee voted to send nine hockey players, a trainer and a manager, and to provide uniforms for them as well as for the speed and figure skaters.

It was also voted to hold the swimming trials in Indianapolis June 5, 6 and 7, instead of the previous dates, as it has become necessary for the big team to sail June 17 instead June 18.

The rowing committee reported that the trials would be held in Philadelphia June 13 and 14. Communications seeking particulars have been received from the University of Washington, Yale and the Navy, it was reported.

Prout Denounces Paddock.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — Charley Paddock, world's champion sprinter, was practically barred as a candidate for the American Olympic team of 1924, at a meeting of the executive committee of the American Olympic committee here late this afternoon.

Before the committee, William C. Prout, president of the amateur athletic union, announced that "as long as I am president and as long as Charles Paddock continues to act as he has, I will refuse to sign any certificate of character for him,"

After Prout had gone into the details of the A. A. U.'s case against Paddock and bitterly denounced him for several reasons, Colonel Robert M. Thompson, president of the American Olympic committee, said.

"Good legs cannot make up for a good heart and a good head. We cannot send to Paris any athlete who is not a real American gentleman."

Talked of Test Case.

Prout went on to say that Paddock said, while in Paris, he was being used as a test case and that he later wrote a magazine article in which he said the same thing.

Prout said the A. A. U. did not care to assume the position of an youth, who could be forgiven many things because of his youth, but that the A. A. U. was forced to fight and would fight when it was announced by the national collegiate association that some of their athletes would not be allowed to go to the games if Paddock was not reinstated.

Takes Rap at the Coast.

"The A. A. U. preferred to remain silent until it became apparent that Paddock's actions and statements might seriously interfere with the organization of the 1924 track and field meet," Prout said.

He said he had heard that the Pacific coast would not contribute any funds unless Paddock should be declared eligible and that if he would be appointed on the team $25,000 would be arranged.

"The same section raised only $2,200 to finance the 1920 team," he said.

The injection of the case of the A. A. U. against Paddock assumed heated proportions when Prout charged vehemently that the national collegiate association and Elwood Brown of the Y. M. C. A. had laid plans for a case to test the soverignty of the A. A. U. and that Paddock had been selected as the test when he was sent to Paris.

Not a College Athlete.

Prout charged that Paddock was not a college athlete, that he was on a leave of absence from the University of Southern California, and that the meet in which he competed in Paris was not a collegiate meet, but a club meet.

General Charles Sherrill, former American minister to Argentine, who was in Paris during the games, added that the games were not college games and that there were several things about the gate receipts that he considered very interesting

ALL-STAR TEAMS IN DIAMOND SPORT

Baseball Historian Selects the Greatest Players In Annals of Pastime.

Flashy Play In Few Seasons Not Sufficient to Win Reward Of Merit.

BY MACLEAN KENNEDY.

It isn't possible to pick nine baseball players who were, or are, conceded to be the greatest the game ever enrolled. It isn't even possible to pick a team which would meet with the approval of sixty per cent of fandom, to say nothing about the experts. But it is possible to pick a team made up of players who were, in different periods, considered the best players the game ever had and were considered so until other players came into the game whom the fans of that particular period believed to be the greatest ever.

One couldn't, for instance, convince the fans of Anson's time that any other player ever would break into baseball who would excel the great Anson or equal his record as a player and batsman. Jack Glasscock, thirty years ago, was accepted as the greatest of all shortstops. Every fan of those days believed in his heart the game would never produce his equal for not alone was Glasscock a wonderful infielder but he was a genuine .300 hitter.

Then Came Jennings.

Glasscock was still in big league baseball when there appeared a certain Hughie Jennings, a scarlet-topped rookie, who, in the course of a few seasons, made the fans forget Jack Glasscock and for many seasons Hugh Jennings was acclaimed the "best ever."

So one can thumb all the pages of diamond history and name player after player whom the baseball public considered the greatest in the game at the moment they were at the crest of the wave of public favor.

But, as true as time, there were and are players who excel and excelled other players of their particular period, players who possessed every qualification that is necessary to place them in a class slightly above the accepted great ones. There are players in the history of the game whose names are handed down as athletes of a superior type and men who were, physically and mentally, of a higher order than the general run of big league players, and these qualities found in a player will surely place his efforts just a shade beyond the efforts of other great players.

Stars of Three Periods.

Taking the game from 1884, dividing it into three periods and selecting 17 players from each period would reveal about fifty of the greatest and most valuable players the game ever knew. This wouldn't cover all the great players by many hundreds, but the players named in their respective periods were accepted as the best. For instance, the great Radbourne had two seasons in which he created records in pitching that excel all other achievements in the history of the game, but Radbourne, in his other nine seasons, pitched good but not a remarkable brand of ball John Clarkson and Tim Keefe of the same period pitched unusually brilliant ball in nine of the 11 seasons they were in big league company.

Why such stars as Cobb, Speaker and Johnson tower above the average great player comes from the fact that these stellar performers have shown a consistency in effective and brilliant play year after year, seemingly getting better each year.

Such first basemen as Anson, Roger Connor, Fred Tenney and George Sisler possessed qualities in their own particular way that made them more valuable as players than the average good first-sacker of the game. "Buck" Ewing, besides being a great catcher, was a wonderful batsman, baserunner and active, brainy player. Charlie ("Kid") Nichols and "Cy" Young, in certain respects, were the most valuable pitchers the game ever had, but Clarkson, Mathewson, Johnson, Alexander and Ed Walsh had records which gave a touch, a finish to their work, besides a consistency throughout their entire careers which other great hurlers lack when a careful analysis of the record is made.

The game has known many great second basemen, but any school boy could name three who are the greatest—Larry Lajoie, Eddie Collins and Rogers Hornsby—greatest because these stars possessed hitting ability equal to the best and fielding records which are the best of all the second-sackers in history.

Wagner King of Shortstops.

Honus Wagner is easily the choice of shortstops for an All-time All-Star team because he is the greatest hitting shortstop the game ever had and besides ranks fourth in fielding of all the famous shortstops of the game.

Jimmy Collins of the Boston clubs—he played on both Boston teams—has been the selection for third base by experts for many years. Collins, while a splendid batsman, couldn't hit so hard as John McGraw, Denny Lyons, "Deacon" White or Frank Baker, for each of this quartet was a real .300 hitter, but Collins was a smarter player, and a close student of the game, possessing qualities which made him a great leader as well as a great ball player.

How the Stars Are Selected.

In sorting out the stars the following qualifications are strictly adhered to: Number of seasons of valuable service. Batting and fielding ability and records. Consistency in play and all-around service. Habits, temperament and proper spirit. The hurlers, including the above qualifications, have been rated according to the number of seasons of pitching superior ball compared with the average great hurler. In addition to records in percentage of base hits made off delivery, earned runs, strikeouts, small hit games shutouts and control. Only players who have had five or more full seasons in major league baseball are considered. The averages are for lifetime work in major league baseball

DAILY THOUGHT.

EVERS ON PAYROLL AS COACH FOR SOX

Once Famous Cub Infielder First Lieutenant Of His Former Manager.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—The recent signing of Johnny Evers as coach of the White Sox team by Frank Chance, new manager, brings back a flood of memories to the old time fans, particularly those who follow the National league.

For it means the reunion of two of the members of the famous old double-play combination which was without a rival for years—Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance.

How many times did the Cubs, then monarchs of the baseball world, pull themselves out of the hole in critical games through the dazzling work of these three men on an infield grounder.

Tinker to Evers to Chance!

Why, they were death on any ball that came south of third base!

Joe Tinker was the mainspring. Most of the plays started with him. He was the man at short. Johnny Evers, at second, was the pivot man. And Frank Chance took Evers' throws from any angle at first.

Chance to Pilot White Sox.

The first of the famous trio returned to Chicago—although to the other side of the town—when Chance was recently signed to manage the White Sox.

Chance started his big league career as a catcher. He joined the Cubs on the spring training trip of 1908 as a backstop and held to that berth until he was moved to first in 1903 that the club might have the benefit of his batting and fielding in every game.

Frank Selee was forced to relinquish the managerial job because of ill health and Chance was named to take over the reins In 1906 the peerless leader led the team to the National league pennant but lost the world's series to the famous "Hitless Wonders"—the White Sox, led by Fielder Jones.

Won Two World Series.

The next two years Chance led the club to the National and world pennants. The Cubs again won the National league flag in 1910, under Chance's guidance. In 1913 Chance tried to guide the New York Yanks to a pennant and would have done so but for a series of misfortunes to the main members of the team.

Evers succeeded Chance as manager, but when he failed to win a pennant his first year, Owner Charley Murphy fired him Evers went to the Braves and eventually dropped out as a player. He has kept in the game, however, as a coach

Joe Tinker tried his hand at managing the Cleveland American association team, the Columbus A. A. club and the Chicago Federals, before dropping out of the game.

Word of Death of Mrs. Ida Burns Is Received Here

Word has just been received by several prominent Lincoln families of the death of Mrs. Ida Burns of Cleveland, O., formerly a resident of Lincoln. Mrs. Burns' death occurred after a long illness

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Burns were prominent pioneers of Lincoln, having lived here twenty-five years ago. In 1899 Mrs. Burns moved to Cleveland after the death of her husband but had, until her death, been living with her daughter, Dorothy Burns of Chicago, and Mrs. Sidney Vernon of St. Louis, Missouri.

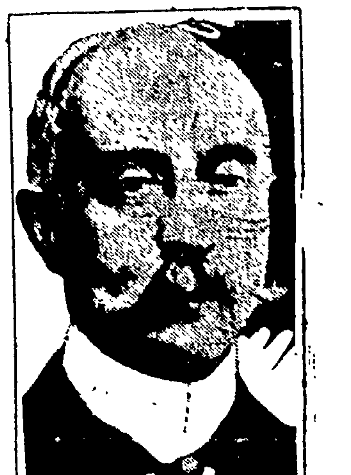
Teacher Taking Santa Claus Role Seriously Burned

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Dec. 23.— Christmas celebration at the Buellton school near here, was turned into tragedy when fire ignited the Santa Claus costume of Miss Henrietta Dier, school teacher, and she was badly burned.

Miss Dier is said to have struck a match to light candles on the Christmas tree and the match flame ignited the cotton whiskers of her costume. She will probably recover

GREEK TIDES OF UNREST SWEEP OUT KING, INSTALL REGENT

George II and Elizabeth, exiled king and queen of Greece.



Admiral Coundouriotis.

The tenth ruler to be driven from his throne since the beginning of the World war is now in exile in Roumania with his queen. King George II and Queen Elizabeth have left Greece perhaps never to return. George is a little better off than some of his deposed royal cousins; he took with him 1,000,000 drachmas and the knowledge that he is on the Greek civil list with a pension of 1,500,000 drachmas. (A drachma is normally worth about 19 cents.)

King George has not formally abdicated, but it is unlikely that he will ever reign again, even if the monarchy is restored. A new king would be elected if the present choas fails to end in the formation of a republic.

The tides of unrest which have three times in 10 years swept a ruler from the throne of Greece this time left Admiral Coundouriotis, former minister of marine, in power as regent.

RASSLERS EDGE UP TO LINCOLN MATCH

Krieger and Fritz Hansen of North Carolina About to Sign For Bout.

Revival of rasseling in Lincoln is booked for early in January, with the eleventh of the month as the probable date on which the bone-crushers will do their stuff. Returning to Lincoln to make ready for his removal to St. Joseph after the holiday season, Adam Krieger, claimant of the world's championship in the junior middleweight brigade, proclaimed Saturday night that he is all but matched with Frizt Hansan, North Carolina grappler, in a main event to be staged next month on a local mat.

Hansen has been touring the north for several months, lately bending the bones of Iowa middleweights and otherwise deporting as a top-classer in his division.

A challenge from Hansen to Krieger's manager provoked a response that the southern athlete might have a match, provided he would make 158 at 5 p. m., the day of the tussel. Hansen is reputed to have given his approval and formal announcement that the match is a go should be forthcoming early next week.

Krieger Wins Two Matches.

Krieger emerged victorious from two mat bouts last week, dumping Carl Furniss, Chicago middle, and Gusc Karros, St. Joseph Greek. Furniss, who once wrestled two-hours draw with Champion Johnny Meyers, gave Krieger a stiff argument at Marysville, Mo. Krieger copped the first fall in 49 minutes, using a step-oyer toe hold, but the Chicago athlete later hooked Krieger with a double wristlock and Adam conceded the second fall in nine minutes. Resuming the bout, Furniss tried for a flying mare, but Adam slipped away and tossed the Chicagoan on his noodle. Furniss hit the boards so hard that the blow knocked him out and Krieger was awarded the third fall and decision.

Wants Another Whirl.

Furniss has challenged for another the extent of 500 smackers.. Adam whirl at Krieger's game, offering to has given his O. K., to the suggestion, but demands that Furniss make 158 at 5 p. m. Krieger's manager said last night he would invite Furniss to go on in the preliminary of the next match in Lincoln, thus to show his stuff before a local audience, all of which may lead up to another Krieger Furniss Joust.

Krieger's next match will be with Ray Chick, former Sidney, Neb., middleweight. Adam and Chicak are scheduled to mingle December 29 at Clarinda, Ia.

LINCOLN TO HAVE GIRL CADET CORPS

Young Women Drilling Under Expert Overseas Drill-master.

Announcement of the organization of a girls' cadet corps in Lincoln was made Friday by H. A. Geoglein, a member of Company A, Nebraska National Guard, and considered by guardsmen as one of the best drill-masters in the guard. Mr Geoglein has undertaken to drill the girls in foot movements common to the infantry, and also in the manual of arms.

The girls making up the cadet corps are all well known in Lincoln and are taking considerable interest in the work, according to the announcement. They drill once each week, and thus far there has not been one of the thirty already in the corps who has missed being at drill. It is planned to increase the membership to at least fifty and girls who desire to join the corps can make application by writing to corps headquarters which have been established temporarily at 812 Security Mutual building.

Mr. Geoglein has as assistants F. H. Weyand and Clarence Stewart, also overseas men.

WIZARD SPRINTER IN ROLE OF SPHINX

Charley Paddock Declines to Get Back at President of the A. A. U.

Demon of Cinder Path Confident of Place On Uncle Sam's Team.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 22.—Charley Paddock's reply to the latest attack on his sportmanship, made by President W. N. Prout of the A. A. U., was a hearty laugh.

Still crippled as a result of an accident in the east some days ago, in which he sprained an ankle, the world's champion sprinter hobbled around his parents' home here this afternoon and refused to worry.

"Only please don't ask me to say anything now," Paddock implored, commenting on Prout's declaration today before the executive committee of the American Olympics, that as long as he was president" he would refuse to sign any certificate of character for Paddock."

"I've got a number of friends and organizations backing me," the track star told a reporter, when informed of the eastern session. "But I'm not able to make any comment at present. My supporters have asked me to keep still for a while and I guess I'll have to."

Paddock is charged with disobeying the A. A. U. dictates by participation in a Paris athletic contest more than a year ago.

Drive for Olympic Funds.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Funds to finance the American Olympic expedition to Paris next summer will be raised by a company which makes a specialty of conducting "drives," according to a resolution adopted by the executive committee of the American Olympic committee in session here this afternoon.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, president of the committee, said that the company would not take a percentage of the money resulting from the drive, but that it would be paid a flat sum that would be available "from a private source."

The "drive" committee has started work and has appointed committees in twenty-eight major cities of the United States, assuming the obligation of raising $350,000 to send the various American teams to Paris.

Julius Barnes, treasurer of the committee, reported that only a little over $15,000 was in the treasury now and that $10,000 had been spent in binding contracts entered into in France in making provisions for the maintenance of the team.

Molla Mallory Invited.

In a discussion that arose when tennis was brought up, the committee voted favorably on a resolution to invite Mrs. Molla Mallory, former American tennis champion, to accompany the team to Paris as a guest if the committee is unable to have her made eligible for competition.

The committee voted to send nine hockey players, a trainer and a anager, and to provide uniforms for them as well as for the speed and figure skaters.

It was also voted to hold the swimming trials in Indianapolis June 5, 6 and 7, instead of the previous dates, as it has become necessary for the big team to sail June 17 instead June 18.

The rowing committee reported that the trials would be held in Philadelphia June 13 and 14. Communications seeking particulars have been received from the University of Washington, Yale and the Navy, it was reported.

Prout Denounces Paddock.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — Charley Paddock, world's champion sprinter, was practically barred as a candidate for the American Olympic team of 1924, at a meeting of the executive committee of the American Olympic committee here late this afternoon.

Before the committee, William C. Prout, president of the amateur athletic union, announced that "as long as I am president and as long as Charles Paddock continues to act as he has, I will refuse to sign any certificate of character for him."

After Prout had gone into the details of the A. A. U.'s case against Paddock and bitterly denounced him for several reasons, Colonel Robert M. Thompson, president of the American Olympic committee, said:

"Good legs cannot make up for a good heart and a good head. We cannot send to Paris any athlete who is not a real American gentleman."

Talked of Test Case.

Prout went on to say that Paddock said, while in Paris, he was being used as a test case and that he later wrote a magazine article in which he said the same thing.

Prout said the A. A. U. did not care to assume the position of an youth, who could be forgiven many things because of his youth, but that the A. A. U. was forced to fight and would fight when it was announced by the national collegiate association that some of their athletes would not be allowed to go to the games if Paddock was not reinstated.

Takes Rap at the Coast.

"The A. A. U. preferred to remain silent until it became apparent that Paddock's actions and statements might seriously interfere with the organization of the 1924 track and field meet," Prout said.

He said he had heard that the Pacific coast would not contribute any funds unless Paddock should be declared eligible and that if he would be appointed on the team $25,000 would be arranged.

"The same section raised only $2,200 to finance the 1920 team," he said.

The injection of the case of the A. A. U. against Paddock assumed heated proportions when Prout charged vehemently that the national collegiate association and Elwood Brown of the Y. M. C. A. had laid plans for a case to test the soverignty of the A. A. U. and that Paddock had been selected as the test when he was sent to Paris.

Not a College Athlete.

Prout charged that Paddock was not a college athlete, that he was on a leave of absence from the University of Southern California, and that the meet in which he competed in Paris was not a collegiate meet, but a club meet.

General Charles Sherrill, former American minister to Argentine, who was in Paris during the games, added that the games were not college games and that there were several things about the gate receipts that he considered very interesting.

ALL-STAR TEAMS IN DIAMOND SPORT

Baseball Historian Selects the Greatest Players In Annals of Pastime.

Flashy Play In Few Seasons Not Sufficient to Win Reward Of Merit.

BY MACLEAN KENNEDY.

It isn't possible to pick nine baseball players who were, or are, conceded to be the greatest the game ever enrolled. It isn't even possible to pick a team which would meet with the approval of sixty per cent of fandom, to say nothing about the experts. But it is possible to pick a team made up of players who were, in different periods, considered the best players the game ever had and were considered so until other players came into the game whom the fans of that particular period believed to be the greatest ever.

One couldn't, for instance, convince the fans of Anson's time that any other player ever would break into baseball who would excel the great Anson or equal his record as a player and batsman. Jack Glasscock, thirty years ago, was accepted as the greatest of all shortstops. Every fan of those days believed in his heart the game would never produce his equal for not alone was Glasscock a wonderful infielder but he was a genuine .300 hitter.

Then Came Jennings.

Glasscock was still in big league baseball when there appeared a certain Hughie Jennings, a scarlet-topped rookie, who, in the course of a few seasons, made the fans forget Jack Glasscock and for many seasons Hugh Jennings was acclaimed the "best ever."

So one can thumb all the pages of diamond history and name player after player whom the baseball public considered the greatest in the game at the moment they were at the crest of the wave of public favor.

But, as true as time, there were and are players who excel and excelled other players of their particular period, players who possessed every qualification that is necessary to place them in a class slightly above the accepted great ones. There are players in the history of the game whose names are handed down as athletes of a superior type and men who were, physically and mentally, of a higher order than the general run of big league players, and these qualities found in a player will surely place his efforts just a shade beyond the efforts of other great players.

Stars of Three Periods.

Taking the game from 1884, dividing it into three periods and selecting 17 players from each period would reveal about fifty of the greatest and most valuable players the game ever knew. This wouldn't cover all the great players by many hundreds, but the players named in their respective periods were accepted as the best. For instance, the great Radbourne had two seasons in which he created records in pitching that excel all other achievements in the history of the game, but Radbourne, in his other nine seasons, pitched good but not a remarkable brand of ball. John Clarkson and Tim Keefe of the same period pitched unusually brilliant ball in nine of the 11 seasons they were in big league company.

Why such stars as Cobb, Speaker and Johnson tower above the average great player comes from the fact that these stellar performers have shown a consistency in effective and brilliant play year after year, seemingly getting better each year.

Such first basemen as Anson, Roger Connor, Fred Tenney and George Sisler possessed qualities in their own particular way that made them more valuable as players than the average good first-sacker of the game. "Buck" Ewing, besides being a great catcher, was a wonderful batsman, baserunner and active, brainy player. Charlie ("Kid") Nichols and "Cy" Young, in certain respects, were the most valuable pitchers the game ever had, but Clarkson, Mathewson, Johnson, Alexander and Ed Walsh had records which gave a touch, a finish to their work, besides a consistency throughout their entire careers which other great hurlers lack when a careful analysis of the record is made.

The game has known many great second basemen, but any school boy could name three who are the greatest—Larry Lajoie, Eddie Collins and Rogers Hornsby—greatest because these stars possessed hitting ability equal to the best and fielding records which are the best of all the second-sackers in history.

Wagner King of Shortstops.

Honus Wagner is easily the choice of shortstops for an All-time All-Star team because he is the greatest hitting shortstop the game ever had and besides ranks fourth in fielding of all the famous shortstops of the game.

Jimmy Collins of the Boston clubs—he played on both Boston teams—has been the selection for third base by experts for many years. Collins, while a splendid batsman, couldn't hit so hard as John McGraw, Denny Lyons, "Deacon" White or Frank Baker, for each of this quartet was a real .300 hitter, but Collins was a smarter player, and a close student of the game, possessing qualities which made him a great leader as well as a great ball player.

How the Stars Are Selected.

In sorting out the stars the following qualifications are strictly adhered to: Number of seasons of valuable service. Batting and fielding ability and records. Consistency in play and all-around service. Habits, temperament and proper spirit. The hurlers, including the above qualifications, have been rated according to the number of seasons of pitching superior ball compared with the average great hurler, in addition to records in percentage of base hits made off delivery, earned runs, strikeouts, small hit games shutouts and control. Only players who have had five or more full seasons in major league baseball are considered. The averages are for lifetime work in major league baseball.

EVERS ON PAYROLL AS COACH FOR SOX

Once Famous Cub Infielder First Lieutenant Of His Former Manager.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—The recent signing of Johnny Evers as coach of the White Sox team by Frank Chance, new manager, brings back a flood of memories to the old time fans, particularly those who follow the National league.

For it means the reunion of two of the members of the famous old double-play combination which was without a rival for years—Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance.

How many times did the Cubs, then monarchs of the baseball world, pull themselves out of the hole in critical games through the dazzling work of these three men on an infield grounder.

Tinker to Evers to Chance!

Why, they were death on any ball that came south of third base!

Joe Tinker was the mainspring. Most of the plays started with him. He was the man at short. Johnny Evers, at second, was the pivot man. And Frank Chance took Evers' throws from any angle at first.

Chance to Pilot White Sox.

The first of the famous trio returned to Chicago—although to the other side of the town—when Chance was recently signed to manage the White Sox.

Chance started his big league career as a catcher. He joined the Cubs on the spring training trip of 1908 as a backstop and held to that berth until he was moved to first in 1903 that the club might have the benefit of his batting and fielding in every game.

Frank Selee was forced to relinquish the managerial job because of ill health and Chance was named to take over the reins. In 1906 the peerless leader led the team to the National league pennant but lost the world's series to the famous "Hitless Wonders"—the White Sox, led by Fielder Jones.

Won Two World Series.

The next two years Chance led the club to the National and world pennants. The Cubs again won the National league flag in 1910, under Chance's guidance. In 1913 Chance tried to guide the New York Yanks to a pennant and would have done so but for a series of misfortunes to the main members of the team.

Evers succeeded Chance as manager, but when he failed to win a pennant his first year, Owner Charley Murphy fired him. Evers went to the Braves and eventually dropped out as a player. He has kept in the game, however, as a coach.

Joe Tinker tried his hand at managing the Cleveland American association team, the Columbus A. A. club and the Chicago Federals, before dropping out of the game.

Word of Death of Mrs. Ida Burns Is Received Here

Word has just been received by several prominent Lincoln families of the death of Mrs. Ida Burns of Cleveland, O., formerly a resident of Lincoln. Mrs. Burns' death occurred after a long illness.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Burns were prominent pioneers of Lincoln, having lived here twenty-five years ago. In 1899 Mrs. Burns moved to Cleveland after the death of her husband but had, until her death, been living with her daughter, Dorothy Burns of Chicago, and Mrs. Sidney Vernon of St. Louis, Missouri.

Teacher Taking Santa Claus Role Seriously Burned

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Dec. 23.— Christmas celebration at the Buellton school near here, was turned into tragedy when fire ignited the Santa Claus costume of Miss Henrietta Dier, school teacher, and she was badly burned.

Miss Dier is said to have struck a match to light candles on the Christmas tree and the match flame ignited the cotton whiskers of her costume. She will probably recover

GREEK TIDES OF UNREST SWEEP OUT KING, INSTALL REGENT

George II and Elizabeth, exiled king and queen of Greece.

Admiral Coundourictis.

The tenth ruler to be driven from his throne since the beginning of the World war is now in exile in Roumania with his queen. King George II and Queen Elizabeth have left Greece perhaps never to return. George is a little better off than some of his deposed royal cousins; he took with him 1,000,000 drachmas and the knowledge that he is on the Greek civil list with a pension of 1,500,000 drachmas. (A drachma is normally worth about 19 cents.)

King George has not formally abdicated, but it is unlikely that he will ever reign again, even if the monarchy is restored. A new king would be elected if the present choas fails to end in the formation of a republic.

The tides of unrest which have three times in 10 years swept a ruler from the throne of Greece this time left Admiral Coundouriotis, former minister of marine, in power as regent.

LIFE AND CHARACTER READING.

The inordinate social and intellectual ambition of Capricorn is modified by the more ethereal and democratic attributes of its neighbor Sagittarius. These people are born on what is known as the cusp of Sagittarius, Capricorn, thus the influence of each sign is modified. The governing planet is still the jolly Jupiter, and the birthstone remains a diamond, while the astral colors are green and gold.

These people are great talkers and the great workers of the world. They are inspired teachers of the young, and much fonder of children than the average Capricorner, who expects little folks to be constantly on their good behavior.

It is a great mistake for parents to interfere with this universal love and friendliness which these children bear for others. It is a rare and much needed element in this world and should be cultivated.

Poultry Fanciers Want Auditorium For State Exhibit

(Special to The Star.)

HASTINGS, Neb., Dec. 22.—City councilmen here are finding many serious problems facing them as the new municipal auditorium is nearing completion the most pressing of which now is whether or not the building shall be used for poultry or live stock shows.

The members of the County Poultry association are very desirous of getting the 1925 state show here and with others' are pressing their demand that the building be open for that event.

Still other Hastings people are opposing he movement since they declare that unpleasant odors will remain in the building after such shows and make it unfit for other uses.

Judge Turbyfill, captain of the Company G of the Nebraska National guard, declares that poultry shows in the armory have left no trace the day after their close and County Agent Davis explains that the use of disinfectant on the floors of the coops and sawdust on the floor of the building, does away with any odor.

Poultry raisers declare that if the auditorium is closed to the state poultry show Hastings will be denied what, in their estimation is one of the important advantages it ought to derive from the investment the building represents.

The question of location for the 1925 show will come up at the state show in Lincoln on January 7 to 11.

Would Eliminate Sunday Funerals

(Special to The Star.)

HASTINGS, Neb., Dec. 22. — An appeal for co-operation in eliminating Sunday funerals is expected to follow the discussion on the subject at the January meeting of the Ministerial union here.

It was pointed out by a number of ministers seen today that the average pastor is required to participate in four services each Sunday—Sunday school, young people's meeting, and the two regular church services.

It is because of this full program that Hastings ministers declare they could better serve the bereaved on a week day than on Sunday.

DEATH AT ODELL.

(Special to The Star.)

ODELL, Neb., Dec. 22. — Mrs. Harry Tincher, sixty-one, wife of H. F. Tincher, Odell merchant, a resident of this place for many years, died at the family home here Thursday. The husband and a family of grown children survive.

Donelsons Celebrate Their Golden Wedding Anniversary

STROMSBURG, Neb., Dec. 22.—Mayor and Mrs. Andrew C. Donelson celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary Thursday with an entertainment at their home here, attended by children, brothers, relatives and friends.

Mr. Donelson has been mayor of this town since February of this year, when he succeeded to the office on the death of Mayor Johnson. For several years he has been a resident in Stromsburg, and for thirty-five before that lived on his homestead near by.

Though Mrs. Donelson was somewhat ill Thursday, their children, living at home, planned an appropriate program. Among the guests at dinner were Mr. Donelson's two brothers, John Donelson of Doniphan, and Sam Donelson of Central City; his sisters, Mrs. Wallgren of Osceola and Mrs. William Donelson of Marquette; Mrs. Donelson's brother, S. B. Samuelson, and Mrs. Samuelson, of York; Mrs. Donelson's sister, Mrs. Carrie Peterson of Stromsburg; and Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Rose and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Anderson.

Short talks on the past by the guests were given after the dinner. The grandchildren presented a program representing the present. Rev. Rose spoke, and Victor Anderson read a poem. This was followed by singing old time songs.

The home was later thrown open to those who wished to call.

Mr. Donelson was born in Sweden on May 7, 1851, and came to America with his parents four years later. The family first settled in Illinois, where young Andrew worked for his board and received a little education at an early age.

With a wagon, plow, harness and team, partly purchased and partly donated, he came to Nebraska in 1873. He took up a homestead three miles west of Stromsburg, where he lived for thirty-five years.

Mrs. Donelson, who was Maggie E. Samuelson, was born in Sweden January 11, 1855. She also came to Illinois and there met her husband. In December, 1872, she went to Colorado, where she stayed briefly, and came to Columbus, Neb., a year later. The couple were married December 20, 1873, by Judge William E. Loring at the court house in Osceola.

Nine children were born to this union, of whom six still live. They are: Mrs. Florence Haverland, Clinton Donelson, Mrs. Lillie Wilga, Arthur Donelson, William Donelson and Ernest Donelson.

The couple moved from their original homestead to a place nearer town in 1908, and in 1916, took up their residence in the city.

Mr. Donelson's first employment for the city was his appointment by the mayor, thirteen months after his arrival, as a member of the city council. Later he was elected to serve on it, and appointed chairman of the board of councilmen. He became mayor by virtue of his own office when Mayor Johnson died, and the people of the city then regularly elected him to fill the position.

Appoints Trustees For Clarke Estate

HASTINGS, Ney., Dec. 22.—Neil Dunn and A. H. Jones have been appointed by Judge Blackledge in district court to succeed William Lowman and G. F. Evans as trustees of the $1,500,000 estate of A. L. Clarke.

Trust funds and cash amounting to about $200,000 will come immediately into the hands of Mr. Dunn and Mr. Jones, president of the First National bank and president of the A. H. Jones company, respectively.

The new trustees are required to provide bonds of $250,000 each within the next ten days and Judge Blackledge postponed the closing of the present term of district court until these are ready.

The beneficiaries of the estate, which is the largest ever brought for settlement in the courts here, are the two sons and daughters of Mr. Clarke and their families, William D. Clarke and Frank N. Clarke and the brother, J. N. Clarke.

Grand Island Puts Down Heavy Steel

(Special to The Star.)

HANOVER, Kas., Dec. 22. — The St. Joseph and Grand Island railway is laying 90 pound rails in its tracks through the Hanover yards and extending southeast to Bremen, six miles. The new steel is all distributed along the track and is being placed in position as fast as a gang of workmen can lay it, replacing 75 pound stel whic as served in the track for several years. The, heavier steel is necessary on account of the this stretch being a heavy grade and doubleheader and helper engines are used over it most of the time.

Klan Gives Warning To Wymore Citizens

(Special to The Star.)

WYMORE, Neb., Dec. 22. — Some time Friday night posters were tacked up on telephone poles in Wymore and on roads leading into this city, signed "Knights of the K. K. K., Blue Valley Klan, Wymore, Neb." These posters say that judgment will be meted out to violators of the state and federal laws "without fear and without reproach." The authors of the poster also say that the Klan is to "pay special attention to the hordes of darkened automobiles parked along our highways at night; that license numbers are being noted and that action will be taken."

Ludendorff Home Sealed By Police

MUNICH, Dec. 22.—General Ludendorff's home was "sealed" today by the police. Several nationalist leaders were arrested while trying to penetrate the guards. Hundreds of Hitlerites (Bavarian fascisti) also were arrested.

General Ludendorff was arrested six weeks ago when the Hitler revolt in Bavaria was declared, but was paroled on his pledge that he would not take any part in any further negotiations against the government.

GERMAN COLLAPSE IS DRAWING CLOSE

New Year Threatens To Bring Terrific Social Upheaval, Observers Feel.

Present Regime May Be Able To Carry On Only a Few Weeks Longer.

BERLIN, Dec. 22.—Germany's utter financial and economic collapse is near at hand, according to opinion expressed tonight by competent observers. The new year threatens to bring with it a terrific social upheaval.

Some members of the government believe the present regime cannot carry on three weeks longer. A few believe the crash will be postoned until early in the new year.

Officials are not revealing the true seriousness of the situation to the German public. On the contrary, the national catchword is "cheer up."

The leaders argue that the nation "might as well have its last fling with artificial happiness and celebrate Christmas without worrying about tomorrow."

Utterly Hopeless.

Close observers believe no nation in five years has confronted such an utterly hopeless new year as Germany. For the first time in five years the hour seems near when the terrible awakening awaits the people that Germany not only lost the war but everything after the war was lost also.

Unless there is an eleventh hour miracle, there seems no chance for an outside loan. Officials believe a general loan is the only thing that can help the government back to its feet.

Everything in Germany that could be moragaged is already under control of the allied reparations committee.

The rente mark, which is credited with a guarantee of gold bond security, has the appearance of wonderful domestic strength, yet it is impossible to see any tangible pledge to uphold its value. It is like having a mortgage upon a single brick in a house—how is the holder going to take out that brick?

Scores Of "Tips" Run Down In Hopes Of Finding Chicago "Ponzi."

(United Press.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Leo Kortez, the man who sold $10,000,000 worth of "stock" in a Panama swamp, and who promised his clients they would get rich from oil wells that never existed, was still missing tonight.

Investigators, working under States Attorney Robert Crowe, announced that they had run down a score of "tips" as to Kortez whereabouts but were unable to locate him. They will begin all over again, they said, piecing together bit by bit the story of Kortez operations in the hope they may get some clue as to the course of his flight.

"We believe that Kortez must have told someone his plans in the event his fraud was discovered," Stanley Klarkowski, one of Crowe's assistants, stated. "We hope to find some such person and thus learn in what direction he has fled."

Klarkowski said he believed that a man capable of operating such a tremendous fraud as that perpetrated by Kortez would have laid careful plans for escape.

Poultry Fanciers Want Auditorium For State Exhibit

(Special to The Star.)

HASTINGS, Neb., Dec. 22.—City councilmen here are finding many serious problems facing them as the new municipal auditorium is nearing completion the most pressing of which now is whether or not the building shall be used for poultry or live stock shows.

The members of the County Poultry association are very desirous of getting the 1925 state show here and with others' are pressing their demand that the building be open for that event.

Still other Hastings people are opposing he movement since they declare that unpleasant odors will remain in the building after such shows and make it unfit for other uses.

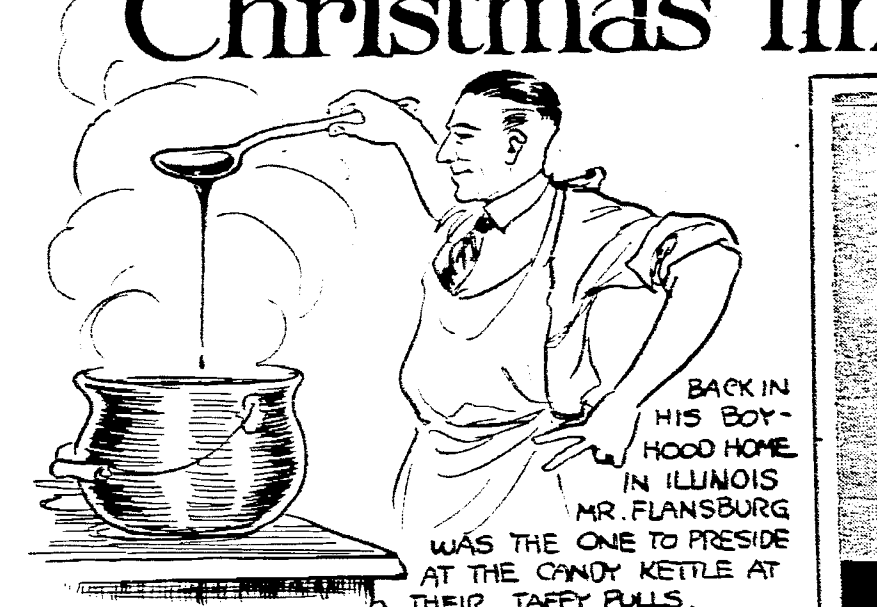
Lincoln Lawyer Tosses Dull Cares Aside at Christmas Time to Make Candy for "The Boys"



BACK IN HIS BOYHOOD HOME IN ILLINOIS MR. FLANSBURG WAS THE ONE TO PRESIDE AT THE CANDY KETTLE AT THEIR TAFFY PULLS.

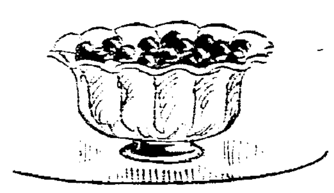
IT WOULDN'T SEEM LIKE CHRISTMAS IF, A COUPLE OF WEEKS BEFORE, THE BOYS AND GRANDCHILDREN COULDN'T PEEK INTO THE KITCHEN AND SEE FATHER BENDING OVER THE BIG KETTLE.



ONE OF THE BEST PARTS OF CHRISTMAS IS THE BIG BOWL OF CANDY.

BY LULU MAE COE.

He makes it for "the boys."

One of "the boys" is a doctor and one is an advertising manager and one is a salesman and one is a lawyer, who has been a judge—but they are "the boys."

Christmas would be only half Christmas to "the boys" if there weren't a big bowl of "father's" candy on the library table.

It wouldn't seem as though the Yuletide season had a proper beginning if for a couple of weeks before "the boys" and the grandchildren couldn't peek into the kitchen in the evenings and see "father" bending over a luscious smelling concoction in a big kettle.

C. C. Flansburg is a lawyer by vocation but he is a candy maker by avocation.

Fifty weeks in the year he pleads the cause of others and upholds the rights of the oppressed, but for two weeks he has a candy complex.

Long, long ago when "the boys" were just little Allen and Leonard and Claude and Harry, they begged "father" for candy. And "father" went into the kitchen and made it for them.

And much longer ago than that when "father" was even younger than "the boys" now, he used to make candy, back home in Illinois.

Not So Many Amusements.

There weren't so many amusements in those days and candy pulls were the amusements de luxe for the young people. Mr. Flansburg always presided at the candy kettle, mixing and stirring the sticky mass until it achieved just the proper stringiness in water. He superintended the cooling and the pulling and the hardening.

And there weren't "no leavins'" from this candy.

Out of those oldtime taffy parties and out of the candy he made for his little boys has grown one of the pleasantest of Christmas customs.

A quarter of a century ago Mr. Flansburg started his own little private celebration of Christmas by making pounds and pounds of candy for "the boys" and for other members of his family.

And never in those twenty-five years has a Yuletide passed without the Flansburg kitchen growing redolent with the co-mingled odors of melting sugar, softening chocolate, and melting butter.

Twentyfive years ago he made his first Christmas candy and in the years that have elapsed Mr. Flansburg has made about twelve hundred and fifty pounds of chocolates and bonbons.

Made 1,250 Pounds.

Twelve hundred and fifty pounds—most of us would think the twelve minus its hundred would be a little more than we would care about.

For this coming Christmas, Mr. Flansburg has prepared forty pounds of fondant, which he considers will make about fifty pounds of candy.

Fifty pounds is an average for a Christmas season, Mr. Flansburg says, but he has made as high as sixty-five or seventy pounds pounds—and that was not longer ago than two or three years.

Mr Flansburg first experimented with his Christmas candy by combining white of an egg and powdered sugar. To him, however, it tasted exactly that—powdered sugar combined with a white of an egg.

He didn't like it. That was not his idea of fondant.

Accordingly, he found a fondant recipe—and upon that little recipe has been founded the twelve hundred and fifty pounds of the best home-made candy in the city of Lincoln.

More tears of amateur candy makers have been shed upon fondant that wouldn't harden or that became brick-like upon leaving the stove than upon any other endeavor.

But Mr. Flansburg—

"Fondant isn't hard to make. It isn't an art at all. The secret lies in knowing when to take it off the stove."

Yes—in knowing "when"—

Mr. Flansburg has learned—many of us haven't.

Careful of Measurements.

This lawyer-candy maker admits that he measures his ingredients—"well, pretty accurately."

But we feel an eye that has gazed upon measuring cups for twenty-five years can guess a cup full "pretty accurately."

When Mr. Flansburg takes his fondant off the stove, he spreads it on a marble slab to cool and sprinkles it with water to prevent crystallization. When it is just the correct coolness—"pretty cool but not too cool, you know, so it will handle well"—Mr. Flansburg beats in the egg whites.

The most difficult thing about fondant is the stirring, Mr. Flansburg says. Arms and hands do grow weary with the long-stirring. Sometimes the fondant gets just a bit too hard, then Mr. Flansburg has

". . . pressed it and squeezed it, caressed it.
And twisted and turned it now quick and now slow"

as one Nancy who was found kneading her dough.

When it is in a delicious state of soft hardness, Mr. Flansburg puts it away in a jar, covered with a damp cloth and a cloth which is kept moist, to "ripen." That takes five or six days.

Mr. Flansburg scorns thermometers. He relies entirely on a cup of water and a drop of the syrup to tell him when his candy is done. This year he has made four batches of fondant, ten pounds at a time, not to mention some brittles, so it seems that his method is about the best one after all.

When the fondant has ripened, then comes the fun.

It is brought from its damp hiding and Mr. Flansburg makes it into a number of candies.

Part of the fondant is covered with chopped nuts and made into a nut loaf. Part of it goes into hiding again, in the interior of sugared dates.

"Dates are all right," Mr. Flansburg explained, "if you close them tight after stuffing. When you leave the filling open to the air it hardens and tastes sugary."

Chocolate Creams.

Some of it appears as nut patties. Parts of it are mixed with nuts and candied cherries, made into loaf form, and sliced for the delectation of "the boys." Another part of the fondant is colored, pink and green and red, made into little patties and topped with a nut, just as though they sat in a candy store case.

One of the very best of his varieties is the chocolate creams. Luscious candy dreams. Mr. Flansburg melts the dark bitter chocolate, makes the fondant into fat pyramids, dips them into the chocolate, and sets the results on waxed paper.

These creams have to ripen, even as the fondant. If Mr. Flansburg waited too long, he would have to harden them in a cold place quickly, making the chocolate hard and crackly. As it is, he makes these the first of his Christmas candy and allows them to harden slowly in a moderately warm room, and they are wonderfully soft chocolates.

In making the chocolate creams, Mr. Flansburg makes them with the thought of others in mind. Some of them like a great deal of fondant with a meagre coating of chocolate, and for them he prepares large and noble fondant pyramids, dipping them very lightly in the chocolate coating. To please others, who have a taste for chocolate, Mr. Flansburg makes a small center and dips them generously in the coating.

In addition to the fondant candies, Mr. Flansburg makes peanut brittle and hickory nut brittle. Mr. Flansburg melts "some" sugar, browns it until it is a "good" brown, allows it to get "fairly" liquid, and then pours it over the shelled nuts. He has never made the time honored fudge—he leaves that to any other members of the family who wish to compete in the candy making.

The Family Circle.

Fifty pounds of chocolate creams, stuffed dates, hickory nut brittle, nut patties, peanut brittle, fondant patties, nut loaf—better than the finest sugar plum tree that ever grew in youthful imagination.

But the, sugar plum tree is soon stripped.

Several pounds go east to one of te sons in Pittsburgh. Several other pounds go to Chicago, where two of Mr. Flansburg's sisters live. Some of them are given to old friends, who know how very good the Flansburg candy is.

Christmas day in the Flansburg home is the day of a family reunion. The sons and their families come home, perhaps a day or two before the great holiday, so that they may be together on Christmas.

And one of the best parts of the day to "the boys" and their families is the great bowl of "father's" candy on the library table.

There it sits all day—and the next day if there is any left—for any one to have. Friends have it, too, but the family benefits the most. Then, when Christmas is over and the holly begins to fall and the candles on the tree tip, and the families go to their own homes, under the arm of each one is a large box of candy that "father" has made for "the boys."

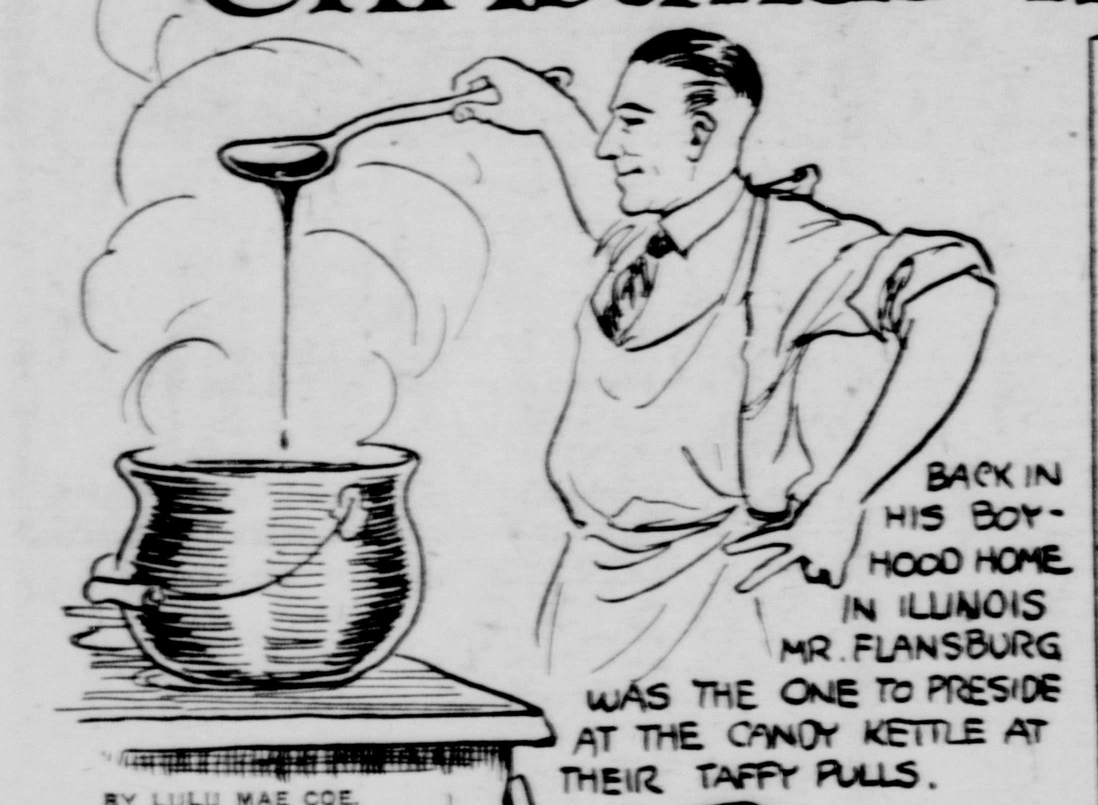
Lincoln Lawyer Tosses Dull Cares Aside at Christmas Time to Make Candy for "The Boys"



BACK IN HIS BOYHOOD HOME IN ILLINOIS MR. FLANSBURG WAS THE ONE TO PRESIDE AT THE CANDY KETTLE AT THEIR TAFFY PULLS.

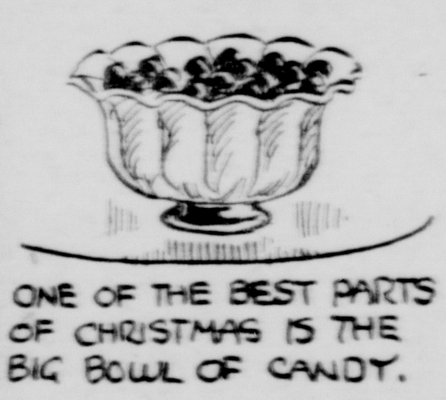
IT WOULDN'T SEEM LIKE CHRISTMAS IF, A COUPLE OF WEEKS BEFORE, THE BOYS AND GRANDCHILDREN COULDN'T PEEK INTO THE KITCHEN AND SEE FATHER BENDING OVER THE BIG KETTLE.



ONE OF THE BEST PARTS OF CHRISTMAS IS THE BIG BOWL OF CANDY.

BY LULU MAE COE.

He makes it for "the boys."

One of "the boys" is a doctor and one is an advertising manager and one is a salesman and one is a lawyer, who has been a judge—but they are "the boys."

Christmas would be only half Christmas to "the boys" if there weren't a big bowl of "father's" candy on the library table.

It wouldn't seem as though the Yuletide season had a proper beginning if for a couple of weeks before "the boys" and the grandchildren couldn't peek into the kitchen in the evenings and see "father" bending over a luscious smelling concoction in a big kettle.

C. C. Flansburg is a lawyer by vocation but he is a candy maker by avocation.

Fifty weeks in the year he pleads the cause of others and upholds the rights of the oppressed, but for two weeks he has a candy complex.

Long, long ago when "the boys" were just little Allen and Leonard and Claude and Harry, they begged "father" for candy. And "father" went into the kitchen and made it for them.

And much longer ago than that, when "father" was even younger than "the boys" now, he used to make candy, back home in Illinois.

Not So Many Amusements.

There weren't so many amusements in those days and candy pulls were the amusements de luxe for the young people. Mr. Flansburg always presided at the candy kettle, mixing and stirring the sticky mass until it achieved just the proper stringiness in water. He superintended the cooling and the pulling and the hardening.

And there weren't "no leavins'" from this candy.

Out of those oldtime taffy parties and out of the candy he made for his little boys has grown one of the pleasantest of Christmas customs.

A quarter of a century ago Mr. Flansburg started his own little private celebration of Christmas by making pounds and pounds of candy for "the boys" and for other members of his family.

And never in those twenty-five years has a Yuletide passed without the Flansburg kitchen growing redolent with the co-mingled odors of melting sugar, softening chocolate, and melting butter.

Twentyfive years ago he made his first Christmas candy and in the years that have elapsed Mr. Flansburg has made about twelve hundred and fifty pounds of chocolates and bonbons.

Made 1,250 Pounds.

Twelve hundred and fifty puunds—most of us would think the twelve minus its hundred would be a little more than we would care about!

For this coming Christmas, Mr. Flansburg has prepared forty pounds of fondant, which he considers will make about fifty pounds of candy.

Fifty pounds is an average for a Christmas season, Mr. Flansburg says, but he has made as high as sixty-five or seventy pounds pounds—and that was not longer ago than two or three years.

Mr. Flansburg first experimented with his Christmas candy by combining white of an egg and powdered sugar. To him, however, it tasted exactly that—powdered sugar combined with a white of an egg.

He didn't like it. That was not his idea of fondant.

Accordingly, he found a fondant recipe—and upon that little recipe has been founded the twelve hundred and fifty pounds of the best home-made candy in the city of Lincoln.

More tears of amateur candy makers have been shed upon fondant that wouldn't harden or that became brick-like upon leaving the stove than upon any other endeavor.

But Mr. Flansburg—

"Fondant isn't hard to make. It isn't an art at all. The secret lies in knowing when to take it off the stove."

Yes—in knowing "when"—

Mr. Flansburg has learned—many of us haven't.

Careful of Measurements.

This lawyer-candy maker admits that he measures his ingredients—"well, pretty accurately."

But we feel an eye that has gazed upon measuring cups for twenty-five years can guess a cup full "pretty accurately."

When Mr. Flansburg takes his fondant off the stove, he spreads it on a marble slab to cool and sprinkles it with water, to prevent crystallization. When it is just the correct coolness—"pretty cool but not too cool, you know, so it will handle well"—Mr. Flansburg beats in the egg whites.

The most difficult thing about fondant is the stirring, Mr. Flansburg says. Arms and hands do grow weary with the long-stirring. Sometimes the fondant gets just a bit too hard, then Mr. Flansburg has

". . . pressed it and squeezed it, caressed it,
And twisted and turned it, now quick and now slow"

as one Nancy who was found kneading her dough.

When it is in a delicious state of soft hardness, Mr. Flansburg puts it away in a jar, covered with a damp cloth and a cloth which is kept moist, to "ripen." That takes five or six days.

Mr. Flansburg scorns thermometers. He relies entirely on a cup of water and a drop of the syrup to tell him when his candy is done. This year he has made four batches of fondant, ten pounds at a time, not to mention some brittles, so it seems that his method is about the best one after all.

Old Soldiers at Milford and Burkett Enjoy Final Years of Eventful Lives

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

Oh, yes, you've seen him—the Old Soldier—

You've sene him hundreds of times on parade days; on Armistice day, for instance, celebrating a victory won by the soldier boy of another generation; you've seen him on the Fourth of July, marching along, as erect as it is possible for one who has reached the three-score year and ten mark, to be.

You've listened time and time again, with a shade of impatience, perhaps, to the same old story of a battle won or lost; you've smiled to yourself when the dear quavering voice unsteadily follows the familiar air of a favorite song of long ago. Yes, you've smiled, and buried down deep, perhaps there has been a tear, brought by the thought of the day to come when today's Old Soldier will be but a memory.

But the Old Soldier—he sheds no tears, for life is good to him right now.

The State of Nebraska furnishes two splendid homes for these old fellows, one of them, the first one, being about two miles from Grand Island, and it has been named after Senator E. J. Burkett, and is known as that by all of the soldiers.

The second one is at Milford.

This institution is but a branch of the Grand Island home, but it takes the summer months to show how popular the newer home can be, long about fishing time.

Once upon a time, and not so many years ago, either, both of these institutions were filled. Not only filled, but overflowing, and that is why little cottages were built on acre tracts of ground close to th homes. An old soldier and his wife could live there comfortably, have a little garden, and be happy. The state furnished the ice in summer, coal, rations and clothing, and besides that the soldier was given his pension. So he had nothing at all to worry about.

But now, both at Burkett and Milford, the ranks are thinning. Seventy-six of the boys passed away within a period of two years, and there is never a month but six or eight are laid to rest in the litle cemetery.

And in the large buildings there are great empty spaces. Room after room is empty, and even the halls seem more desolate, although those who are left seem to be lively enough to fill up some of the empty spaces.

The Hall of Fame.

For instance, there is, at Burkett, what is known as the Hall of Fame, and here is where all of the wars since and before '61 have been fought over and over again. Sometimes, according to the authorities, the air gets rather blue if a younger soldier dares to dispute a good point put across by one of his elders, and the story is told of two of them, one ninety-four and the other ninety-six who had a hot argument one day which ended in a fistic battle. The younger man won, and after proudly boasting of his victory, added—"Well, I'd a licked him just the same if he had been a hundred."

The State takes good care of these old men, it clothes them and feeds them, and humors them, realizing all the while that it won't be long that it will have the opportunity to take care of hem.

And don't think for one moment that the boys at these homes are easy to care for, for they aren't. Many of them are just like spoiled children, and want what they want when they want it, and then when they get what they want they don't want it.

And food—

"Well, if it isn't up to grade," says L. C. Oberlies, "a small sardine can with the small piece of steak or chicken or something they didn't like, in it, will be all wrapped up and sent to the board of control. Just a sarcastic reminder that better food would be appreciated. And the funny part of it is that the food is good, but it all depends on the disposition of the boys that day whether it seems good to them or not.

Some of the old soldiers and soldiers' widows enjoy ing the library and reading room at the soldiers' home in Grand Island.

That Chicken Gizzard.

"We had chicken for dinner one day. Six hundred pounds of it were sent out to the home, and it was the very best chicken we could get, killed and shipped the same day. One of the soldiers got a little piece of the gizzard in his serving, and didn't like it. He took the little piece, about the size of a nickle, and put it in alcohol in his room, and every visitor who came within earshot, he would entice them in there to see the kind of food the old soldiers had to eat."

But the board of control just laughs at things like that. They treat these old, old, men just as they would small boys, humoring them, and forgiving them everything they do The discipline is not rigid, the fellows are never reprimanded, that is, not severely. The commandant sometimes sends the men away for thirty days, if he knows they have a son or daughter they can go to, and it causes an awful uproar, too, so it is said, when one of them have to leave home.

One thing that is particularly noticeable on the part of the relatives, according to the members of the board, is how interested the relatives become about pension day. They come to see them then if they never come again until the next one. And the old men give up their money without even a mumur. The hands are so shaky sometimes that they can scarcely sign on the dotted line, but the relatives are eager to help them, and away goes the money, in most cases.

But perhaps the old men are happy, anyway. They spend their time recounting the days that have gone, with never a thought of those that are to come. They play pitch and rummy, day in and day out, and perhaps a little poker on the side, who knows? Anyway, they get excited enough to be getting something out of it if one can judge from the profanity that floats around and the banging of fists on the table.

Merely Waiting.

And the boys are quite philosophical about the days ahead of them. Every time one hears "taps" played for a comrade who has passed away, he wonders if he will be the next, but he doesn't worry. He rather welcomes the thought, for many of them, crippled, and so old they can no longer enjoy life to the fullest extent, are merely waiting for the last summons

What will become of the buildings when the last 'old soldier' has been called isn't known exactly, but it is thought that provision will be made to accept the Spanish War, and the World War veterans.

At the present time there are several Spanish war veterans in the home, and there is just one widow of a World war veteran. She is past fifty years of age, and is almost blind. Her husband, who was in the World war in some capacity or other, deserted her, and there was no one to care for her.

There are more, many more soldiers at the Grand Island home than there are at Milford, especially in the winter time. But Milford seems to have a boom in the spring and summer. The fellows at Grand Island always say they believe the water at Milford is better for them in the spring and summer time. They mean the fishing water, however, for if there is one thing that these boys can do, it is fish.

There are row boats, too, that the men can use at Milford, and there is everything at both places for their entertainment and convenience.

There is so much space now in the institutions that the board of control did its best to get the soldiers and their wives in the little cabins to move in, but don't think for one moment that these old people will. No, indeed, almost with tears in their eyes they beg to be allowed to finish the rest of their life in the little cabin that has become 'home' to them.

"Why, how could I find my pipe—what would I do with my dog, if we moved into the big building"

And so they remain right where they are, for there is to be nothing to mar the happiness, the very little happiness that comes in the remaining years to these old soldiers.

William Werkmeister of West Prussia Is Working Hard for Nebraska Degree

BY MARJORIE WYMAN.

All the way from Germany!

Eleven days on the ocean steamer, after having gone from his own home in Western Prussia to Bremen, where he embarked, and then the tiresome journey from New York city to the center of the United States—all for the purpose of finishing his work for a degree from the University of Nebraska!

That is what William Werkmeister, rated a senior in the university, in the college of Arts and Sciences, has done.

Unable to speak a word of English when he landed here, and having no reason whatever to think it would be easy—for it is said that English is the hardest language in the world to master, because of the large number of synonyms, with American even harder than the language of the Britishers—still he had the determination to come here.

Mr Werkmeister had gone through the elementary schools, and had gone away from home at the age of nine to go to a "gymnasium," which is what the German people call the school which corresponds to our junior high schools ,our high school courses, and the first two years of our college education.

Then he had gone to Munster to college. Munster is one of the newer schools, and is particularly well accredited in philosophy, which was Mr. Werkmeister's line. He had spent five semesters there, working toward a degree.

And then the war broke out.

And the war brought to the German people a different outlook. It brought them only hardship, and the necessity for hard work. It brought them a devaluated currency, so that the man who had so many marks was not well enough off to support the family he had supported with ease before. And it brought them depleted families. A brother of our student was killed in one of the battles

To the farmer it brought only the opportunity to till his soil and to send his produce to the city people, who needed it so, but who could pay for it only with currency of small value

And Mr. Werkmeister's father was a farmer.

Naturally, then, there was not enough money to send the son back to college to finish his education. It looked like another occupation for the student of philosophy. It looked very much as if he would have to turn his hand to ploughing and sowing the "Roggen" which is the principal crop in that climate.

Help From America.

But intervention came from relatives in Hubbard, Iowa, who had suffered comparatively little from the war. From a doctor in Germany, Mr. Werkmeister received letters of introduction to Peters, the editor of the Omaha Daily Tribune, a paper published in the German language.

Dr. F. D. Krueger, formerly of the University of Omaha department of philosophy, and now of Ohio, was in the city at that time, and to him the newly-arrived student was referred. He of course sent him to interview Dr. Hartley Burr Alexander, at the head of that department at the University of Nebraska.

So Nebraska, with her cosmopolitan student body, had another nationality added to her collection.

Mr. Werkmeister tells of his schedule, which is seventeen hours in philosophy, political science, and English. Most of the courses he is taking he has covered before, and is merely taking them to help himself to translate his thought into the new language he is acquiring. And he says he does not any longer think in German and translate his thoughts, but he is able to think in the language which is foreign to him.

Yet since May 15, the day he arrived, he has spoken it as much as possible, and now his understanding is good, and he can speak our language well.

"When I write a long discussion of something abstract," he says, "I sometimes have to search for the word But ordinarily I can understand everything I find. Naturally, some of the reading is hard for me, and I am yet slow. That I will get over I think, with more reading and more use of the English."

University Notes

For the holiday season the university library is exhibiting a collection of twenty-four books for children, illustrated by well known artists. One of the old favorites shown is "The Merry Adventures of Robin Hood," written and illustrated in black and white by Howard Pyle. Pyle's "Book of Pirates" is a collection of his stories and pictures of famous buccaneers. The weird and fanciful inventions of Jean de Bosschere for his own story, "The City Curious," and for "Gulliver's Travels," are especially fascinating for children. A light humorous quality is shown in Rackham's silhouettes for "The Sleeping Beauty." Of interest not only to children but also to their elders are two books, Milton's "Comus," illustrated by Arthur Rackham, and Shakespeare's "Tempest" with drawing and decorations by Edmond Dulac.

Prospective teachers for 1924-25 were advised by Dean W. E. Sealock of teachers college, director of the bureau for recommendations of teachers, to register at once with the bureau in order to allow sufficient time for their credentials to be got before requests come for teachers for next year. About a month is occupied by the bureau in compiling credentials for those who expect to teach.

Four new courses in university extension are announced by the director, Prof. A. A. Reed. A practical course in salesmanship is intended to give thorough instruction in the fundamental principles of selling through text book study and working out of original problems by the students. This course is given in sixteen lessons, and gives two hours credit. "The Education of Women," a course showing the evolution of the status of women from primitive times down to the present, takes up suggestions of table etiquette, correct conduct, health habits, citizenship, vocational problems and suggestions of a general nature. This course is also iven in sixteen lessons with appropriate examinations, and gives two hours credit. Two courses in economics with three hours credit each are offered in twenty-four lessons. The basis course is a study of the facts and principles of economic life in their application to private and public welfare, and takes up the laws of production, exchange, distribution, and consumption of wealth. Continuing this course the distribution of wealth, problems of labor, and economic organization, and the principles underlying taxation are treated.

Gertrude Strieter, B. Sc. (home economics), of Seward, sailed November 30 from New York for India, where she will take charge as superintendent of a girls' boarding school at Nagercoil, Travancore, in the extreme southern part of India. A revised copyrighted edition of "Brief Laboratory Outline of Qualitative Analysis" has been issued by three members of the department of chemistry of the university, Dr. B. Clifford Hendricks, B. This laboratory outline has previously been in a mimeograph edition and later in booklet form. The present edition embodies improvements in both content and form suggested by six semesters use in the laboratories of the university.

F. A. Hayes, A M. '12, of the United States bureau of soils has just finished his field survey of Buffalo county in co-operation with the conservation and survey division of the university, and is preparing his reports for publication next spring. Mr. Hayes has been working in survey work in Nebraska since his graduation from the university, and is now ranking man in the federal survey service, and ranked only by Dr. George Condra in the state work.

To assist the national committee of the American Chemical society is correlate the teaching of high school and college chemistry, a committee from the university, Prof. B. Clifford Hendricks of the department of chemistry, and Prof. Herbert Brownell, chairman of the department of supervision and criticism of instruction of teachers college, are carrying on investigational work in high school chemistry courses in the state. This state committee has mailed out over one hundred pamphlets, and questionaires to high school and college teachers of chemistry in an effort to arrive at the minimum essentials of a chemistry course for high schools. Professor Hendricks is a member of the Nebraska chapter of the American Chemical society.

Chancellor Samuel Avery, writing in "The Chancellor's Corner" of The University Journal for the holidays issue on "The Influence of the Alumnus upon the Undergraduate" points out the necessity that all right-minded alumni take a united stand for the good things in University life, and cites the work of alumni in raising the scholarship standards of their fraternities and elevating the general level of sportsmanship at athletic competitions. "This reform," continues Chancellor Avery, "has not come about spontaneously. Concerted action on the part of groups of alumni in supporting the faculty, the coaches and the advanced students immediately in charge of such matter has brought about this most desired chane." The chancellor states further that there is no large institution where there is less cause for worry about the questionable influence of returning alumni than at Nebraska.

The December exhibition of the school of fine arts in the art gallery of the library includes two exhibits of more than usual interest. Mrs. Chas. Beach Allen of Kansas City, who has painted in the central west, and also on the Pacific coast, has on display a series of paintings and prints which illustrate the virility of her manner in handling themes. Mrs. Allen formerly was a student in the school, and has since studied under Birger Sandzen. In the manner of her teacher, Mrs. Allen utilizes the impressionistic technique in dealing with her subjects. Another collection, that of Robert Gilder of Omaha, is composed of a series of thirty color studies of the Santa Fe country where Mr. Gilder has been painting recently. All of these pictures are of moderate size, suitable for home decoration, and are intimately treated.

"Grandmother," a painting by Hermine J. Stellar, professor of drawing and painting in the school of fine arts represents the university at the full exhibition of the Chicago art institute. Miss Stellar, before taking up her duties in the school of fine arts, was a member of the faculty of the art institute.

"Effect of Age Upon Gains and Growth in Beef Steers," a paper prepared from observations at the college of agriculture, was given before the American Society of Animal Production at its recent meeting coincident with the international livestock exposition at Chicago, by Prof. H. J. Gramlich, chairman of the department of animal husbandry. The annual meeting of this society was held for the convenience of members attending the livestock exposition.

Toast Just as You Like It

As the story goes Jack Spratt and his wife never could quite agree on their food—Jack preferred his rare while Mrs. Spratt insisted that hers be well done, cooked to a nicety.

And there are many modern Mr. and Mrs. Spratts who have found a simple solution to their epicurean differences so far as making toast for breakfast is concerned. They use a Westinghouse Turnover Toaster which toasts their bread as they both like it—crisp and brown all over or just toasted around the edges with the center soft.

Any way you like it is the Turnover Toaster way.

Old Soldiers at Milford and Burkett Enjoy Final Years of Eventful Lives

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

Oh, yes, you've seen him—the Old Soldier—

You've sene him hundreds of times on parade days; on Armistice day, for instance, celebrating a victory won by the soldier boy of another generation; you've seen him on the Fourth of July, marching along, as erect as it is possible for one who has reached the three-score year and ten mark, to be.

You've listened time and time again, with a shade of impatience, perhaps, to the same old story of a battle won or lost; you've smiled to yourself when the dear quavering voice unsteadily follows the familiar air of a favorite song of long ago. Yes, you've smiled, and buried down deep, perhaps there has been a tear, brought by the thought of the day to come when today's Old Soldier will be but a memory.

But the Old Soldier—he sheds no tears, for life is good to him right now.

The State of Nebraska furnishes two splendid homes for these old fellows, one of them, the first one, being about two miles from Grand Island, and it has been named after Senator E. J. Burkett, and is known as that by all of the soldiers.

The second one is at Milford.

This institution is but a branch of the Grand Island home, but it takes the summer months to show how popular the newer home can be, long about fishing time.

Once upon a time, and not so many years ago, either, both of these insti-institutions were filled. Not only filled, but overflowing, and that is why little cottages were built on acre tracts of ground close to the homes. An old soldier and his wife could live there comfortably, have a little garden, and be happy. The state furnished the ice in summer, coal, rations and clothing, and besides that the soldier was given his pension. So he had nothing at all to worry about.

But now, both at Burkett and Milford, the ranks are thinning. Seventy-six of the boys passed away within a period of two years, and there is never a month but six or eight are laid to rest in the little cemetery.

And in the large buildings there are great empty spaces. Room after room is empty, and even the halls seem more desolate, although those who are left seem to be lively enough to fill up some of the empty spaces.

The Hall of Fame.

For instance, there is, at Burkett, what is known as the Hall of Fame, and here is where all of the wars since and before '61 have been fought over and over again. Sometimes, according to the authorities, the air gets rather blue if a younger soldier dares to dispute a good point put across by one of his elders, and the story is told of two of them, one ninety-four and the other ninety-six who had a hot argument one day which ended in a fistic battle. The younger man won, and after proudly boasting of his victory, added—"Well, I'd a licked him just the same if he had been a hundred."

The State takes good care of these old men, it clothes them and feeds them, and humors them, realizing all the while that it won't be long that it will have the opportunity to take care of them.

And don't think for one moment that the boys at these homes are easy to care for, for they aren't. Many of them are just like spoiled children, and want what they want when they want it, and then when they get what they want they don't want it.

And food—

"Well, if it isn't up to grade," says L. C. Oberlies, "a small sardine can with the small piece of steak or chicken or something they didn't like, in it, will be all wrapped up and sent to the board of control. Just a sarcastc reminder that better food would be appreciated. And the funny part of it is that the food is good, but it all depends on the disposition of the boys that day whether it seems good to them or not.

Some of the old soldiers and soldiers' widows enjoying the library and reading room at the soldiers' home in Grand Island.

That Chicken Gizzard.

"We had chicken for dinner one day. Six hundred pounds of it were sent out to the home, and it was the very best chicken we could get, killed and shipped the same day. One of the soldiers got a little piece of the gizzard in his serving, and didn't like it. He took the little piece, about the size of a nickle, and put it in alcohol in his room, and every visitor who came within earshot, he would entice them in there to see the kind of food the old soldiers had to eat."

But the board of control just laughs at things like that. They treat these old, old, men just as they would small boys, humoring them, and forgiving them everything they do. The discipline is not rigid, the fellows are never reprimanded, that is, not severely. The commandant sometimes sends the men away for thirty days, if he knows they have a son or daughter they can go to, and it causes an awful uproar, too, so it is said, when one of them have to leave home.

One thing that is particularly noticeable on the part of the relatives, according to the members of the board, is how interested the relatives become about pension day. They come to see them then if they never come again until the next one. And the old men give up their money without even a mumur. The hands are so shaky sometimes that they can scarcely sign on the dotted line, but the relatives are eager to help them, and away goes the money, in most cases.

But perhaps the old men are happy, anyway. They spend their time recounting the days that have gone, with never a thought of those that are to come. They play pitch and rummy, day in and day out, and perhaps a little poker on the side, who knows? Anyway, they get excited enough to be getting something out of it if one can judge from the profanity that floats around and the banging of fists on the table.

Merely Waiting.

And the boys are quite philosophical about the days ahead of them. Every time one hears "taps" played for a comrade who has passed away, he wonders if he will be the next, but he doesn't worry. He rather welcomes the thought, for many of them, crippled, and so old they can no longer enjoy life to the fullest extent, are merely waiting for the last summons.

What will become of the buildings when the last 'old soldier' has been called isn't known exactly, but it is thought that provision will be made to accept the Spanish War, and the World War veterans.

At the present time there are several Spanish war veterans in the home, and there is just one widow of a World war veteran. She is past fifty years of age, and is almost blind. Her husband, who was in the World war in some capacity or other, deserted her, and there was no one to care for her.

There are more, many more soldiers at the Grand Island home than there are at Milford, especially in the winter time. But Milford seems to have a boom in the spring and summer. The fellows at Grand Island always say they believe the water at Milford is better for them in the spring and summer time. They mean the fishing water, however, for if there is one thing that these boys can do, it is fish.

There are row boats, too, that the men can use at Milford, and there is everything at both places for their entertainment and convenience.

There is so much space now in the institutions that the board of control did its best to get the soldiers and their wives in the little cabins to move in, but don't think for one moment that these old people will. No, indeed, almost with tears in their eyes they beg to be allowed to finish the rest of their life in the little cabin that has become 'home' to them.

"Why, how could I find my pipe—what would I do with my dog, if we moved into the big building."

And so they remain right where they are, for there is to be nothing to mar the happiness, the very little happiness that comes in the remaining years to these old soldiers.

William Werkmeister of West Prussia Is Working Hard for Nebraska Degree

BY MARJORIE WYMAN.

All the way from Germany!

Eleven days on the ocean steamer, after having gone from his own home in Western Prussia to Bremen, where he embarked, and then the tiresome journey from New York city to the center of the United States—all for the purpose of finishing his work for a degree from the University of Nebraska!

That is what William Werkmeister, rated a senior in the university, in the college of Arts and Sciences, has done.

Unable to speak a word of English when he landed here, and having no reason whatever to think it would be easy—for it is said that English is the hardest language in the world to master, because of the large number of synonyms, with American even harder than the language of the Britishers—still he had the determination to come here.

Mr. Werkmeister had gone through the elementary schools, and had gone away from home at the age of nine to go to a "gymnasium," which is what the German people call the school which corresponds to our junior high schools ,our high school courses, and the first two years of our college education.

Then he had gone to Munster to college. Munster is one of the newer schools, and is particularly well accredited in philosophy, which was Mr. Werkmeister's line. He had spent five semesters there, working toward a degree.

And then the war broke out.

And the war brought to the German people a different outlook. It brought them only hardship, and the necessity for hard work. It brought them a [illegible] currency, so that the man who had so many marks was not well enough off to support the family he had supported with ease before. And it brought them depleted families. A brother of our student was killed in one of the battles

To the farmer it brought only the opportunity to till his soil and to send his produce to the city people, who needed it so, but who could pay for it only with currency of small value

And Mr. Werkmeister's father was a farmer.

Naturally, then, there was not enough money to send the son back to college to finish his education. It looked like another occupation for the student of philosophy. It looked very much as if he would have to turn his hand to ploughing and sowing the "Roggen" which is the principal crop in that climate.

Help From America.

But intervention came from relatives in Hubbard, Iowa, who had suffered comparatively little from the war. From a doctor in Germany, Mr. Werkmeister received letters of introduction to Peters, the editor of the Omaha Daily Tribune, a paper published in the German language.

Dr. F. D. Krueger, formerly of the University of Omaha department of philosophy, and now of Ohio, was in the city at that time, and to him the newly-arrived student was referred. He of course sent him to interview Dr. Hartley Burr Alexander, at the head of that department at the University of Nebraska.

So Nebraska, with her cosmopolitan student body, had another nationality added to her collection.

Mr. Werkmeister tells of his schedule, which is seventeen hours in philosophy, political science, and English. Most of the courses he is taking he has covered before, and is merely taking them to help himself to translate his thought into the new language he is acquiring. And he says he does not any longer think in German and translate his thoughts, but he is able to think in the language which is foreign to him.

Yet since May 15, the day he arrived, he has spoken it as much as possible, and now his understanding is good, and he can speak our language well.

"When I write a long discussion of something abstract," he says, "I sometimes have to search for the word. But ordinarily I can understand everything I find. Naturally, some of the reading is hard for me, and I am yet slow. That I will get over. I think, with more reading and more use of the English."

University Notes

For the holiday season the university library is exhibiting a collection of twenty-four books for children, illustrated by well known artists. Toast Just as You Like It

As the story goes Jack Spratt and his wife never could quite agree on their food—Jack preferred his rare while Mrs. Spratt insisted that hers be well done, cooked to a nicety.

And there are many modern Mr. and Mrs. Spratts who have found a simple solution to their epicurean differences so far as the making toast for breakfast is concerned. They use a Westinghouse Turnover Toaster which toasts their bread as they both like it—crisp and brown all over or crisp and brown around the edges with the center soft.

Any way you like it is the Turnover Toaster way.

Decide on one today—at least look in and let us show you one.

Wesleyan Psychologists Demonstrate Limited Capability of Lower Animals to Understand

BY LYNNELLE GREER

Cast:

Charles Darwin, Rhesia Monkey.
The Flapper, Master Scotch Terrier.
Margaret, Miss Guinea Pig.
Freddie, Master Bunny Hare.
The Tiger Twins, Puss and Purr Mew.
Flitter and Flutter, the Pigeon Cousins.
Time: Thursday evening between 7 and 8 o'clock.
Place, Auditorium, Nebraska Wesleyan.

And the rest of it is the story.

We hate to tell this story, not because it isn't true, but for the effect that it will doubtless have on all animal owners who heretofore had explicit faith and confidence in the intelligence of their pets.

In fact, this story is to be somewhat of a blow, and you will remember it the next time you spell c-a-t to your pet dog and he acts as if he understood every word you said. You will remember how basely he has deceived you during the years he has been under your roof that is, you will remember all these things if you believe what we are going to tell you.

You see, when you have thought that your cat, or your dog, or your horse, or chickens, or anything else in the pet line that you possess, understood every word you uttered you have been all wrong, for animals do not, according to class in psychology conducted at Nebraska Wesleyan university under the direction of the department head, F. M. Gregg.

Limited Capabilities.

In the first place, so this psychology class has learned, animals are only capable of learning a certain amount. When that is learned, they learn no more.

But how do they learn it, that is the next question, and that is the question this psychology class has been working on for the past two or three weeks.

"An animal, seeming to understand what you say to it, takes it's cue from some action or expression that you unconsciously make, and then it acts, but does not understand what you say," says Prof. F. M. Gregg.

Prof. Gregg, to illustrate his point, told the story of the famous horse that could tell time, striking the floor with his hoof, denoting the number of hours. Scientists from all over the world went to see the horse and tried to figure out just how it was done, but nobody was succeshful. Even the trainer did not know. But one day, someone conceived the idea of putting a screen between the horse and his trainer, just to see if he was getting an unconscious cue from the man. After the screen was placed between them, the horse could not tell the time at all. Then it was decided that the horse would watch the trainer's head, and the man would hold his head in an expectant position until the last count. He did not know that he did this, or that the horse would pay any attention to him if he did do it, but both of them did.

Then there was the story about the pike which was placed in an aquarium with some minnows. A glass partition was placed between the two of them so the pike could not reach the minnows. Every day, and almost every minute in the day that fish would try to get those minnows, hitting his nose against the glass every time. But he could not learn from the first experience that there was a barrier, and he couldn't learn from the second or third. It took at least a thousand times to teach him that he could not reach them. Then he stayed in his own compartment, and when the glass partition was removed made no attempt to go on the other side. He didn't know enough, and he couldn't learn.

The experiments that the psychology class have been making have been unusually interesting ones, not only to the students themselves but to others as well.

Interesting Experiments.

For instance, there was the guinea pig, which probably has the lowest type of intelligence of any animal. When the training first began, there were three guinea pigs which were running through the maze quite successfully, but they died just when their education was completed. So in the three or four days left one of the girls of the class undertook to educate another guinea pig to open a trap door by pulling the right string inside the cage.

A contraption was arranged so that there were two strings, each with a different colored cloth at the end of it. The red one opened the door, the gray one did not. It took the little animal quite a while to learn which was which, but it is not proven conclusively yet whether it was color distinction that finally did the work, or just knowing that if one wouldn't the other would.

The first time the little pig couldn't understand what it was all about.

The next time he found the location of the door, and then little by little he learned that the string had something to do with the opening of the door. The first time the door opened, the little animal had accidentally pulled the string. He really didn't know what he had done, but he tried it again. The next time he just bit the string, and did not pull it. The door did not open. Then he pulled the string with his feet and the door opened. After that he did the trick quite successfully several times in succession.

Then there was another guinea pig trick. The animal was placed in a box with two openings. One of the openings was covered with blue glass and one with red. At the sound of a bell, the guinea pig was supposed to appear. He did, and if he came out the red entrance he would get an electric shock, if he came out the blue door, he would get fed. The little animal really did learn to distinguish between the colors, for after a series of shocks he knew the blue entrance every time, although the positions were reversed. Margaret could choose her one entry easily, and never failed after she had once learned.

Cats Knew Colors.

The cats could learn color distinction, too, and did readily. An apparatus was arranged with a lever affair that held some meat. If Miss Puss pulled the right lever the meat would fall, if she didn't the meat would still be just far enough in front of her to aggravate her. For some time Puss battled with the red lever and the blue one, now and then getting the red one and the meat by accident. But finally, like the guinea pig, she learned the colors, and even when they were reversed on the levers she knew which one would get her the meat.

But who ever heard of a dog that could distinguish "one on a tuning fork?"

Well, "Flapper," the dog used by the psychology class could. Flapper was placed in a box and when C was sounded she was supposed to go out one door, and when G was sounded she was supposed to go through another.

It is hard for one who is not familiar with animal training to believe that these animals are not [illegible] shown what they are supposed to do but they are not.

"It wouldn't do a bit of good to take the dog or cat by the nap of the neck and try to assist him through his trick, he wouldn't learn a thing, for his mind would be on his neck and what you were trying to do to him, instead of what you were trying to get him to do," said Professor Gregg.

"The only way to teach them is [illegible] let them learn by experience that they can or cannot do one particular thing. The whole thing goes by trial and error. The intelligence of the animal and the test of the experiment is to see how soon one can accomplish his aim with the animal he has to train. The trials and errors are marked down after each experiment, so the student knows exactly how long it took to train his one charge.

Then There's Charles Darwin.

But Charles Darwin—there was never another Charles Darwin, such as the one which one of the boys of the psychology class has been working on, assisted by one of the girls. It seems as though Charles can do just about everything but speak the English language, and while he has been pretty hard to discipline and hard to train in his particular trick, it isn't because he wasn't intelligent but because he had too many other things to think about.

Charles' pet stunt was to pile boxes one on the top of the other, and they [illegible]. Between various antics, and faces that he would make at the audience around him, Charles would proceed to pile his boxes. He knew where they should go and if he felt inclined he would put them there, but if he preferred resting a bit from his labors—that was different.

A chimpanzee is the smartest of all animals, and the monkey, especially Charles Darwin, is not far behind. One wonders where he learned all of his little tricks, [illegible] human in some respects and so inhuman in others.

Charles has only been with the class a few weeks, and he has learned remarkably fast. He will remain another six weeks or so, and then will probably have a new master.

The pigeons and the rabbits that the class have find their way through a maze. The affair winds in and out here and there and everywhere before they come to the end, but they have pretty successfully mastered that feat, too.

Contact plays a great part in the training of animals, that is, it is thought that many of the animals, especially the smaller ones, are able to learn through contact with objects, not because of any actual intelligence they possess.

Nebraska Wesleyan is the first university to take up this animal work in connection with the psychology work. The Chicago university has done some quite extensive work in this line, and are doing more all of the time.

The demonstration given Thursday evening by the students of this class was the second annual one to be given. The students are so interested in their work, and there is so much to be learned with working with these animals, that it is thought that a demonstration will be given each year.

Upper left—Charles Darwin and his trainer, John Hoon. Miss Geneva George, who shared honors in educating Charles, is not in the picture and by the look on Charles' face he realizes that part of his retinue is missing.

Lower left—Frances Atkins and Herbert Gray putting the Guinea pig through the paces. The little animal had come hrough the right door and had discovered the dish of food before the photographer could snap him doing anything else but eating.

Lower right—Pussy making a mad dash for the meat by pulling the lever.

There aren't many monkeys that could have the distinction of attending Nebraska Wesleyan university, as Charles Darwin has been doing for the past few weeks. Charles has had for his special tutors John Hoon and Geneva George, who have coached him every day since his advent in the college. It is thought that Charles Darwin will have finished his course in another six weeks or so, and will be able to solve the problems of the world.

The Guinea pig shown in the picture is one of the most intelligent of its kind. It didn't take this little animal such a long time, when compared to the average intelligence of pigs, to learn his special trick. He hits the blue door every time now, and has an easy time distinguishing between blue and red.

Miss Pussy Purr-mew has also taken a course at Wesleyan university in color. Pussy like her fellow student, the guinea pig, can tell color, too, and knows just exactly which lever will bring her the meat.

"SANTA BE BLOWED"

A little girl still in the kindergarten grades of the Lincoln schools came home during the busy preparations for Christmas, with tears in her eyes, and quivering lips.

She had discovered that Santa Claus was a myth.

All of her childish dreams came tumbling down. The jolly, old, bewhiskered saint, whose miraculous visit on Christmas eve, had fanned her imagination from the days she was first able to lisp, ceased to exist. His place was usurped by a daddy and a mother, who no matter how hard they might try could not quite fill the gap left when Santa disappeared up the chimney for the last time.

Truly some extremely peculiar things happen in this realistic and practical old world.

Realism has even extended itself to the schools and in the instance of the little girl it was necessary for a teacher to destroy an illusion, which a misguided father and mother had taught the youngster to cherish. Even though the illusion was a pretty one, concerning a jolly old soul who came once a year to spread sunshine and happiness it had to be sacrificed to grim reality. Perforce, plain speaking was necessary for one does not part with a childhood dream without a struggle. So the Santa myth was exploded by the teacher, who had performed her duty to the cause of truth and realism, and the little girl was face to face with the first great disappointment of her life.

• • •

Recently the learned George Bernard Shaw expressed somewhat the same sentiment that apparently is entertained by some of the devoted slaves of realism in the schools when he exclaimed:

"Santa Claus be Blowed!"

And somewhat different was the thought expressed by the Rev. Oliver D. Baltzly of Omaha, who in more elegant language deprecated the American observance of Christmas as grossly material and totally lacking in the spiritual reflection which the occasion warrants.

It does not matter a great deal what George Bernard Shaw and the Rev. Oliver D. Baltzly, and a legion of others may happen to think about Christmas and the Santa Claus myth. Millions of American daddies and mothers will continue to observe the day in much the same custom that has prevailed for a great many years. In every home there will be days of busy planning to delight the heart of someone who is loved. In every home where the patter of little feet brings contentment to the fathers and mothers, on every Christmas eve, the coming of the jolly old St. Nick, will be heralded as it has been for many score years, and the story of the Christ child will be retold. In every home the thoughts will turn to the family dinner, or the gladness of reunion with a pang of regret for those who are missing.

Grossly material perhaps, is the American observance of Christmas. Even the youngsters, the critics say, are nursed along with the belief that some mysterious Goodfellow will supply them with the things which their fancies desire. Even the grownups will stuff themselves with too much rich food. But at no time does America shine more resplendently than at Christmas time. If at any time during the year the great heart of the American people beats true, it is during the Yuletide season.

• • •

As a people, America has been described as demonstrative.

In the same voice the critics say she is lacking in sentiment when it comes to the Christmas season and other of her holidays.

Her Fourth of July, commemorating the gift of the most precious document in human history, was for years a bedlam of noise and confusion. Her Thanksgiving called for disproportionate eating, football games and dances. The unsoiled pages of the New Year wehre ushered in noisily and intoxicatingly. Her Christmas was the signal for a lavish outpouring of gifts to satisfy the selfish desires and wants of a pampered people.

Tush!

Because everyone is not gifted with the power of expression in poem and song is no indication of a lack of feeling. Because men and women may put into words some of their innermost thoughts is no sign that they do not love and revere the things most precious in life.

America would not, if she could, change the nature of her Christmas celebration.

If a heart is made glader on that day; if thoughts are a bit more tender than at any other season of the year; if people are more solicitous for the welfare and comfort of those less fortunately situated than themselves—then who shall say that the blessed spirit of old "St. Nick," first implanted in the child's mind in the toddling age, is not decidedly worth while?

PROFITEERS IN FRANCE.

Is it possible to prosecute a war in these modern times without having the government imposed upon by unscrupulous profiteers and by organizations of men taking advantage of a nation's needs to better themselves financially? The experience of practically every large country which participated in the world war would afford cynics and pessimists some ground for claiming that it is not.

Some of our politicians have been attempting to make capital out of the fact that the United States government was mulcted of hundreds of millions of dollars during the period when it was organizing the industries of the nation on a war footing in 1917 and 1918. They have tried to make the people believe that this was something, which could have been easily avoided, and that it was a condition peculiar to this country.

But revelations are now being made in the French chamber of deputies showing that wholesale frauds have been perpetrated on the government of that country, not only during the war but since, as a result of which influential property owners in the region devastated by the kaiser's armies have become millionaires through the payment of huge sums to reimburse them for very moderate property losses, while citizens of less hoggish disposition are still waiting to be compensated.

M. Inghels, a member of the chamber, makes some specific charges in this regard, of which the following are samples:

1—Two brothers who owned a modest factory in Tourcoing, which was destroyed by the Germans, claimed 110,000,000 francs each, and were allowed 75,000,000 apiece. They bought up claims of other people who could not afford to wait and secured payments of these on a grossly inflated basis. Now they have purchased a big tract of land and are putting up 700 houses for rental.

2—Near the Belgian border, between Tourcoing and Mouseron, a florist suffered damage of 14,000 francs by the destruction of his hothouses. He filed a claim for 170,000 francs, and ultimately the government paid him 900,000.

3.—A commercial concern owned a hunting preserve in northern France, consisting largely of sand dunes. During the war, the ground was somewhat torn up by German shells. The company put in a bill for 344,000 francs on account of this, and was allowed a still larger sum. Part of the money has been used in planting magnificent trees, building a big casino, putting in tennis courts and other improvements, so that the property can now be used as a pleasure resort and made to produce a large income.

These frauds could not have been accomplished, of course, without the aid of dishonest or incompetent public officials. They are on par with the misuse of funds provided by the United States government for the benefit of disabled soldiers, in purchasing unsuitable hospital sites from politicians at huge prices. They might be compared also with the Teapot Dome oil scandal, in which rich oil lands were practically given away by a government official to private interests with which he later became identified in a business way.

Germany has had much the same experience with its industrial profiteers, who have so far managed to shove the whole cost of the war and the payment of reparations upon the shoulders of the common people.

Perhaps the governments of the world would do well to consider the plan suggested by the Christian Science Monitor, under which capital and labor would be conscripted for service in war time, as well as men to do the fighting, and everybody would work under government orders, with wages and prices fixed on a basis to prevent stay-at-homes making any profit out of the military necessities of their respective countries.

AN INDIGNANT JUDGE.

When a jury in a murder case in New York City a few days ago brought in a verdict of second degree murder instead of first degree, as the evidence unmistakably warranted, the trial judge, Alfred J. Talley, could not refrain from voicing his indignation and disgust. He told the jurors that by their failure to do their sworn duty and decide the case on the evidence "the dignity and the majesty of the law have been lost."

The New York Times, in commenting upon the case, says that the defendant smiled as the judge pronounced the heaviest sentence allowable for the crime of which he had been convicted, twenty years to life, "for he well knew the improbability of his serving even the twenty years."

So it seems that the indeterminate sentence law works the same in all parts of the country, arousing in the criminal that same contempt for authority in the east that it inspires in other sections. And lawyers work the same game on jurors in metropolitan cities that they practice in the rural communities.

It is not that the people of the United States are innately worse than those of other countries that there is more crime here han elsewhere. The alarming prevalence of murder, robbery and other crimes is due entirely to our system of dealing with criminals. Those who indulge habitually in infractions of the law or those who are tempted to do so are cognizant of the weakness of juries and of the law itself. They know that with the safeguards thrown around one who is accused, the man who employs a skilled attorney has better than an even chance to escape and that even though he should be convicted his term in prison will in all probability be the briefest allowable under the statute.

Pardoning boards are but smaller juries, though being in this state elected public officials, they should be of the highest grade of intelligence, exercising the province of the court as well as that of the jury. But no criminal, however hardened, hesitates to lay his case before the board, meeting with success in a surprising number of cases.

Certainly, swiftness and adequacy of punishment constitutes the solution of the crime problem and one of the ways to secure these is by the repeal of the indeterminate sentence law.

CAPACITY TO GOVERN.

Two brief paragraphs of the message which President Coolidge delivered to congress should commend themselves to the thoughtful American citizen. When the president said that "American institutions rest solely on good citizenship" he uttered a truism with which everyone will agree. When he said "they were created by the people who had a background of self-government he offered a thought which is receiving too scanty attention today.

The capacity for self-government indicates an ability to stand alone. It infers a wide range of responsibility for the individual citizens of that nation, both in thought and action. It is incompatible with the spirit of paternalism, which has so strongly marked the course of legislation within the last few years.

That thought is of particular importance in connection with the problem of immigration. The objection which is being raised against a large number of the immigrants coming to America today rests not upon questions of race or religion. It is purely a question of the preservation of the principles of self-governent. Many of those people coming to American shores in recent years have not been trained for self-government. They have no conception of its responsibilities. They are not ready for their new-found liberties.

Recently Gino Speranza, a distinguished American writer in World's Work, touched on the subject as follows:

"I am not, even remotely, of Anglo-Saxon or Nordic stock. But this is my country. And the test of service and devotion for the new stock may be, after all, not how much we give of ourselves but how much of ourselves we deny. The task and the call of us all—old stock and new—as I vision it, is to strive to keep America as it was, and, I pray with all of my heart and my mind, it may ever be."

What finer vision of citizenship could be expressed?

Not how much we give of ourselves but how much we deny ourselves.

Surely when representative government is sorely beset in the mad endeavor of men and women to right real or imaginary ills through governmental action there is food for thought in this. One group claims the right to certain governmental privileges. Another group advances still another claim, and so it goes on down the list. The result is hopeless confusion.

A STEER ON BROADWAY.

All over the United States and in some foreign countries Lincoln was laughed at some months ago because a maddened cow escaped from the slaughter pens and made a wild and dangerous dash through the business section of the city in the early morning hours. The laughter was only slightly tempered by the report that one woman was very seriously injured by the animal and the world in general took the incident to show that Lincoln was, after all, only a big town, not far removed from the cowboy and steer roping class.

But now it is for us to laugh. Almost identically the same thing happened in Little Old New York which even the most sophisticated will not suggest is back-woodsy nor cowboyish. To paraphrase, it makes a difference whose ox does the goring. A mad steer loose in New York, plunging around on Broadway, perhaps on that fashionable thoroughfare known the world over—Fifth avenue, actually tipping over an automobile—we can guess the make—injured at least one pedestrian before being corralled by New York's highly efficient and numerous policemen.

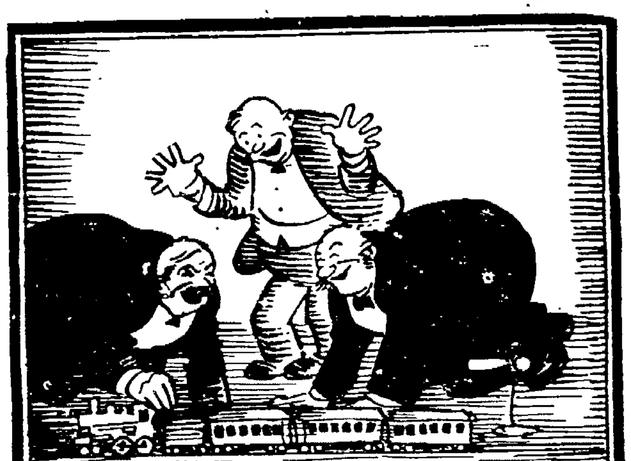
We repeat, it is to laugh and the whole world can now laugh with us, not at us. We have never claimed to be a second New York, but as the matter of comparason probably the only two cities in the world where such a thing has hapupened are New York and Lincoln.

It's a lucky thing for the movie star that she would not rather have a tooth pulled than be photographed.

STEPHEN LEACOCK

"My Ideal Christmas"

Wanting What I Really Want, and Staving Off What My Heart Does Not Desire



"I'd like to cast pretence aside and have the toys for myself—with three or four men from the club to run them. I could get a couple of taxifuls in a minute."

To begin with, for my ideal Christmas, I want plenty of snow. I know that this is a daringly original idea but I state it just the same. And I want the snow to glitter in the winter sunlight like golden coins; or if golden coins are out of the question just now, I want to see the snow falling slowly in great soft flakes like five dollar notes. I should like to put out my hand and catch these flakes, and I'm not sure that its necessary for them to fall slowly either. No, on second thoughts, they may fall as fast as they like. I can catch them in my hat.

Then in the next place, I want my ideal Christmas to be in a house where there are children, and to have it begin early, early in the morning, in fact way back in the night with the sound of the blowing of trumpets, and the playing of mouth organs, when the children are taking the presents out of their stockings. Let my ear awaken to the roar of the toy train rushing across the floor and colliding with the chest of drawers and let me hear the rapid fire of the pop gun.

These early sounds of the awakening nursery are, I say, the best prelude for an ideal Christmas Then as they begin to wax a little fainter ad to be replaced by the sound of children being washed and dressed, I should wish to sit up in bed in a dressing gown and sip chocolate and examine my own presents.

Some Things to Omit.

To discuss these in open print before the eyes of my eager friends is a rather delicate matter. Noting exactly what I want I fear they will at once run out and buy it for me or perhaps store up the information in their minds for use years and years later. I can only beg them that they will not so store it up.

At least I may with perfect taste indicate a few of the things that I do not want and am reluctantly compelled to refuse.

But I regret to say that my desire to have a new copy of Omar Khayyam, Tenneyson's Maid, and Longfellow's Evangeline, has long been sated. In fact I should like to say in a general way that if any of my friends are thinking of sending me a book (and such a thought, though I should never have suggested it myself, is excellent), I should be much gratified if they will simply send me the money and I will go and pick out the book myself. It is a pity that Lord Haldane's Relativity costs twenty-five shillings or perhaps Mrs. Asquith's Memoirs,—I don't mean the last one, I mean the next ones,—may get a little cheaper.

But I pass on from the question of books to the more important matter of articles of prime utility. Under this head I classify all mufflers, suspenders or braces (whether hand-embroidered or machine stitched) all socks, slippers, collar boxes and any other similar articles whatsoever. I hated these when I was six years old and had to tolerate them—but now I am moving on towards sixty and I want what I want when I want it.

A Confession.

Let me here make a very open confession. What I would really like for Christmas would be a few of those interesting mechanical toys that the children get. I'd like a toy steam engine, and a toy windmill, and one of those toy cranes with the pulleys. In fact, all that sort of thing. So do all men.

On pretence of showing the children how to work them we really sit and play with them for hours: just as our wives under pretence of showing the children how to do it, dress up dolls and play with them all the afternoon.

But for my ideal Christmas I'd like to cast all pretence aside and have the toys for myself: I'd like to spread out on the floor one of those new elaborate toy railways with the signal boxes and the station houses and then get three or four men over from my club to help me run it. I could get a couple of taxifuls of them in a minute.

Solitaire With Knife and Fork.

I turn to the question of Christmas dinner. On this point again I have very pronounced views. I'd like to be left alone with it. The more deeply I reflect on Christmas dinner, (and I have done so for fifty-four years) the more I feel that I'd like to get at it by myself. There are things there that I want to eat with a completeness of concentration which I cannot get in general society.

That Christmas turkey with the stuffing tasting as it never does at any other place or time,—I'd like to take it away by myself to a side room and eat the whole of it. Afterwards I would come back and join, gladly enough, in conversation with the others at the table about the morning sermon or prohibition or the German mark or any other of the bright topics of the hour.

If, therefore, any of my friends are thinking of asking me to Christmas dinner (and why should they not?) I shall be greatly obliged if they will let me do the mere eating part in a room by myself. I can send out for new dishes as I want them.

Wise Men and Wise Winks.

The afternoon of Christmas should be employed in the good old-fashioned way with a brisk walk in the country. This is such a time honored old custom that I for one never propose to depart from it. There is something in the nip of the keen frosty air that sends the blood coursing through the veins and exhilarates the whole being. Let it be a walk by all means. But just one slight word of caution—The wise man in middle life will find it well to take just a short nap, a mere forty winks before starting out.

Let him remember that he has a long tramp before him and like a soldier on the march he must husband his strength. And I know no better way to husband it than to lie down,—just for a few brief minutes, on a sofa with the cushions well arranged under the wise man's head and a pipe of tobacco in his mouth so smoked as to hold the exhilaration of the walk in suspense.

And here let the wise man take a further caution. This nap,—or these winks, let us call them,—may extend themselves, contrary to expectation, till half-past five in the afternoon. To his great surprise on awakening he finds that the time for his walk has passed. Let him not fall into peevishness over this. He has missed his Christmas walk in the conntry—but what of it? Are there not a whole long string of Christmases still to come? Why, there are those of us who have been waiting for that Christmas walk for twenty years.

The Southern Cross

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Will you kindly advise us as to the position of the Southern Cross, with reference to the south pole, and also state how far north the Southern Cross can be seen at sea level. Some of our travelers state that they have seen it from Tampico and also from the Panama Canal. Could it be seen from either of those places fifty feet above sea level? F. C. B.

The question of the visibility from points in the northern hemisphere of the famous Southern Cross, the southern giant star Canopus, and the mysterious Magellanic Clouds, is frequently raised by both travelers and the readers of travelers' tales.

These remarkable celestial objects, and in particular the Southern Cross, possess a singular charm for everybody's imagination, as is strikingly testified by the interest shown by commercial travelers who in their southward jorneys pass within the circle of visibility. The fascination that the shining cross of stars had for the early navigators of the South Seas seems never to be dissipated. To have seen the Southern Cross is a kind of mark of distinction, mentioned with pride and regarded with respect.

Accordingly, many may be interested in knowing what the conditions are far seeing that mast celebrated asterism. The Southern Cross consists essentially of four bright stars with smaller ones scattered around, situated in the Milky Way and roughly imitating the outline of a cross, about six degrees in length, with the bright white star, Alpha, at the base toward the south pole. The star Gamma at the head is orange in color. The two stars, Beta and Delta, indicating the ends of the cross bean, are both white.

The star at the foot, and consequently the farthest south, is about 28 degrees from the south pole, or 62 degrees below the celestial equator. Now, in latitude 40 degrees north, we can see only 50 degrees below the equator, so that for us the foot of the cross, when it is on the meridian, is (neglecting refraction) 12 degrees below the horizon, although the head is only six degrees below. But if we go down to 28 degrees north lattitude (say in southern Texas or the Florida peninsula) we shall have the foot of the cross standing on our southern horizon, and the head of it six degrees above. The whole figure should therefore be visible, provided we have a sea horizon, free of clouds and mists. But at what time should be see it? Only when it is on or near the meridian within the hours of darkness. This occurs in the middle of April, about 11 o'clock in the evening, and about the middle of May, about 9 o'clock. January and February are the best months to see it in the morning sky.

Of course, if the Southern Cross can be seen standing on the horizon in latitude 28 degrees north, it must be well above the horizon in latitude only 22 degrees, which is that of Tampico, and still higher at Panama, in latitude only about nine degrees. From the equator the cross appears with its foot 28 degrees above the southern horizon. From the equator the whole sky, from pole to pole, is visible.

Canopus can be seen from all the southern states, when it is on the meridian, or could be with a sea horizon. The great Magellanic cloud cannot be seen from north of the aropics.

It is an interesting fact to which Richard Hinckley Allen calls attention in his exhaustive book on "Star Names and Their Meanings," that the Southern Cross was last seen from the latitude of Jerusalem about the time of the Crucifixion. What he refers to is the shifting of the constellations that accompanies the procession of the equinoxes.

In consequence of this the Southern Cross and its surroundings have in 5,000 years been drifted many degrees southward by the tipping of the earth's axis away from them. About 3,000 B. C. the Cross was visible as far north as the Baltic Sea. The motion is, of course periodic, and after many thousand years the constellations will swing back through nearly the same places that they before occupied.

A difference of fifty feet in elevation of the observer would have very little effect on the visibility of a star near the horizon. It may be added that the Southern Cross is often found disappointing by those who see it for the first time. Their expectations of a magnificent celestial display are not fulfilled; and yet to others it appears as truly the most notable object in the stellar heavens. In the southern hemisphere the position of the Cross is noted in estimating time at night. Humboldt tells how his guides in Venezuela and Peru would say on a night journey: "Midnight is past· the Cross begins to bend." It serves as a clock-hand because it stands upright when on the meridian.

Here and There

Latin-American Trade.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

The steady growth of our commerce with Latin America is one of the most encouraging features of our export and import statistics. With Europe in her present condition, it is likely to be some years before a complete trade revival in that continent is possible. More and more we are turning toward our southern neighbors for foodstuffs and raw materials while they are buying a steadily increasing quantity of our manufactured goods. The most striking development is the displacement of Brazil by Argentina as the South American country with which we are doing the most business. Before the war the United States played a relatively small part in Argentinean trade, Great Britain and Germany doing most of the business with that country. Today the United States buys from Argentina at the rate of $135,000,000 worth of goods per year and sells to that state about $120,000,000 worth. There has also been enormous development in our trade with Chile and Cuba. We are buying twice as much from Chile and one and one-half times as much from Cuba as we did a year ago, and our exports to these two countries have increased in the same proportion. As our demand for the foodstuffs raised in the tropics increases our imports from Latin America will increase. Our larger purchases will enable those countries to make larger purchases from us. Reciprocity is the rule of trade. Where we buy we are most likely to sell.

In Memory of Child Life.

(Dallas Journal.)

Twelfth street is the widest business thoroughfare of the city of St. Louis. It's a live thoroughfare, naturally. Yet a tombstone has been erected in the street, and this was recently dedicated. The inscription which arrests the eye of the passerby reads: "In memory of child life, sacrificed on the altar of recklessness."

Thirty-two children were killed by automobiles in St. Louis this year, and the monument has been placed as a tribute to them. It stands rather, as it is intended to stand, an indictment of the reckless drivers who robbed these childish victims of life, and an eloquent plea for abatement of reckless driving practices in the future. The monument is set where all can see, as it should be. It denounces and argues more vehemently and impressively than columns of print batteries of posters and a thousand electrical signs might ever do. The thirty-two children cannot be brought back by such a monument nor can the sting of bereavement which their slaughter left in many hearts be eradicated. But the warning which the monument voices may serve to save the lives of many times the 32 who were killed this year. There may be something gruesome about the maimed or mangled bodies of victims of the criminally reckless objection to the inscription. The word "alter" doesn't fit as well as "shambles" would.

Pumpkin Pie.

(Chicago Herald and Examiner.)

They had pumpkin pie at the Thanksgiving dinner of the American Society in London. Or rather they thought they had until the hands across the sea fetched it in—with a top crust.

No use! Europe will never be able to understand America. Our aesthetic interests are too subtle for them. Mince pie is flavor; but pumpkin pie is art or nothing. In its golden beauty is the symbol of all the Summer sunshine that is past. Cover that splendid gold and you hide the treasure, ruin the effect.

What is the great moment with a pumpkin pie? Not when the teeth slide gently into that flavorous paste, richer than all the dreams of Keats' "smoother than creamy curd." That, true, is delectable, an instant not to be interrupted by a crust. But that earlier moment, when the eye takes in the yellow glory, and in a flash the soul is full-fed with memories and dreams—that is the great moment, and is that glory to be veiled?

Perish the thought: We would as soon see a mackintosh put on the Venus de Milo.

The Midnight Ride of Wild Horse Harris.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 19.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: With the final obsequies of Boot-Hill graveyard near Sidney, many of the boys who died with their boots on were removed. In many cases of homicide in the newer west, the men who died in the classic manner of gunfire were put in any kind of a vehicle that would answer the purpose of a hearse, and hauled to the cemetery with lariats attached to the saddle-horns of cow-ponies. After the burial, a board was set up at the grave and, to properly identify it as the resting place of one of the western bunch, it was shot full of holes.

For years these boards marked the graves of departed ones and to let their sleeping comrades know that those still "on top of the turf" were keeping alive the spirit of the west and its traditions, a party of passing cowpunchers would redecorate these crude wooden markers with a battery of fresh bullet holes.

One who was laid to rest in Boot-Hill graveyard was "Fritzie." Many old timers knew Fritzie as a one legged cowpuncher, who for a time ran the Miners' hotel in Sidney. Fritzie's infirmity was caused by the magnified sense of humor of his Buddie. Said Buddie arrived home late one night after an hilarious time in Sidney and Fritzie was sleeping when Buddie entered the shack. Buddie decided it would be funny to shoot in the bed near enough to make his partner jump. He did. The partner jumped; his leg was shattered by the bullet, and was later amputated at Sidney Post hospital.

After that Fritzie had paralytic spells that came on suddenly, and left almost as suddenly. One time he was at Tom Kane's ranch near Bronson when thus attacked.

That night two wild horse trailers, who had captured a band of wild horses and had them in Kane's Big Pine Cone Corral, were stopping at the ranch. These trailers were Jerry McGahon and Walter Harris, called Wild Horse Jerry and Wild Horse Harris.

They were excited over Fritzie's paralytic attack, and Harris was going to Sidney for the doctor. Their own horses were rambling out somewhere on the prairie and Harris said he would ride a wild one. Jerry held the lantern and Harris threw a rope into the corral. He caught a wild-eyed mare, snubbed her up to the fence, saddled her and Harris mounted the saddle. In the lantern light, she reared, knocked out the light and disappeared in blackness. Jerry struck a match and saw Harris holding the animal down.

"Open the gate," he yelled.

This was done and the dark form of the horse rose to its feet and with the rider, shot into the night.

That ride to Sidney over prairie full of badger and prairie dog holes, buffalo wallows, alkili flats and the like, and on a wild never-before-ridden horse in the night, was accomplished in short order. Harris kept the animal headed east, generally, between the Union Pacific railroad and Lodge Pole creek, by slapping the side of its head first on one side, then on the other, with a rope, or hat, or hand. After that first frenzied effort to roll him off, its one purpose seemed to be to wish to run away from its tormentor.

This it failed to accomplish and he landed from the back of the running horse, in the streets of Sidney, "forked end down."

The doctor arrived before daylight.

Another Laboring Man Writes.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 22.

To the Editor of The Lincoln Star: The letter written by a laboring man which appeared in last Sunday's Star interested me. His letter has its origin in the fact that we can look about us and see what came about by nature. Then again, let us see what came by honest toil and work performed by the laboring class. Then why should not a laboring man expect a living wage? Enough at least to live as well as most other people, and school his children and clothe his family, and lay by a little for a rainy day or in case of illness. Does he get it?

It does seem to be as Mr. Laboring Man has stated we have a class of men in Lincoln who seem to amuse themselves by trying to keep wages and the working class down. Some of them have tried to set the price as to what the farmers should pay the help in harvest and corn shucking. The majority of the farmers gave such no consideration, but made the price with the men when employed. This I know for I was among the farmers. Mr. Laboring Man speaks of a woman taking a job that pays the lucrative salary of seven dollars a week. Right here I wish to speak my mind.

I am referring to unmarried women and girls, and I say that any corporation or business firm or person or even any minister of the gospel who employs female help and does not pay a living wage is positively contributing to the downfall of our women. It may be essential at times to employ a woman to take a man's place, but then why not give them a living wage? By reading the papers, we see that schools may close for the lack of funds. What is the matter with reversing the school system while funds are not available and have three months of school and nine months of work instead of nine months of school and three months of play. It might be best for all concerned, especially in the future. Some people may think a person crazy who would ask the question: "Will education ever be the cause of the downfall of this nation" Think it over—it may be worth it.

Just a few lines on another subject. The United States has been in a commotion ever since the world war. It now takes one half the people to watch the other half—the half that is doing the watching also need watching. We have too many petty foolish laws, one being the red tape marriage laws. It takes the money out of Nebraska to nearby states.

Now when some foolish school law is passed similar to this marriage law which may yet be done, then they have driven the last nail in the coffin of civilization.

When the war closed we expected all this greed, graft, and profiteering to be stopped and the price of living or high cost of living to come down. About all that has come down much so far is wages. We still live in hopes that the time will come when we can all live in peace like a nest of young birds, which is the only way to be happy. But O, Lord, when will this all be? In this world, or in the world to come?

ANOTHER LABORING MAN.

WALTON, Neb., Dec. 22.

To the Editor of the Lincoln Star: One of the most unique organizations in the city of Lincoln, meets in the Lindell Hotel every Sunday morning. The Oberlies Bible Class is composed of men of every faith in the city. It is the only open forum, so far as I know, within the borders of the state of Nebraska. A freedom of discussion is granted here of the various topics and subjects not elsewhere found. This class is up-to-date and grapples with the largest social, political and economic problems confronting the American public. To my mind it is a power for good, an influence for the upbuilding of our community life in all the ways mentioned. The leader, Mr. Oberlies, has a personality all his own and a method of leadership not equalled anywhere.

As a frequent visitor to the class, I can verily say, the man who attends this class, whatever his beliefs may be, will go away with higher ideals and broader views of a pure and undefiled religion as taught by the Great Master.

Holiday For Everybody.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 22, 1923.—To the Editor of the Lincoln Star: May I have a little space in your valuable paper for a suggestion. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year are upon us—both days legal holidays, not only in Nebraska, but throughout the whole nation. Days the laboring man as well as the rich, feel they are entitled to without working.

Wholesale houses and retail stores all close the entire day, that their employer as well as employes may spend the time as suits them best. Now then—why can't the oil and gas filling stations close these days as well as other lines of business. Everybody will be willing to buy what oil and gasoline they need the day before and so let the station man have his day off with the rest. Who will make the move in this direction.

A STATION MAN.

Santa's Fun.

O hark, I hear him coming,
He's coming down the street.
I hear him call his reindee'rs
As he passes through the sleet.

Here he comes so sprightly
With his sleight all packed with toys;
His reindeers fly so lightly
With gifts for girls and boys.

We peek from the bedroom curtain
As he startts to unpack his bag,
He has skates for Merton,
'Cause it says so on the tag.

There's a nice big dollie
That peeks from Santa's bag—
And this is meant for Mollie,
Says a note pinned to it's leg.

And when St. Nicholas gets unpacked
Then out the door he'll run;
He won't take one thing with him—
Just think of Santa's fun.

Gets Excited.

(Harvard Courier.)

Because I object to the primary system as now employed, and to taking the party circle off of the ballot, a friend of mine says I am afraid to trust the people. In a general way, a great majority of the people always want to do the right thing and will do it under proper leadership. But I am one of the common people myself and I know how easy it is to get excited or mad and do the wrong thing

"SANTA BE BLOWED"

A little girl still in the kindergarten grades of the Lincoln schools came home during the busy preparations for Christmas, with tears in her eyes, and quivering lips.

She had discovered that Santa Claus was a myth.

All of her childish dreams came tumbling down. The jolly, old, bewhiskered saint, whose miraculous visit on Christmas eve, had fanned her imagination from the days she was first able to lisp, ceased to exist. His place was usurped by a daddy and a mother, who no matter how hard they might try could not quite fill the gap left when Santa disappeared up the chimney for the last time.

Truly some extremely peculiar things happen in this realistic and practical old world.

Realism has even extended itself to the schools and in the instance of the little girl it was necessary for a teacher to destroy an illusion, which a misguided father and mother had taught the youngster to cherish. Even though the illusion was a pretty one, concerning a jolly old soul who came once a year to spread sunshine and happiness it had to be sacrificed to grim reality. Perforce, plain speaking was necessary for one does not part with a childhood dream without a struggle. So the Santa myth was exploded by the teacher, who had performed her duty to the cause of truth and realism, and the little girl was face to face with the first great disappointment of her life.

• • •

Recently the learned George Bernard Shaw expressed somewhat the same sentiment that apparently is entertained by some of the devoted slaves of realism in the schools when he exclaimed:

"Santa Claus be Blowed!"

And somewhat different was the thought expressed by the Rev. Oliver D. Baltzly of Omaha, who in more elegant language deprecated the American observance of Christmas as grossly material and totally lacking in the spiritual reflection which the occasion warrants.

It does not matter a great deal what George Bernard Shaw and the Rev. Oliver D. Baltzly, and a legion of others may happen to think about Christmas and the Santa Claus myth. Millions of American daddies and mothers will continue to observe the day in much the same custom that has prevailed for a great many years. In every home there will be days of busy planning to delight the heart of someone who is loved. In every home where the patter of little feet brings contentment to the fathers and mothers, on every Christmas eve, the coming of the jolly old St. Nick, will be heralded as it has been for many score years, and the story of the Christ child will be retold. In every home the thoughts will turn to the family dinner, or the gladness of reunion —with a pang of regret for those who are missing.

Grossly material perhaps, is the American observance of Christmas. Even the youngsters, the critics say, are nursed along with the belief that some mysterious Goodfellow will supply them with the things which their fancies desire. Even the grownups will stuff themselves with too much rich food. But at no time does America shine more resplendently than at Christmas time. If at any time during the year the great heart of the American people beats true, it is during the Yuletide season.

• • •

As a people, America has been described as demonstrative.

In the same voice the critics say she is lacking in sentiment when it comes to the Christmas season and other of her holidays.

Her Fourth of July, commemorating the gift of the most precious document in human history, was for years a bedlam of noise and confusion. Her Thanksgiving called for disproportionate eating, football games and dances. The unsoiled pages of the New Year wehre ushered in noisily and intoxicatingly. Her Christmas was the signal for a lavish outpouring of gifts to satisfy the selfish desires and wants of a pampered people.

Tush!

Because everyone is not gifted with the power of expression in poem and song is no indication of a lack of feeling. Because men and women may put into words some of their innermost thoughts is no sign that they do not love and revere the things most precious in life.

America would not, if she could, change the nature of her Christmas celebration.

If a heart is made glader on that day; if thoughts are a bit more tender than at any other season of the year; if people are more solicitous for the welfare and comfort of those less fortunately situated than themselves—then who shall say that the blessed spirit of old "St. Nick," first implanted in the child's mind in the toddling age, is not decidedly worth while?

PROFITEERS IN FRANCE.

Is it possible to prosecute a war in these modern times without having the government imposed upon by unscrupulous profiteers and by organizations of men taking advantage of a nation's needs to better themselves financially? The experience of practically every large country which participated in the world war would afford cynics and pessimists some ground for claiming that it is not.

Some of our politicians have been attempting to make capital out of the fact that the United States government was mulcted of hundreds of millions of dollars during the period when it was organizing the industries of the nation on a war footing in 1917 and 1918. They have tried to make the people believe that this was something, which could have been easily avoided, and that it was a condition peculiar to this country.

But revelations are now being made in the French chamber of deputies showing that wholesale frauds have been perpetrated on the government of that country, not only during the war but since, as a result of which influential property owners in the region devastated by the kaiser's armies have become millionaires through the payment of huge sums to reimburse them for very moderate property losses, while citizens of less hoggish disposition are still waiting to be compensated.

M. Ingheis, a member of the chamber, makes some specific charges in this regard, of which the following are samples:

1—Two brothers who owned a modest factory in Tourcoing, which was destroyed by the Germans, claimed 110,000,000 francs each, and were allowed 75,000,000 apiece. They bought up claims of other people who could not afford to wait and secured payments of these on a grossly inflated basis. Now they have purchased a big tract of land and are putting up 700 houses for rental.

2—Near the Belgian border, between Tourcoing and Mouseron, a florist suffered damage of 14,000 francs by the destruction of his hothouses. He filed a claim for 170,000 france, and altimately the government paid him 900,000.

3.—A commercial concern owned a hunting preserve in northern France, consisting largely of sand dunes. During the war, the ground was somewhat torn up by German shells. The company put in a bill for 344,000 francs on account of this, and was allowed a still larger sum. Part of the money has been used in planting magnificent trees, building a big casino, putting in tennis courts and other improvements, so that the property can now be used as a pleasure resort and made to produce a large income.

These frauds could not have been accomplished, of course, without the aid of dishonest or incompetent public officials. They are on par with the misuse of funds provided by the United States government for the benefit of disabled soldiers, in purchasing unsuitable hospital sites from politicians at huge prices. They might be compared also with the Teapot Dome oil scandal, in which rich oil lands were practically given away by a government official to private interests with which he later became identified in a business way.

Germany has had much the same experience with its industrial profiteers, who have so far managed to shove the whole cost of the war and the payment of reparations upon the shoulders of the common people.

Perhaps the governments of the world would do well to consider the plan suggested by the Christian Science Monitor, under which capital and labor would be conscripted for service in war time, as well as men to do the fighting, and everybody would work under government orders, with wages and prices fixed on a basis to prevent stay-at-homes making any profit out of the military necessities of their respective countries.

AN INDIGNANT JUDGE.

When a jury in a murder case in New York City a few days ago brought in a verdict of second degree murder instead of first degree, as the evidence unmistakably warranted, the trial judge, Alfred J. Talley, could not refrain from voicing his indignation and disgust. He told the jurors that by their failure to do their sworn duty and decide the case on the evidence "the dignity and the majesty of the law have been lost."

The New York Times, in commenting upon the case, says that the defendant smiled as the judge pronounced the heaviest sentence allowable for the crime of which he had been convicted, twenty years to life, "for he well knew the improbability of his serving even the twenty years."

So it seems that the indeterminate sentence law works the same in all parts of the country, arousing in the criminal that same contempt for authority in the east that it inspires in other sections. And lawyers work the same game on jurors in metropolitan cities that they practice in the rural communities.

It is not that the people of the United States are innately worse than those of other countries that there is more crime here han elsewhere. The alarming prevalence of murder, robbery and other crimes is due entirely to our system of dealing with criminals. Those who indulge habitually in infractions of the law or those who are tempted to do so are cognizant of the weakness of juries and of the law itself. They know that with the safeguards thrown around one who is accused, the man who employs a skilled attorney has better than an even chance to escape and that even though he should be convicted his term in prison will in all probability be the briefest allowable under the statute.

Pardoning boards are but smaller juries, though being in this state elected public officials, they should be of the highest grade of intelligence, exercising the province of the court as well as that of the jury. But no criminal, however hardened, hesitates to lay his case before the board, meeting with success in a surprising number of cases.

Certainly, swiftness and adequacy of punishment constitutes the solution of the crime problem and one of the ways to secure these is by the repeal of the indeterminate sentence law.

CAPACITY TO GOVERN.

Two brief paragraphs of the message which President Coolidge delivered to congress should commend themselves to the thoughtful American citizen. When the president said that "American institutions rest solely on good citizenship" he uttered a truism with which everyone will agree. When he said "they were created by the people who had a background of self-government he offered a thought which is receiving too scanty attention today.

The capacity for self-government indicates an ability to stand alone. It infers a wide range of responsibility for the individual citizens of that nation, both in thought and action. It is incompiatible with the spirit of paternalism, which has so strongly marked the course of legislation within the last few years.

That thought is of particular importance in connection with the problem of immigration. The objection which is being raised against a large number of the immigrants coming to America today rests not upon questions of race or religion. It is purely a question of the preservation of the principles of self-government. Many of those people coming to American shores in recent years have not been trained for self-government. They have no conception of its responsibilities. They are not ready for their new-found liberties.

Recently Gino Speranza, a distinguished American writer in World's Work, touched on the subject as follows:

"I am not, even remotely, of Anglo-Saxon or Nordic stock. But this is my country. And the test of service and devotion for the new stock may be, after all, not how much we give of ourselves but how much of ourselves we deny. The task and the call of us all—old stock and new—as I vision it, is to strive to keep America as it was, and, I pray with all of my heart and my mind, it may ever be."

What finer vision of citizenship could be expressed?

Not how much we give of ourselves but how much we deny ourselves.

Surely when representative government is sorely beset in the mad endeavor of men and women to right real or imaginary ills through governmental action there is food for thought in this. One group claims the right to certain governmental privileges. Another group advances still another claim, and so it goes on down the list. The result is hopeless confusion.

A STEER ON BROADWAY.

All over the: United States and in some foreign countries Lincoln was laughed at some months ago because a maddened cow escaped from the slaughter pens and made a wild and dangerous dash through the business section of the city in the early morning hours. The laughter was only slightly tempered by the report that one woman was very seriously injured by the animal and the world in general took the incident to show that Lincoln was, after all, only a big town, not far removed from the cowboy and steer roping class.

But now it is for us to laugh. Almost identically the same thing happened in Little Old New York which even the most sophisticated will not suggest is back-woodsy nor cowboyish. To paraphrase, it makes a difference whose ox does the goring. A mad steer loose in New York, plunging around on Broadway, perhaps on that fashionable thoroughfare known the world over—Fifth avenue, actually tipping over an automobile—we can guess the make—injured at least one pedestrian before being corralled by New York's highly efficient and numerous policemen.

We repeat, it is to laugh and the whole world can now laugh with us, not at us. We have never claimed to be a second New York, but as the matter of comparason probably the only two cities in the world where such a thing has hapupened are New York and Lincoln.

It's a lucky thing for the movie star that she would not rather have a tooth pulled than be photographed.

STEPHEN LEACOCK

"My Ideal Christmas"

Wanting What I Really Want, and Staving Off What My Heart Does Not Desire

To begin with, for my ideal Christmas, I want plenty of snow. I know that this is a daringly original idea but I state it just the same. And I want the snow to glitter in the winter sunlight like golden coins; or if golden coins are out of the question just now, I want to see the snow falling slowly in great soft flakes like five dollar notes. I should like to put out my hand and catch these flakes, and I'm not sure that its necessary for them to fall slowly either. No, on second thoughts, they may fall as fast as they like. I can catch them in my hat.

Then in the next place, I want my ideal Christmas to be in a house where there are children, and to have it begin early, early in the morning, in fact way back in the night with the sound of the blowing of trumpets, and the playing of mouth organs, when the children are taking the presents out of their stockings. Let my ear awaken to the roar of the toy train rushing across the floor and colliding with the chest of drawers and let me hear the rapid fire of the pop gun.

These early sounds of the awakening nursery are, I say, the best prelude for an ideal Christmas Then as they begin to wax a little fainter ad to be replaced by the sound of children being washed and dressed, I should wish to sit up in bed in a dressing gown and sip chocolate and examine my own presents.

Some Things to Omit.

To discuss these in open print before the eyes of my eager friends is a rather delicate matter. Noting exactly what I want I fear they will at once run out and buy it for me or perhaps store up the information in their minds for use years and years later. I can only beg them that they will not so store it up.

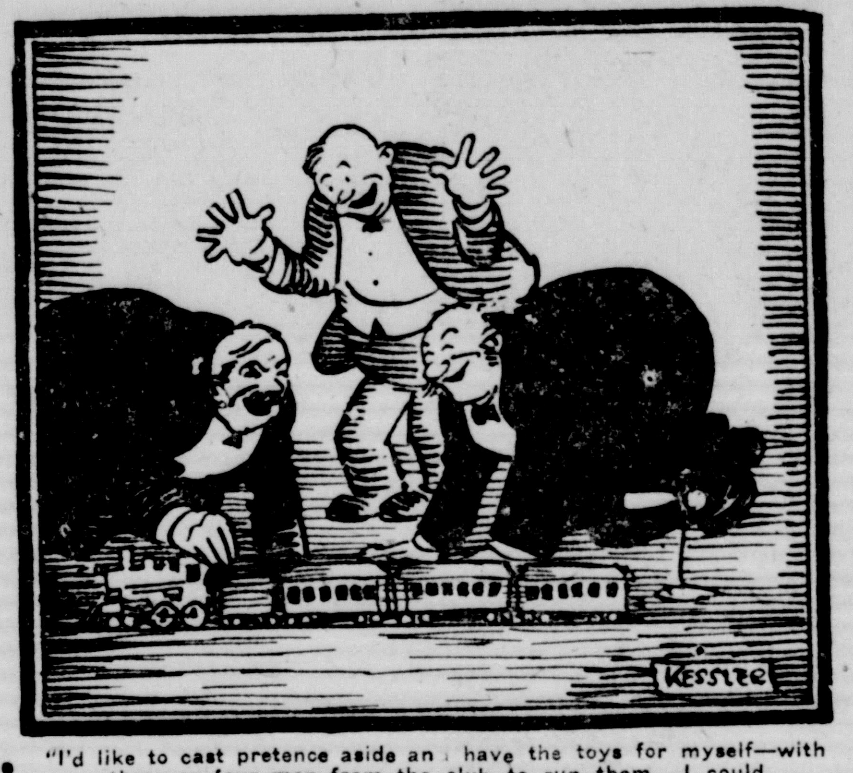
At least I may with perfect taste indicate a few of the things that I do not want and am reluctantly compelled to refuse.

But I regret to say that my desire to have a new copy of Omar Khayyam, Tenneyson's Maid, and Longfellow's Evangeline, has long been sated. In fact I should like to say in a general way that if any of my friends are thinking of sending me a book (and such a thought, though I should never have suggested it myself, is excellent), I should be much gratified if they will simply send me the money and I will go and pick out the book myself. It is a pity that Lord Haldane's Relativity costs twenty-five shillings or perhaps Mrs. Asquith's Memoirs,—I don't mean the last one, I mean the next ones, —may get a little cheaper.

But I pass on from the question of books to the more important matter of articles of prime utility. Under this head I classify all mufflers, suspenders or braces (whether hand-embroidered or machine stitched) all socks, slippers, collar boxes and any other similar articles whatsoever. I hated these when I was six years old and had to tolerate them—but now I am moving on towards sixty and I want what I want when I want it.

A Confession.

Let me here make a very open confession. What I would really like for Christmas would be a few of those interesting mechanical toys that the children get. I'd like a toy steam engine, and a toy windmill, and one of those toy cranes with the pulleys. In fact, all that sort of thing. So do all men.



"I'd like to cast pretence aside an have the toys for myself—with three or four men from the club to run them. I could get a couple of taxifuls in a minute."

On pretence of showing the children how to work them we really sit and play with them for hours: just as our wives under pretence of showing the children how to do it, dress up dolls and play with them all the afternoon.

But for my ideal Christmas I'd like to cast all pretence aside and have the toys for myself: I'd like to spread out on the floor one of those new elaborate toy railways with the signal boxes and the station houses and then get three or four men over from my club to help me run it. I could get a couple of taxifuls of them in a minute.

Solitaire With Knife and Fork.

I turn to the question of Christmas dinner. On this point again I have very pronounced views. I'd like to be left alone with it. The more deeply I reflect on Christmas dinner, (and I have done so for fifty-four years) the more I feel that I'd like to get at it by myself. There are things there that I want to eat with a completeness of concentration which I cannot get in general society.

That Christmas turkey with the stuffing tasting as it never does at any other place or time,—I'd like to take it away by myself to a side room and eat the whole of it. Afterwards I would come back and join, gladly enough, in conversation with the others at the table about the morning sermon or prohibition or the German mark or any other of the bright topics of the hour.

If, therefore, any of my friends are thinking of asking me to Christmas dinner (and why should they not?) I shall be greatly obliged if they will let me do the mere eating part in a room by myself. I can send out for new dishes as I want them.

Wise Men and Wise Winks.

The afternoon of Christmas should be employed in the good old-fashioned way with a brisk walk in the country. This is such a time honored old custom that I for one never propose to depart from it. There is something in the nip of the keen frosty air that sends the blood coursing through the veins and exhilarates the whole being. Let it be a walk by all means. But just one slight word of caution—The wise man in middle life will find it well to take just a short nap, a mere forty winks before starting out.

Let him remember that he has a long tramp before him and like a soldier on the march he must husband his strength. And I know no better way to husband it than to lie down,—just for a few brief minutes, on a sofa with the cushions well arranged under the wise man's head and a pipe of tobacco in his mouth so smoked as to hold the exhilaration of the walk in suspense.

And here let the wise man take a further caution. This nap,—or these winks, let us call them,—may extend themselves, contrary to expectation, till half-past five in the afternoon. To his great surprise on awakening he finds that the time for his walk has passed. Let him not fall into peevishness over this. He has missed his Christmas walk in the conntry—but what of it? Are there not a whole long string of Christmases still to come? Why, there are those of us who have been waiting for that Christmas walk for twenty years.

The Southern Cross

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Will you kindly advise us as to the position of the Southern Cross, with reference to the south pole, and also state how far north the Southern Cross can be seen at sea level. Some of our travelers state that they have seen it from Tampico and also from the Panama Canal. Could it be seen from either of those places fifty feet above sea level? F. C. B.

The question of the visibility from points in the northern hemisphere of the famous Southern Cross, the southern giant star Canopus, and the mysterious Magellanic Clouds, is frequently raised by both travelers and the readers of travelers' tales.

These remarkable celestial objects, and in particular the Southern Cross, possess a singular charm for everybody's imagination, as is strikingly testified by the interest shown by commercial travelers who in their southward jorneys pass within the circle of visibility. The fascination that the shining cross of stars had for the early navigators of the South Seas seems never to be dissipated. To have seen the Southern Cross is a kind of mark of distinction, mentioned with pride and regarded with respect.

Accordingly, many may be interested in knowing what the conditions are far seeing that mast celebrated asterism. The Southern Cross consists essentially of four bright stars with smaller ones scattered around, situated in the Milky Way and roughly imitating the outline of a cross, about six degrees in length, with the bright white star, Alpha, at the base toward the south pole. The star Gamma at the head is orange in color. The two stars, Beta and Delta, indicating the ends of the cross bean, are both white.

The star at the foot, and consequently the farthest south, is about 28 degrees from the south pole, or 62 degrees below the celestial equator. Now, in latitude 40 degrees north, we can see only 50 degrees below the equator, so that for us the foot of the cross, when it is on the meridian, is (neglecting refraction) 12 degrees below the horizon, although the head is only six degrees below. But if we go down to 28 degrees north lattitude (say in southern Texas or the Florida peninsula) we shall have the foot of the cross standing on our southern horizon, and the head of it six degrees above. The whole figure should therefore be visible, provided we have a sea horizon, free of clouds and mists. But at what time should be see it? Only when it is on or near the meridian within the hours of darkness. This occurs in the middle of April, about 11 o'clock in the evening, and about the middle of May, about 9 o'clock. January and February are the best months to see it in the morning sky.

Of course, if the Southern Cross can be seen standing on the horizon in latitude 28 degrees north, it must be well above the horizon in latitude only 22 degrees, which is that of Tampico, and still higher at Panama, in latitude only about nine degrees. From the equator the cross appears with its foot 28 degrees above the southern horizon. From the equator the whole sky, from pole to pole, is visible.

Canopus can be seen from all the southern states, when it is on the meridian, or could be with a sea horizon. The great Magellanic cloud cannot be seen from north of the aropics.

It is an interesting fact to which Richard Hinckley Allen calls attention in his exhaustive book on "Star Names and Their Meanings," that the Southern Cross was last seen from the latitude of Jerusalem about the time of the Crucifixion. What he refers to is the shifting of the constellations that accompanies the procession of the equinoxes.

In consequence of this the Southern Cross and its surroundings have in 5,000 years been drifted many degrees southward by the tipping of the earth's axis away from them. About 3,000 B. C. the Cross was visible as far north as the Baltic Sea. The motion is, of course periodic, and after many thousand years the constellations will swing back through nearly the same places that they before occupied.

A difference of fifty feet in elevation of the observer would have very little effect on the visibility of a star near the horizon. It may be added that the Southern Cross is often found disappointing by those who see it for the first time. Their expectations of a magnificent celestial display are not fulfilled; and yet to others it appears as truly the most notable object in the stellar heavens. In the southern hemisphere the position of the Cross is noted in estimating time at night. Humboldt tells how his guides in Venezuela and Peru would say on a night journey; "Midnight is past; the Cross begins to bend." It serves as a clock-hand because it stands upright when on the meridian.

The Midnight Ride of Wild Horse Harris.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 19.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: With the final obsequies of Boot-Hill graveyard near Sidney, many of the boys who died with their boots on were removed. In many cases of homicide in the newer west, the men who died in the classic manner of gunfire were put in any kind of a vehicle that would answer the purpose of a hearse, and hauled to the cemetery with lariats attached to the saddle-horns of cow-ponies. After the burial, a board was set up at the grave and, to properly identify it as the resting place of one of the western bunch, it was shot full of holes.

For years these boards marked the graves of departed ones and to let their sleeping comrades know that those still "on top of the turf" were keeping alive the spirit of the west and its traditions, a party of passing cowpunchers would redecorate these crude wooden markers with a battery of fresh bullet holes.

One who was laid to rest in Boot-Hill graveyard was "Fritzie." Many old timers knew Fritzie as a one legged cowpuncher, who for a time ran the Miners' hotel in Sidney. Fritzie's infirmity was caused by the magnified sense of humor of his Buddie. Said Buddie arrived home late one night after an hilarious time in Sidney and Fritzie was sleeping when Buddie entered the shack. Buddie decided it would be funny to shoot in the bed near enough to make his partner jump. He did. The partner jumped; his leg was shattered by the bullet, and was later amputated at Sidney Post hospital.

After that Fritzie had paralytic spells that came on suddenly, and left almost as suddenly. One time he was at Tom Kane's ranch near Bronson when thus attacked.

That night two wild horse trailers, who had captured a band of wild horses and had them in Kane's Big Pine Cone Corral, were stopping at the ranch. These trailers were Jerry McGahon and Walter Harris, called Wild Horse Jerry and Wild Horse Harris.

They were excited over Fritzie's paralytic attack, and Harris was going to Sidney for the doctor. Their own horses were rambling out somewhere on the prairie and Harris said he would ride a wild one. Jerry held the lantern and Harris threw a rope into the corral. He caught a wild-eyed mare, snubbed her up to the fence, saddled her and Harris mounted the saddle. In the lantern light, she reared, knocked out the light and disappeared in blackness. Jerry struck a match and saw Harris holding the animal down.

"Open the gate," he yelled,

This was done and the dark form of the horse rose to its feet and with the rider, shot into the night.

That ride to Sidney over prairie full of badger and prairie dog holes, buffalo wallows, alkili flats and the like, and on a wild never-before-ridden horse in the night, was accomplished in short order. Harris kept the animal headed east, generally, between the Union Pacific railroad and Lodge Pole creek, by slapping the side of its head first on one side, then on the other, with a rope, or hat, or hand. After that first frenzied effort to roll him off, its one purpose seemed to be to wish to run away from its tormentor.

This it failed to accomplish and he landed from the back of the running horse, in the streets of Sidney, "forked end down."

The doctor arrived before daylight.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 22.

To the Editor of The Lincoln Star: The letter written by a laboring man which appeared in last Sunday's Star interested me. His letter has its origin in the fact that we can look about us and see what came about by nature. Then again, let us see what came by honest toil and work performed by the laboring class. Then why should not a laboring man expect a living wage? Enough at least to live as well as most other people, and school his children and clothe his family, and lay by a little for a rainy day or in case of illness. Does he get it?

It does seem to be as Mr. Laboring Man has stated we have a class of men in Lincoln who seem to amuse themselves by trying to keep wages and the working class down. Some of them have tried to set the price as to what the farmers should pay the help in harvest and corn shucking. The majority of the farmers gave such no consideration, but made the price with the men when employed. This I know for I was among the farmers. Mr. Laboring Man speaks of a woman taking a job that pays the lucrative salary of seven dollars a week. Right here I wish to speak my mind.

I am referring to unmarried women and girls, and I say that any corporation or business firm or person or even any minister of the gospel who employs female help and does not pay a living wage is posititively contributing to the downfall of our women. It may be essential at times to employ a woman to take a man's place, but then why not give them a living wage? By reading the papers, we see that schools may close for the lack of funds. What is the matter with reversing the school system while funds are not available and have three months of school and nine months of work instead of nine months of school and three months of play. It might be best for all concerned, especially in the future. Some people may think a person crazy who would ask the question: "Will education ever be the cause of the downfall of this nation." Think it over—it may be worth it.

Just a few lines on another subject. The United States has been in a commotion ever since the world war. It now takes one half the people to watch the other half—the half that is doing the watching also need watching. We have too many petty foolish laws, one being the red tape marriage laws. It takes the money out of Nebraska to nearby states.

Now when some foolish school law is passed similar to this marriage law which may yet be done, then they have driven the last nail in the coffin of civilization.

When the war closed we expected all this greed, graft, and profiteering to be stopped and the price of living or high cost of living to come down. About all that has come down much so far is wages. We still live in hopes that the time will come when we can all live in peace like a nest of young birds, which is the only way to be happy. But O, Lord, when will this all be? In this world, or in the world to come?

ANOTHER LABORING MAN.

WALTON, Neb., Dec. 22.

To the Editor of the Lincoln Star: One of the most unique organizations in the city of Lincoln, meets in the Lindell Hotel every Sunday morning. The Oberlies Bible Class is composed of men of every faith in the city. It is the only open forum, so far as I know, within the borders of the state of Nebraska. A freedom of discussion is granted here of the various topics and subjects not elsewhere found. This class is up-to-date and grapples with the largest social, political and economic problems confronting the American public. To my mind it is a power for good, an influence for the upbuilding of our community life in all the ways mentioned. The leader, Mr. Oberlies, has a personality all his own and a method of leadership not equalled anywhere.

As a frequent visitor to the class, I can verily say, the man who attends this class, whatever his beliefs may be, will go away with higher ideals and broader views of a pure and undefiled religion as taught by the Great Master.

Holiday For Everybody.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 22, 1923.—

To the Editor of the Lincoln Star: May I have a little space in your valuable paper for a suggestion. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year are upon us—both days legal holidays, not only in Nebraska, but throughout the whole nation. Days the laboring man as well as the rich, feel they are entitled to without working.

Wholesale houses and retail stores all close the entire day, that their employer as well as employes may spend the time as suits them best. Now then—why can't the oil and gas filling stations close these days as well as other lines of business. Everybody will be willing to buy what oil and gasoline they need the day before and so let the station man have his day off with the rest. Who will make the move in this direction.

A STATION MAN.

Santa's Fun.

O hark, I hear him coming,
He's coming down the street,
I hear him call his reindee'rs
As he passes through the sleet.

Here he comes so sprightly
With his sleight all packed with toys;
His reindeers fly so lightly
With gifts for girls and boys.

We peek from the bedroom curtain
As he startts to unpack his bag,
He has skates for Merton,
'Cause it says so on the tag.

There's a nice big dollie
That peeks from Santa's bag—
And this is meant for Mollie,
Says a note pinned to it's leg.

And when St. Nicholas gets unpacked
Then out the door he'll run;
He won't take one thing with him—
Just think of Santa's fun.

Here and There

Latin-American Trade.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

The steady growth of our commerce with Latin America is one of the most encouraging features of our export and import statistics. With Europe in her present condition, it is likely to be some years before a complete trade revival in that continent is possible. More and more we are turning toward our southern neighbors for foodstuffs and raw materials while they are buying a steadily increasing quantity of our manufactured goods. The most striking development is the displacement of Brazil by Argentina as the South American country with which we are doing the most business. Before the war the United States played a relatively small part in Argentinean trade, Great Britain and Germany doing most of the business with that country. Today the United States buys from Argentina at the rate of $135,000,000 worth of goods per year and sells to that state about $120,000,000 worth. There has also been enormous development in our trade with Chile and Cuba. We are buying twice as much from Chile and one and one-half times as much from Cuba as we did a year ago, and our exports to these two counrties have increased in the same proportion. As our demand for the foodstuffs raised in the tropics increases our imports from Latin America will increase. Our larger purchases will enable those countries to make larger purchases from us. Reciprocity is the rule of trade. Where we buy we are most likely to sell.

In Memory of Child Life.

(Dallas Journal.)

Twelfth street is the widest business thoroughfare of the city of St. Louis. It's a live thoroughfare, naturally. Yet a tombstone has been erected in the street, and this was recently dedicated. The inscription which arrests the eye of the passerby reads: "In memory of child life, sacrificed on the altar of recklessness."

Thirty-two children were killed by automobiles in St. Louis this year, and the monument has been placed as a tribute to them. It stands rather, as it is intended to stand, an indictment of the reckless drivers who robbed these childish victims of life, and an eloquent plea for abatement of reckless driving practices in the future. The monument is set where all can see, as it should be. It denounces and argues more vehemently and impressively than columns of print batteries of posters and a thousand electrical signs might ever do. The thirty-two children cannot be brought back by such a monument nor can the sting of bereavement which their slaughter left in many hearts be eradicated. But the warning which the monument voices may serve to save the lives of many times the 32 who were killed this year. There may be some thing gruesome about the maimed or mangled bodies of victims of the criminally reckless objection to the inscription. The word "altar" doesn't fit as well as "shambles" would.

Pumpkin Pie.

(Chicago Herald and Examiner.)

They had pumpkin pie at the Thanksgiving dinner of the American Society in London. Or rather they thought they had until the hands across the sea fetched it in—with a top crust.

No use! Europe will never be able to understand America. Our aesthetic interests are too subtle for them. Mince pie is flavor; but pumpkin pie is art or nothing. In its golden beauty is the symbol of all the Summer sunshine that is past. Cover that splendid gold and you hide the treasure, ruin the effect.

What is the great moment with a pumpkin pie? Not when the teeth slide gently into that flavorous paste, richer than all the dreams of Keats' "smoother than creamy curd." That, true, is delectable, an instant not to be interrupted by a crust. But that earlier moment, when the eye takes in the yellow glory, and in a flash the soul is full-fed with memories and dreams—that is the great moment, and is that glory to be veiled?

Perish the thought: We would as soon see a mackintosh put on the Venus de Milo.

Gets Excited.

(Harvard Courier.)

Because I object to the primary system as now employed, and to taking the party circle off of the ballot, a friend of mine says I am afraid to trust the people. In a general way, a great majority of the people always want to do the right thing and will do it under proper leadership. But I am one of the common people myself and I know how easy it is to get excited or mad and do the wrong thing

Former Lincoln Man, Now Colonel in Mexican Air Fleet Tells of Life With Border Patrol

Romantic Mexico—romantic enough as it is but what a thrill there would be in doing border patrol in a aeroplane as P G Weyant has been doing for the past three years

Colonel Weyant (for colonel is his rank in the Mexican army according to him) has been doing border patrol work in Mexico for nearly three years now and has seen some interesting sights and had a few thrills out of it

Mr Weyant a former Lincoln man, who went to Mexico as a representative for an airplane manufacturing company in the States He knew a lot about airplanes and the Mexican government was looking for someone just like that to do some border patrol work

The old fashioned smuggling of [illegible] and opiates and liquor was done first on horseback and then by auto and now it has reached the heights of airplanes

Unless one is a pretty active flyer it would be hard to do much with contraband machines but there are few who get by Colonel Weyant.

Flying Patrol Squadron

Most of the men who ride the border on the Mexican side are Mexicans and they ride horseback the flying patrol squadron is not so large but it is quite effective

For instance not so long ago the patrol suspected that a plane going across was carrying contraband goods The machine was ordered to land and the pilot refused He was told again [illegible] and ignored the command so there was nothing to do but bring him down by force and this was done by the aid of the machine guns with which the border machines are equipped

There wasn't a great deal left of the plane and not a very great deal of the pilot but he learned his lesson

The minute they are told to come down when they know that the patrol means business and if they do not they suffer the consequences

According to Mr Weyant the government does not do a great deal with the men after they catch them, but take away their goods which means a financial loss but not much punishment attached for smuggling

Smugglers Are Active

Silk is one of the big things to get across The silk is brought from Mexico into the States if the smugglers can get away with it and if they dont the goods is taken back to the Mexican government and sold A certain percentage of the sale goes to the men who brought the plane down

Opium and all kinds of dope are smuggled across if possible also from Mexico into the State so Mr Weyant says And while it seems as though something should be done to stop the traffic besides just taking it away from the men who carry it across that is all that is done

Liquor is another favorite contraband with the smugglers and goodness knows what happened to this when the pilots are captured

When asked something about the conditions of the country at the present time Mr Weyant said he had nothing to say about it Being a member of the Mexican governmental staff he is somewhat reticent about having any of his statements published.

He told of one incident where more than one hundred and fifty men were court martialed and shot for revolting

"The Mexicans are brave" he said "Not one of these men would allow anyone to blindfold him before he was shot. He would die like a man The men are forced to dig their own graves first and then stand at the foot of it so that when they fall they fall right in the grave and that's the last of them

Dig Their Own Graves

"They would much prefer digging their own graves as heartless as it may seem, for if they do not no one else will and then the bodies will be left for the buzzards

There is nothing so very beautiful about Mexico according to Mr Weyant. There isn't a whole lot of vegetation and sand and cactus constitute a major portion of the scenery but there are lots of thrills and the Mexicans are a pretty good sort after you know them and Mr Weyant isn't sure but what he will be perfectly willing to spend another three or four years doing just as he is doing now

Living and practically everything that is bought in Mexico is high and there are not a great many modern conveniences in some places but there are enough good points to cover up some of the bad ones so he says and the first thing you know you have forgotten about the bad things about the country

P G Weyant, son of Mr and Mrs A J Weyant of Lincoln who has recently been home on a short furlough. Mr Weyant ranks as colonel in the Mexican army and has charge of the aerial border patrol between Mexico and the states.

Former Lincoln Man, Now Colonel in Mexican Air Fleet Tells of Life With Border Patrol

Romantic Mexico—romantic enough as it is, but what a thrill there would be in doing border patrol a la aeroplane as R. G. Weyant has been doing for the past three years.

Colonel Weyant, for colonel is his rank in the Mexican army according to him, has been doing border patrol work in Mexico for nearly three years now, and has seen some interesting sights and had a few thrills out of it.

Mr. Weyant, a former Lincoln man, first went to Mexico as a representative for an airplane manufacturing company in the States. He knew all about airplanes, and the Mexican government was looking for someone just like that to do some border patrol work.

The old fashioned smuggling of silks and opiates and liquor was done first on horseback and then by auto, and now it has reached the heights of airplanes.

Unless one is a pretty active flyer, it would be hard to do much with contraband machines, but there are few who get by Colonel Weyant.

Flying Patrol Squadron.

Most of the men who ride the border on the Mexican side are Mexicans and they ride horseback, the flying patrol squadron is not so large, but it is quite effective.

For instance not so long ago, the patrol suspicioned that a plane going across was carrying contraband goods. The machine was ordered to land and the pilot refused. He was told again to come down and ignored the command, so there was nothing to do but bring him down by force, and this was done by the aid of the machine guns with which the border machines are equipped.

There wasn't a great deal left of the plane and not a whole lot left of the pilot, but he learned his lesson.

The majority of them come down when they know that the patrol means business, and if they do not they suffer the consequences.

According to Mr. Weyant, the government does not do a great deal with the men after they catch them, but take away their goods, which means a financial loss, but not much punishment attached for smuggling.

Smugglers Are Active.

Silk is one of the big things to get across. The silk is brought from Mexico into the States if the smugglers can get away with it and if they don't the goods is taken back to the Mexican government and sold. A certain percentage of the sale goes to the men who brought the plane down.

Opium and all kinds of dope are smuggled across if possible, also, from Mexico into the State, so Mr. Weyant says. And while it seems as though something should be done to stop the traffic besides just taking it away from the men who carry it across, that is all that is done.

Liquor is another favorite contraband with the smugglers, and goodness knows what happened to this when the pilots are captured.

When asked something about the conditions of the country at the present time, Mr. Weyant said he had nothing to say about it. Being a member of the Mexican governmental staff, he is somewhat reticent about having any of his statements published.

He told of one incident where more than one hundred and fifty men were court martialed and shot for revolting.

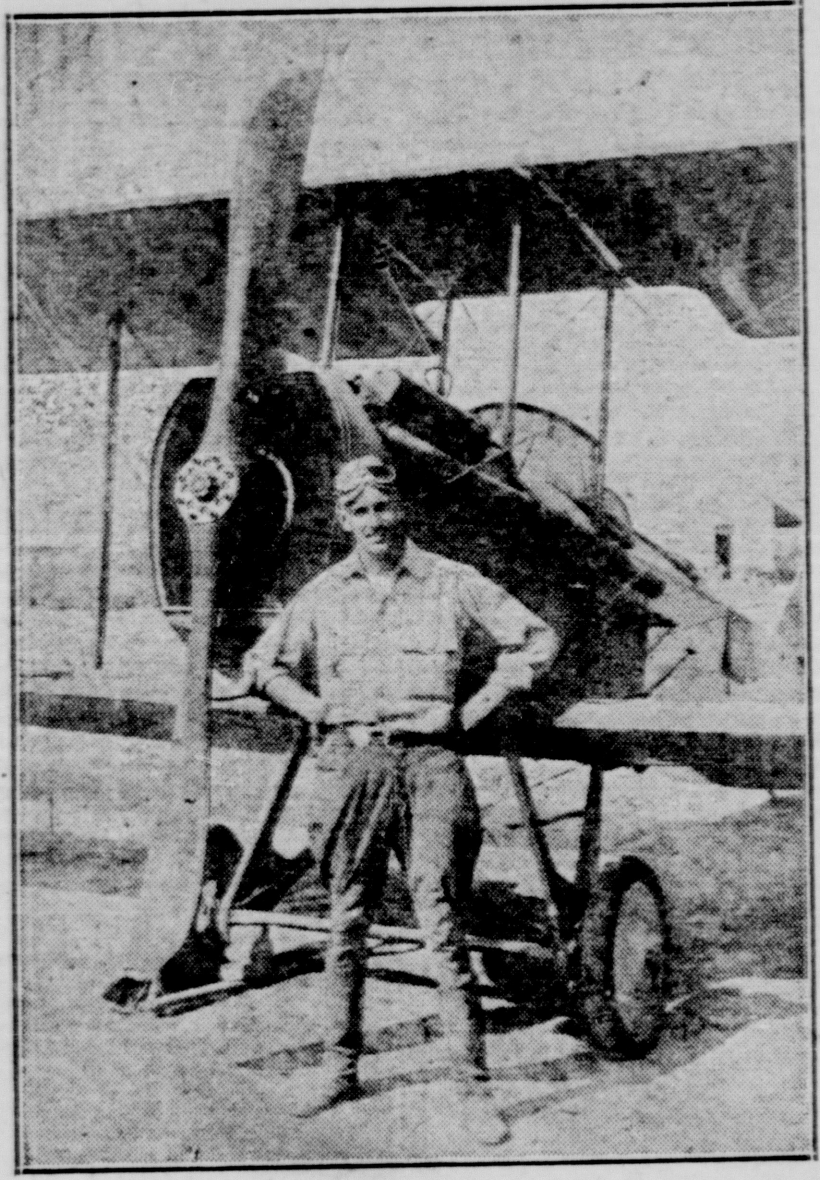
"The Mexicans are brave," he said. "Not one of these men would allow anyone to blindfold him before he was shot. He would die like a man. The men are forced to dig their own graves first, and then stand at the foot of it so that when they fall they fall right in the grave, and that's the last of them.

Dig Their Own Graves.

"They would much prefer digging their own graves, as heartless as it may seem, for if they do not, no one else will, and then the bodies will be left for the buzzards."

There is nothing so very beautiful about Mexico, according to Mr. Weyant. There isn't a whole lot a vegetation, and sand and cactus constitute a major portion of the scenery, but there are lots of thrills, and the Mexicans are a pretty good sort after you know them, and Mr. Weyant isn't sure but what he will be perfectly willing to spend another three or four years doing just as he is doing now.

Living and practically everything that is bought in Mexico is high, and there are not a great many modern conveniences in some places, but there are enough good points to cover up some of the bad ones so he says, and the first thing you know you have forgotten about the bad things about the country.



R. G. Weyant, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Weyant of Lincoln, who has recently been home on a short furlough. Mr. Weyant ranks as colonel in the Mexican army, and has charge of the aerial border patrol between Mexico and the states.

Hastings and Ord Girls Cadets Not First In State---Co-eds Originated Idea in 1888

Atten—shun!

Across the years the crisp order comes ringing!

It's generally for the men that the brief command is rapped out. They hear it most often.

Yet—today—it has become the fashion for the girls to become erect with eyes to the front when that one small word is uttered.

The swanky girl cadets of Hastings respond to it instantly.

The clever Rainbow Queen cadets of Ord are hearing it.

The fair sex has become intrigued with the idea of drilling. The Hasting's girls—so it is said—started a fad that as yet has not waned.

All the girls are keen about presenting arms so smoothly, marching in perfect time, maneuvering in a dozen different positions—and they do love the smart uniforms.

The Hastings girls started it—so 'tis said.

But—the members of that corps are not the first girl cadets of Nebraska.

Many, many years ago before there was a "present" generation with such new and startling ideas, there must have been another generation with equally new and startling ideas for that day—because the girls of that time had a cadet corps.

They heard the command of "atten—shun" and responded, even as the girls of Hastings and Ord are doing.

The first girls' cadet corps in the state was officially known as Company D, University cadets, and unofficially entitled Company Q.

They weren't quite like the trim cadets of today, even though one Mary Walker lived and advocated dress reform.

Her radical ideas did not, evidently meet with approval in this western Nebraska, for, though the girls were willing to become—what? — soldieresses, and carry arms and drill for public delectation—they were not willing to give up skirts—and the uniforms of the first girls' cadet corps in the state were dresses.

Even those forward looking young ladies could not quite care for the white ducks and blue coats of West Point.

The corps was not organized as are those of the present for public performance and mere pleasure. Health was the mighty excuse given by the promoters. There was no gymnasium in which the girls could lose their excess energy, and interclass teams and athletics for the co-eds were unknown. That the young ladies of the university needed physical exercise had not entered the minds of worthy regents.

Some of the girls felt that they would like to have some regular exercise. It was manifestly impossible to receive it within the confines of a building. There was neither building nor instructor for that purpose.

And—who could resist the lure of a blue uniform trimmed with white braid and a cap with a gold cord and two shining buttons upon it?

And—the girls rather liked to watch the men drill. They liked to stay in the background and watch their more or less snappy response to orders. In the mind of one was born the thought that girls could do quite as well—and without odubt a little better.

They tried it.

The exact origin of the first corps of girl cadets is lost, but probably two or three were of like mind and the rest of the co-ed body cheered them on. The corps was organized April 18, 1888 and had a membership of nineteen, including the officers.

Lieutenant Edgar L. Dudley, then commandant of the university cadets, drilled the girls. He was actively interested and very enthusiastic over the project, and as long as he was commandant the girls were regular in attendance and their deportment was above reproach. The girls learned the commands easily, much more so than the boys, either because they applied themselves more diligently or were less self conscious.

The outdoor drills were held on the present site of the mechanical engineering laboratories and the indoor drills were held in one of the rooms in U hall or in one of the civil engineering rooms, which was then known as the armory. The girls were given the same movements as the masculine cadets, and, even more deadly, they had the same weight muskets.

The girl cadets of today would feel utterly unable to drill if obliged to wear the uniform of the girls of 1888. Modeled on their every day clothes, they were several things that uniforms should not be. However, in one memorable picture that the corps had taken, they do appear perfectly content, if some do appear a trifle alarmed as they peer from behind upheld muskets.

The uniforms were of dark blue serge, made with very full skirt and of a length that would trip any ambitious cadet. They billowed and ruffled around the cadetly insteps in a highly alarming manner whenever the girls attempted a sudden movement. The waists were bloused, with high stiff collars, and decorated with a row of tiny brass buttons down the front.

The cuffs, collar, and blouse were trimmed with white braid and the cadet officers had their uniforms embellished with a little gold braid. Their caps were the regulation military caps, stiff visored, small, and trimmed with the buttons and cord. One ex-member remarked that hers was so small that it blew off whenever she "right about faced" and another said hers absolutely hid her face from view, so far did it rest upon her ears.

For several weeks the co-ed cadets were trained in the major portion of the manual of arms and introduced to the technicalities of marching. After a little time, officers were elected, political fashion, and the company assumed real form and appearance.

Nettie Clenen was chosen captain of Company D and Alma Benedict, who became Mrs. Roy Codding and is now deceased, was the first lieutenant. May Tibbles, now Mrs. J. A. Barras of New York City, was second lieutenant, A. Belle Manley, first sergeant, and Louise Pound second lieutenant.

When the co-ed cadets had drilled for some weeks, the company took the field, at the extreme left of the cadet battalion, for dress parade. The members of the company make light of their appearance that day, and of their drilling, but it was not really so bad. The girls created a sensation and the spectators cheered so much that it was difficult to do any drilling.

The girls had learned the proper movements, but it was rather a new idea to present them to a public audience. The other companies seemed to take such long steps that the poor girls were fairly breathless from marching. The movements that they had known so well the day before seemed to take wings and fly and there was a bad tangle of girls and muskets. The men's companies did not drill with their usual precision, because they were so interested in the girls, and their inaccuracies and the attention was flattering, but confusing.

After one more dress parade, when the girls again brought up the extreme left, the semester ended, and with it the glories of the first girls' cadet corps in the state. When the autumn semester opened, Lieutenant Dudley had been transferred and the new commandant, Lieutenant Griffin, looked askance at this novel company.

With the attitude of the new lieutenant toward the company, the girls found it easier and easier to skip drill, make excuses, and absent themselves from parade. Finally, with the gradual lessening of numbers, the company disappeared without ceremonial. One of the members, however, who knows whereof she speaks, said that the muskets were really too heavy, that it was almost impossible for the girls to carry them with any comfort or ease, and that was the real cause behind the failure of the Company D to function longer.

Members of the corps beside the officers were Idear Cornell, Edna Hyatt, Fannie Hunt, Bell Cross, Mary B. Holmes, Sara Schwab, now Mrs. Maurice Deutsch of Lincoln, Mary B. Brown, Charlotte H. Andrus, Edith Leighton, Edith Pierce, Mattie Thurber, Stella Kirker, now a member of the Lincoln high school faculty Lucy Brown, and Stella McGinnis.

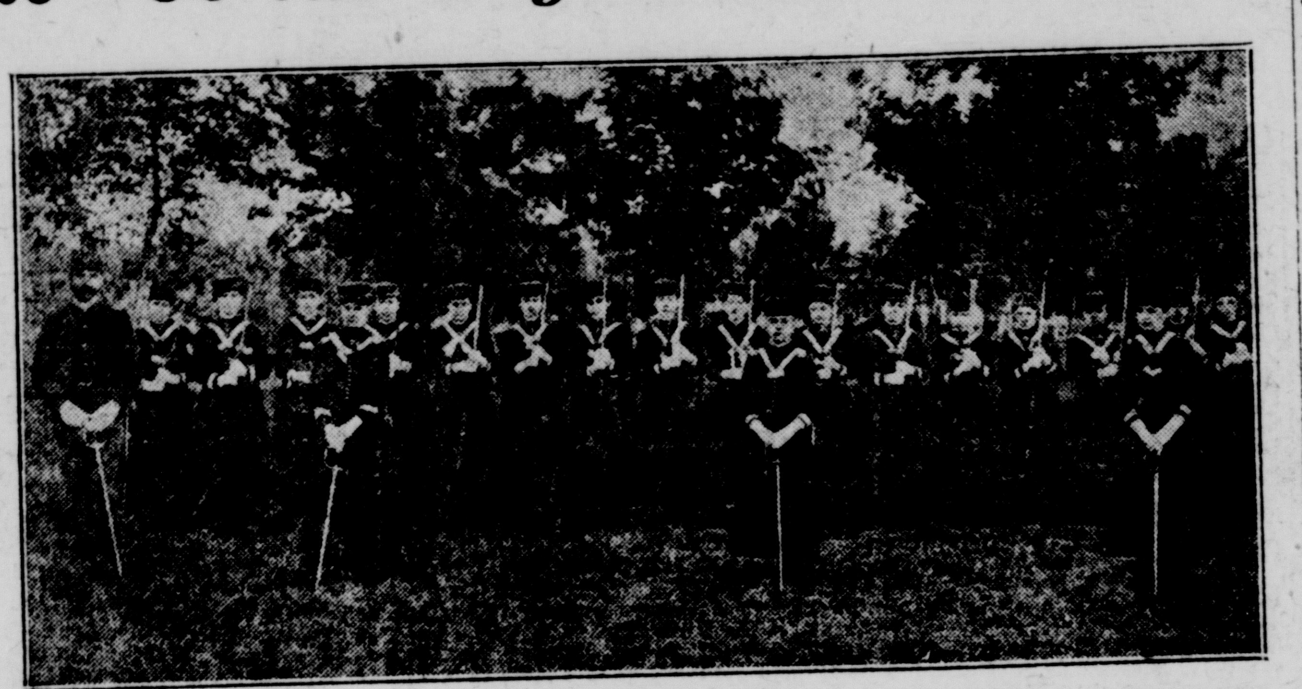
Hastings and Ord Girls Cadets Not First In State---Co-eds Originated Idea in 1888



—Reproduction By MacDonald.

The first girl cadets in the state were organized at the university thirty-five years ago. The members of the corps were as follows: Back row; left to right—A. Belle Manley, first sergeant, Idear Cornell, Edna Hyatt, Fannie Hunt, Belle Cross, Mary B. Holmes, Sara Schwab, Mary B. Brown, Charlotte H. Andrus, Edith Leighton, Edith Pierce, Mattie Thurber, Stella Kirker, Lucy Brown, Stella McGinnis, Louise Pound, second sergeant; front row—left to right: Edgar S. Dudley, commandant, Alma Benedict, first lieutenant, Nettie Clenen, captain of Company D., May Tibbles, second lieutenant.

Atten—shun!

Across the years the crisp order comes ringing!

It's generally for the men that the brief command is rapped out. They hear it most often.

Yet—today—it has become the fashion for the girls to become erect with eyes to the front when that one small word is uttered.

The swanky girl cadets of Hastings respond to it instantly.

The clever Rainbow Queen cadets of Ord are hearing it.

The fair sex has become intrigued with the idea of drilling. The Hasting's girls—so it is said—started a fad that as yet has not waned.

All the girls are keen about presenting arms so smoothly, marching in perfect time, maneuvering in a dozen different positions—and they do love the smart uniforms.

The Hastings girls started it—so 'tis said.

But—the members of that corps are not the first girl cadets of Nebraska.

Many, many years ago before there was a "present" generation with such new and startling ideas, there must have been another generation with equally new and startling ideas for that day—because the girls of that time had a cadet corps.

They heard the command of "atten—shun" and responded, even as the girls of Hastings and Ord are doing.

The first girls' cadet corps in the state was officially known as Company D, University cadets, and unofficially entitled Company Q.

They weren't quite like the trim cadets of today, even though one Mary Walker lived and advocated dress reform.

Her radical ideas did not, evidently meet with approval in this western Nebraska, for, though the girls were willing to become—what? — soldieresses, and carry arms and drill for public delectation—they were not willing to give up skirts—and the uniforms of the first girls' cadet corps in the state were dresses.

Even those forward looking young ladies could not quite care for the white ducks and blue coats of West Point.

The corps was not organized as are those of the present for public performance and mere pleasure. Health was the mighty excuse given by the promoters. There was no gymnasium in which the girls could lose their excess energy, and inter-class teams and athletics for the co-eds were unknown. That the young ladies of the university needed physical exercise had not entered the minds of worthy regents.

Some of the girls felt that they would like to have some regular exercise. It was manifestly impossible to receive it within the confines of building. There was neither building nor instructor for that purpose.

And—who could resist the lure of a blue uniform trimmed with white braid and a cap with a gold cord and two shining buttons upon it?

And—the girls rather liked to watch the men drill. They liked to stay in the background and watch their more or less snappy response to orders. In the mind of one was born the thought that girls could do quite as well—and without odubt a little better.

They tried it.

The exact origin of the first corps of girl cadets is lost, but probably two or three were of like mind and the rest of the co-ed body cheered them on. The corps was organized April 18, 1888 and had a membership of nineteen, including the officers.

Lieutenant Edgar L. Dudley, then commandant of the university cadets, drilled the girls. He was actively interested and very enthusiastic over the project, and as long as he was commandant the girls were regular in attendance and their deportment was above reproach. The girls learned the commands easily, much more so than the boys, either because they applied themselves more diligently or were less self conscious.

The outdoor drills were held on the present site of the mechanical engineering laboratories and the indoor drills were held in one of the rooms in U hall or in one of the civil engineering rooms, which was then known as the armory. The girls were given the same movements as the masculine cadets, and, even more deadly, they had the same weight muskets.

The girl cadets of today would feel utterly unable to drill if obliged to wear the uniform of the girls of 1888. Modeled on their every day clothes, they were several things that uniforms should not be. However, in one memorable picture that the corps had taken, they do appear perfectly content, if some do appear a trifle alarmed as they peer from behind upheld muskets.

The uniforms were of dark blue serge, made with very full skirt and of a length that would trip any ambitious cadet. They billowed and ruffled around the cadetly insteps in a highly alarming manner whenever the girls attempted a sudden movement. The waists were bloused, with high stiff collars, and decorated with a row of tiny brass buttons down the front.

The cuffs, collar, and blouse were trimmed with white braid and the cadet officers had their uniforms embellished with a little gold braid. Their caps were the regulation military caps, stiff visored, small, and trimmed with the buttons and cord. One ex-member remarked that hers was so small that it blew off whenever she "right about faced" and another said hers absolutely hid her face from view, so far did it rest upon her ears.

For several weeks the co-ed cadets were trained in the major portion of the manual of arms and introduced to the technicalities of marching. After a little time, officers were elected, political fashion, and the company assumed real form and appearance.

Nettie Clenen was chosen captain of Company D and Alma Benedict, who became Mrs. Roy Codding and is now deceased, was the first lieutenant. May Tibbles, now Mrs. J. A. Barras of New York City, was second lieutenant, A. Belle Manley, first sergeant, and Louise Pound second lieutenant.

When the co-ed cadets had drilled for some weeks, the company took the field, at the extreme left of the cadet battalion, for dress parade. The members of the company make light of their appearance that day, and of their drilling, but it was not really so bad. The girls created a sensation and the spectators cheered so much that it was difficult to do any drilling.

The girls had learned the proper movements, but it was rather a new idea to present them to a public audience. The other companies seemed to take such long steps that the poor girls were fairly breathless from marching. The movements that they had known so well the day before seemed to take wings and fly and there was a bad tangle of girls and muskets. The men's companies did not drill with their usual precision, because they were so interested in the girls, and their inaccuracies and the attention was flattering, but confusing.

After one more dress parade, when the girls again brought up the extreme left, the semester ended, and with it the glories of the first girls' cadet corps in the state. When the autumn semester opened, Lieutenant Dudley had been transferred and the new commandant, Lieutenant Griffin, looked askance at this novel company.

With the attitude of the new lieutenant toward the company, the girls found it easier and easier to skip drill, make excuses, and absent themselves from parade. Finally, with the gradual lessening of numbers, the company disappeared without ceremonial. One of the members, however, who knows whereof she speaks, said that the muskets were really too heavy, that it was almost impossible for the girls to carry them with any comfort or ease, and that was the real cause behind the failure of the Company D to function longer.

Members of the corps beside the officers were Idear Cornell, Edna Hyatt, Fannie Hunt, Bell Cross, Mary B. Holmes, Sara Schwab, now Mrs. Maurice Deutsch of Lincoln, Mary B. Brown, Charlotte H. Andrus, Edith Leighton, Edith Pierce, Mattie Thurber, Stella Kirker, now a member of the Lincoln high school faculty Lucy Brown, and Stella McGinnis.

Christmas is coming! Its all in the air,
For Santa we'll hang up our stockings with care,
We'll dance 'round the tree that is laden with toys
For good little girls and good little boys;
And then we will lift up our voices and sing,
Till with the glad echo the house tops will ring!

Kiddies at the home for dependent children

Little Folks at the Orthopedic Hospital.

Santa Claus will make his annual visit tomorrow night that is if he is not delayed and it may be that he will not be able to complete his round of visits until the following day. The kiddies and such good kiddies as they have been are anxiously awaiting his coming.

Will he come by airplane or will he come in a racing motor of the very latest model? The kiddies are quite certain that unless the weather man has a change of heart within the next twenty four hours and sends the snow flakes a-falling fast the jolly old fellow will not make his appearance in the great sleigh drawn by the traditional reindeer and to the music of tinkling Christmas bells.

Old Santa will stop for a visit of some length with the kiddies at the state home for dependent children and the Orthopedic hospital where good little girls and good little boys are eagerly anticipating his coming. On the trees laden with gifts will be one from Santa for each of his little friends and there will be candies nuts and other goodies for all.

The Junior League which took over the responsibility of providing Christmas for the children of the state home the Orthopedic hospital and the detention home has been greatly assisted in donations of money and toys from friends of the kiddies and persons interested in their happiness and welfare and all is in readiness for the visit from Santa Claus.

Christmas is coming! It's all in the air;
For Santa we'll hang up our stockings with care;
We'll dance 'round the tree that is laden with toys
For good little girls and good little boys;
And then we will lift up our voices and sing,
Till with the glad echo the house tops will ring!

Kiddies at the home for dependent children.

Little Folks at the Orthopedic Hospital.

Santa Claus will make his annual visit tomorrow night that is if he is not delayed and it may be that he will not be able to complete his round of visits until the following day. The kiddies and such good kiddies as they have been are anxiously awaiting his coming.

Will he come by airplane' or will be come in a racing motor of the very latest model? The kiddies are quite certain that unless the weather man has a change of heart within the next twenty-four hours and sends the snow flakes to falling fast the jolly old fellow will not make his appearance in the great sleigh drawn by the traditional reindeer and to the music of tinkling Christmas bells.

Old Santa will stop for a visit of some length with the kiddies at the state home for dependent children and the Orthopedic hospital where good little girls and good little boys are eagerly anticipating his coming. On the trees laden with gifts will be one from Santa for each of his little friends and there will be candies, nuts and other goodies for all.

The Junior League which took over the responsibility of providing Christmas for the children of the state home, the Orthopedic hospital and the detention home has been greatly assisted in donations of money and toys from friends of the kiddies and persons interested in their happiness and welfare and all is in readiness for the visit from Santa Claus.

Relief Collected Here Christmas Cheer Abroad

A carload of relief supplies recently sent from Lincoln to destitute Germans. The cut shows members of the committee in Lincoln loading the car with bales of clothing. Those in the party are: standing, left to right: Conrad Herzog, Jacob Strackbine, helpers; Rev. Richard Kuehne, who went with the supplies and is helping give them to the needy; Rev. Jacob Wagner, relief worker in Russia in 1922; J. J. Stroh, treasurer and H J Amen, president. In car door, Conrad Bock, helper; on truck, Jake Volz, York, Neb., relief distributor in Russia in 1923. John Rohrig, vice president.

Relief supplies collected in Lincoln are being distributed in Berlin, Germany, this week as Christmas cheer to needy people there, according to an announcement Friday by H. J Amen, 201 F street, following the receipt of a cablegram from Rev. Richard Kuehne, who accompanied the shipment from here. The supplies are being distributed through the German Red Cross, the cablegram states.

The supplies being distributed by the Red Cross, were collected in Lincoln by the American Volga Relef society, and came from all parts of the United States. Clothing made up a greater part of the carload shipment. The work of packing was done by people living on the west side of town, gratis.

According to Mr. Amen, the committee in charge of the relief work in America, has started a second drive for relief to Germans. It is planned to collect a carload of food supplies, principally flour, rice, beans, crackers and any other kind of non-perishable foodstuffs. Money will also be accepted in lieu of foods. It will be used in paying such expenses as it necessarily have to be met. There will also be room in the second car for a small lot of clothing, Mr. Amen said.

The second carload of supplies is being raised as the result of an appeal made by Rev. Kuehne, who says the need of food by thousands of Germans of the poorer class, is great. The appeal by the relief society is made particularly to persons of German descent.

Supplies of any kind may be taken or sent to John Rohrig, 335 South Eighth street. Telephone B-1374.

Church Council to Aid Poor Families On Christmas Day

The Council of Churches being a member of the Council of Social agencies, will clear through the office of the agencies for their distribution of Christmas cheer to needy families The churches are called upon again to show the fine spirit of co-operation which characterized their work at Thanksgiving. The office of the Council of Social agencies is on the fourth floor of the city hall. Miss Meaney, the secretary, will be glad to assist all church groups in reaching those who need help.

"Sunset Lodge,' an interchurch home for aged members of Lincoln churches, a few of whom are to be found in every church in the city, is the dream of some of the enthusiastic council members. Why not begin at this Christmas season to lay plans for such a home? No finer project could be found for our co-operating church leaders than to make adequate provision for these elderly people who, at the close of a long and useful life, are found without families to care for them. A home here in Lincoln or suburbs, easily accessible to friends and pastors, built and financed by generous citizens who would consider it a privilege to render such a fine, Christian service would fill a long felt need, at this very time.

Relief Collected Here Christmas Cheer Abroad

A carload of relief supplies recently sent from Lincoln to destitute Germans. The cut shows members of the committee in Lincoln loading the car with bales of clothing. Those in the party are: standing, left to right: Conrad Herzog, Jacob Strackbine, helpers; Rev. Richard Kuehne, who went with the supplies and is helping give them to the needy; Rev. Jacob Wagner, relief worker in Russia in 1922; J. J. Stroh, treasurer and H. J. Amen, president. In car door, Conrad Hock, helper; on truck, Jacob Volz, York, Neb., relief distributor in Russia in 1923. John Rohrig, vice president.

Relief supplies collected in Lincoln are being distributed in Berlin, Germany, this week as Christmas cheer to needy people there, according to an announcement Friday by H. J. Amen, 201 F street, following the receipt of a cablegram from Rev. Richard Kuehne, who accompanied the shipment from here. The supplies are being distributed through the German Red Cross, the cablegram states.

The supplies being distributed by the Red Cross, were collected in Lincoln by the American Volga Relief society, and came from all parts of the United States. Clothing made up a greater part of the carload shipment. The work of packing was done by people living on the west side of town, gratis.

According to Mr. Amen, the committee in charge of the relief work in America, has started a second drive for relief to Germans. It is planned to collect a carload of food supplies, principally flour, rice, beans, crackers and any other kind of non-perishable foodstuffs. Money will also be accepted in lieu of foods. It will be used in paying such expenses as of necessity have to be met. There will also be room in the second car for a small lot of clothing, Mr. Amen said.

The second carload of supplies is being raised as the result of an appeal made by Rev. Kuehne, who says the need of food by thousands of Germans of the poorer class, is great. The appeal by the relief society is made particularly to persons of German descent.

Supplies of any kind may be taken or sent to John Rohrig, 335 South Eighth street. Telephone B-1374.

Church Council to Aid Poor Families On Christmas Day

The Council of Churches being a member of the Council of Social agencies, will clear through the office of the agencies for their distribution of Christmas cheer to needy families The churches are called upon again to show the fine spirit of co-operation which characterized their work at Thanksgiving. The office of the Council of Social agencies is on the fourth floor of the city hall. Miss Meaney, the secretary, will be glad to assist all church groups in reaching those who need help.

"Sunset Lodge,' an interchurch home for aged members of Lincoln churches, a few of whom are to be found in every church in the city, is the dream of some of the enthusiastic council members. Why not begin at this Christmas season to lay plans for such a home? No finer project could be found for our co-operating church leaders than to make adequate provision for these elderly people who, at the close of a long and useful life, are found without families to care for them. A home here in Lincoln or suburbs, easily accessible to friends and pastors, built and financed by generous citizens who would consider it a privilege to render such a fine, Christian service would fill a long felt need, at this very time.

Persons rated as "stone deaf" at the New York Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, Fort Washington Avenue and 163rd street, have been enabled to hear music by the application to her ears of amplifed electrical vibratory sound currents, David Grimes, radio expert and electrical engineer, says in a report quoted by the New York World on experiments he conducted in that institution.

Grimes who is an associate member of the Institute of Radio Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, invented a radio receiving apparatus requiring no aerial, ground wires or outside connection. He began his experiments on deaf persons with a radio, but soon dropped it for what he says is the better method. At the institution it was said he had been "remarkably successful," but had not succeeded in enabling some of the adult deaf persons to hear at all.

"The tests, which began at the institution last spring," reads Mr. Grimes's report of his findings "were under the auspices of the school faculty. We found there was no student in the school who was totally or 'stone' deaf, although many were so rated. Deafness, then, I concluded was apparentlya relative matter depending entirely on the volume of sound reveived.

"We had no difficulty in enabling those rated as low as 5 per cent to hear perfectly. We increased our volume without distortion until we were reaching the class known as 'stone' deaf. We had several students who were able to hear although they lacked ear drums.

"One result of value was proof that, even if deafness were cured immediately it would mean nothing to the patient until he learned what sound means. Most of the students of the extremely deaf class became so as a result of infantile diseases. The mechanism of their ears was intact. At the time of the illness all the child's muscles were weakened, including those of the ear. When it recovered it moved its other muscles, but the ear muscles had no similar means of recuperation.

"When we applied the tremendous second volume the ear muscles were forced to move at each sound."

Grand opera is to be served with meals at one of Londons west end restaurants this winter.

The producing manager of the Carl Rosa Opera company has been engaged to conduct the performances, eac hlimited to six singers, which may or may not help the diners to forget the monotony of mutton and beef, brussels sprouts and boiled potatoes, while awaiting the coming of spring and a more varied menu.

A wag has suggested that the best cafe aria, especially fitted for closing time, is "Adieu, notre petite table," from "Manon."

Singing is the secret of Welsh musical progress. Down deep in the mines, where dynamite and strange gasses flirt with danger and death, the Welsh miner, excelled by none in the world, gathers with his friends and sings and sings and sings. Who can say that their far-famed excellence in the hazardous work of mining is not due in a large measure to the good cheer and good spirits which their voices carry with them to the midnight darkness of the mines that the world may have warmth in the long winter months?

However, it is not in the highly drilled chorus that the Welsh are most surprising. When the entire gathering at the Eisteddfod arises and pours forth its soul in such a hymn as "Huddersfield," you will hear such a chorus as you have never heard before. These Welsh folk sing from memory in four parts, and the sheer beauty of the thing makes one dizzy with delight.

The inspiration of music, possibly more than anything else, has carried men of Welsh blood to some of the loftiest positions ever gained by man.

That the public is again demanding the better class of songs in preference to jazz and raagtime numbers, was pointed out at the twenty-first annual convention of the International Lyceum and Chautauqua association, held in Chicago recently. Eighteen leading music publishers were represented at the convention. Speakers declared there had been a decided improvement in the public taste for music, as indicated by the results of the last chautauqua season.

"Main Street is tired of jazz," said Lorado Taft, the celebrated sculptor. "In more than two-thirds of the towns where the chautauqua programs were presented last summer there was an overwhelming response to serious music and serious lectures."

"The chautauqua performers are using a higher standard of song now," said an official of one of the large music publishers at the convention. "The music that has proved interesting to them has been of the highest type. There also seems to be a tendency to revive some of the old, lasting songs and melodies.

With no other tools than a jack knife, saw and chisel, Harry Moskovitz, eighteen years old, living in a Boston suburb, constructed a full-sized violin from odds and ends of wood found in his father's cellar.

Though he never studied violin music, Moskovitz had studied the flute and from his knowledge of this instrument's music was able to string his violin correctly. A violin teacher who tested the instrument said its tone was perfect.

An old pine bureau drawer furnished the wood for the bottom of the violin, an oak door from the same piece of furniture furnished wood for the back, the neck was made from a stick of ordinary white wood and the scroll was fashioned from an oak table leg.

The small organ at the Bowery Mission, New York City, has an interesting history. Unusually fine for its size, it was built for the Marquard chapel at Princeton university. After it had been for years an inspiration to the fortunate and the wealthy it was removed to the Bowery Mission.

The man who arranged the purchase of the organ for the mission was the original of "The Volunteer Organist," the most popular ballad in the late '90s. He was Victor Hugo Benke. Benke, whose mother was French and father Polish, came to this country without a knowledge of the language. He had hard luck and after weeks of wretchedness was found one night on a park bench destitute and starving, by another derelict, who suggested going to the Bowery Mission for food and shelter.

"Mother" Bird, a patroness of the mission, was conducting the meeting that night and there was no one to play for the singing. After several attempts to have the men sing without music Mrs. Bird asked: "Is there anyone here who can play?" Benke, dirty, ragged and wretched, played and he held his audience spellbound. Mrs. Bird gave him some money before he left and the next day he got work, but in a short time he returned to the mission where he had been helped. He was made organist there and remained until his death ten years later.

Benke had many flattering offers to play at large churches, but he preferred to stay and help the men in the Bowery. Many of his hymns are well known and his genius was recognized in musical circles.

A New Orleans shoe repair and shine shop reports that it has almost doubled its business since it installed individual waiting booths, in which there are telephone receivers connected with a central station that plays into the receiver the latest popular music. The booths are semi-enclosed, to give customers privacy while waiting for their shoes to be repaired.

To be a successful theatre organist of the highest type requires good piano technique, supplemented by a course in the technique of organ-playing under a teacher of the legitimate organ-playing school—including the use of both feet in playing the pedals, gaining independence of hands and feet, use of stops, swell pedals; in fact, a complete mastery of the physical or technical resources of the instrument. When the student has acquired the technique of the organ-playing his work can be adapted to theatre use, either through his own ability so to adjust it, or by coaching with a theatre-organist of the highest type.

The highest type theatre organist usually has the ability to give the technical training necessary, as well as the adaptation of the organ-playing principles to theatre work. Added to this equipment, the student should acquire the theoretical knowledge necessary to modulate, and if possible, to improvise. The latter requires lengthy and close study and practice for reaching success; and, if the student does not have some natural ability or the time for sufficient study of the subject, it will be far better to "mit the work to set compositions, using such excerpts as will fit the situation.

Granville Bantock, one of the adjudicators brought out from England especially for the Canadian festivals this year, stated that the first festival held at Toronto was the best initial festival he had ever attended.

If the public attendance was anything to go by, the festival was far from a success. But, fortunately, the true measure of success is not gauged by public attendance; it is judged by the number of entrants, and also by the calibre of the work. And in these respects almost everyone in Toronto agreed that the festival was highly successful, and that a good foundation for the future festivals was laid.

Of particular interest was the large number of winners in the various classes from points outside of Toronto. These were from Brantford, Strathroy, Hamilton, London, Oakville, Oshawa, Peterboro, Guelph, Weston, Picton, Orangeville, Alton, Galt Bartonville, Sault Ste. Marie Kitchner, Aylmer, Ottawa, St. Thomas, Hespeler, Paris, Owen Sound, Mimico Beach, Brampton and other points.

On the final evening of the festival a grand concert given by a number of representative prize-winners, was held. Mr. Bantock on this occasion gave a short resume of the week's activities, and incidentally gave some personal impressions and observations on the festival as a whole.

"I want to say just a word about the excellence of the program of the music that has been selected," he said. "I have no idea why we were invited to come out here from the old country when you have such excellent men here, and people who are in charge of the music, who evidently know much more about it than we do in the old country. If you asked us to come over here with the object of giving you any information, you are sadly mistaken, because we have learned a great deal more from you. I am not so sure that you have learned from us."

Russian dressing will add piquancy to the orchestral fare that will be offered to Bostonians in 1924 by the revered Boston Symphony. Beginning with that season, the Hub's famous orchestra will have for its conductor of the Russian cosmopolite, Serge Koussevitzky, whose latest fame has been won in Paris. Boston critics see the engagement as a definite national cycle in the leadership of the orchestra. That is to say, another national cycle. Before the war all the orchestra's conductors with one exception were German. After the wartime disrupting of the Symphony's ranks, its trustees chose a new broom to sweep away its troubles—that broom being labelled "Made in France" and wielded, first, by Henri Rabaud and of recent years by Pierre Monteux. One of the Boston critics, H. T. Parker, of the "Transcript," declares that there has been a certain disposition in Paris to regard the Boston Symphony as one of the incidental conquests of the late war and a permanent dependency of Parisian conductors. With the engagement of Koussevitzky that illusion vanishes. "To Paris, as well as to Berlin," says Mr. Parker, "it is good to proclaim our free and independent choice." Our big symphony orchestras are evidently not yet ready to show that independence of Europe by engaging an American as conductor. At all events, the appointment is generally regarded by friends of the Boston band as a step forward.

Youthful will triumphs over old age in the person of Vladimir de Pachmann, who again visits us as an invading pianist seventy-five years young. Moreover, he brought with him a new method of playing which the reporters described as based upon a stiff wrist, thereby grieving Vladimir. His explanation is that the hand is kept in a straight line with the arm—it does not move from side to side. He moves the whole arm and sometimes the whole body. The reporters were also dazed by de Pachmann's frank belief in the pre-eminence of his own playing. 'Well, the other big pianists feel the same way about themselves, but they don't admit it," such was the comment of one cynical observer. Of modern composers de Pachmann ranks a brother pianist, Godowsky, as the greatest.

MIDLAND COLLEGE NOTES.

Beside the regular weekly Midland, a special eight-page cornerstone edition of The Midland was put out this week by the Midland staff. The edition is the result of weeks of hard work by the staff and is a credit to the institution, giving the plans and progress made on the Gymnasium-Commons building as well as a vision of the plans for the future greater Midland. The new building now under construction will furnish heat for all the other buildings on the campus, it will contain kitchen, dining and banquet halls completely equipped and also be one of the finest gymnasiums in the state. The first step taken by the executive committee in the aim toward the Greater Midland was the adopting of a definite plan for the college campus. The second step is the erection of several new buildings within the next few years. Upon the completion of the Gymnasium-Commons building, the next buildings will no doubt be a girls dormitory, for which $50,000 has already been pledged by Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Luckey of Lincoln, and a college library, $30,000 having been set aside for this purpose from the Midland Carnegie library at Atchison, Kans. The third great step will the an endowment campaign which will probably be carried on next spring.

The societies and organization of the college joined together this year in the giving of an all-school Christmas program on Friday morning, Dec. 21, at chapel. A beautiful organ prelude "Silent Night" was given by Prof. Shoemaker, the Christmas story was read, carols sung by a double quartet, a Christmas reading, and a violin duet by Miss Ida Johnson and Orval Stephenson. A Christmas play, "Queen Christmas" was well presented under the direction of Miss L. Louise Diehl, and at the close the entire audience sang "Joy to the World, the Lord is Come."

Christmas parties were given on Thursday evening, December 20, by the Phi Kappa Literary society at the home of Miss Dorothy Struble, by the Kalophroneans in the Kal Hall, the Eurekas in the old chapel, and by the Wynn Literary society at the home of Mrs. Mary Anthony.

"Peace On Earth"

The age-old sentiment, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," should be as meaningful in the closing days of 1923, as it was in the day it was first spoken, nineteen centuries ago.

In accord with that sentiment, we want to express our sincere appreciation of the many kindnesses accorded us by our friends during the twelve-month just closing, as well as throughout the 18 years of our history.

Incidentally, we wish to pledge to you our best service during the coming year—and always. May you have a happy and bountiful 1924.

Persons rated as "stone deaf" at the New York Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, Fort Washington Avenue and 163rd street, have been enabled to hear music by the application to her ears of amplifed electrical vibratory sound currents, David Grimes, radio expert and electrical engineer, says in a report quoted by the New York World on experiments he conducted in that institution.

Grimes who is an associate member of the Institute of Radio Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, invented a radio receiving apparatus requiring no aerial, ground wires or outside connection. He began his experiments on deaf persons with a radio, but soon dropped it for what he says is the better method. At the institution it was said he had been "remarkably successful," but had not succeeded in enabling some of the adult deaf persons to hear at all.

"The tests, which began at the institution last spring," reads Mr. Grimes's report of his findings "were under the auspices of the school faculty. We found there was no student in the school who was totally or 'stone' deaf, although many were so rated. Deafness, then, I concluded was apparentlya relative matter depending entirely on the volume of sound reveived.

"We had no difficulty in enabling those rated as low as 5 per cent to hear perfectly. We increased our volume without distortion until we were reaching the class known as 'stone' deaf. We had several students who were able to hear although they lacked ear drums.

"One result of value was proof that, even if deafness were cured immediately it would mean nothing to the patient until he learned what sound means. Most of the students of the extremely deaf class became so as a result of infantile diseases. The mechanism of their ears was intact. At the time of the illness all the child's muscles were weakened, including those of the ear. When it recovered it moved its other muscles, but the ear muscles had no similar means of recuperation.

"When we applied the tremendous second volume the ear muscles were forced to move at each sound."

Grand opera is to be served witn meals at one of Londons west end restaurants this winter.

The producing manager of the Carl Rosa Opera company has been engaged to conduct the performances, eac hlimited to six singers, which may or may not help the diners to forget the monotony of mutton and beef, brussels sprouts and boiled potatoes, while awaiting the coming of spring and a more varied menu.

A wag has suggested that the best cafe aria, especially fitted for closing time, is "Adieu, notre petite table," from "Manon."

Singing is the secret of Welsh musical progress. Down deep in the mines, where dynamite and strange gasses flirt with danger and death, the Welsh miner, excelled by none in the world, gathers with his friends and sings and sings and sings. Who can say that their far-famed excellence in the hazardous work of mining is not due in a large measure to the good cheer and good spirits which their voices carry with them to the midnight darkness of the mines that the world may have warmth in the long winter months?

However, it is not in the highly drilled chorus that the Welsh are most surprising. When the entire gathering at the Eisteddfod arises and pours forth its soul in such a hymn as "Huddersfield," you will hear such a chorus as you have never heard before. These Welsh folk sing from memory in four parts, and the sheer beauty of the thing makes one dizzy with delight.

The inspiration of music, possibly more than anything else, has carried men of Welsh blood to some of the loftiest positions ever gained by man.

That the public is again demanding the better class of songs in preference to jazz and raagtime numbers, was pointed out at the twenty-first annual convention of the International Lyceum and Chautauqua association, held in Chicago recently. Eighteen leading music publishers were represented at the convention. Speakers declared there had been a decided improvement in the public taste for music, as indicated by the results of the last chautauqua season.

"Main Street is tired of jazz," said Lorado Taft, the celebrated sculptor. "In more than two-thirds of the towns where the chautauqua programs were presented last summer there was an overwhelming response to serious music and serious lectures."

"The chautauqua performers are using a higher standard of song now," said an official of one of the large music publishers at the convention. "The music that has proved interesting to them has been of the highest type. There also seems to be a tendency to revive some of the old, lasting songs and melodies.

With no other tools than a jack knife, saw and chisel, Harry Moskovitz, eighteen years old, living in a Boston suburb, constructed a full-sized violin from odds and ends of wood found in his father's cellar.

Though he never studied violin music, Moskovitz had studied the flute and from his knowledge of this instrument's music was able to string his violin correctly. A violin teacher who tested the instrument said its tone was perfect.

An old pine bureau drawer furnished the wood for the bottom of the violin, an oak door from the same piece of furniture furnished wood for the back, the neck was made from a stick of ordinary white wood and the scroll was fashioned from an oak table leg.

The small organ at the Bowery Mission, New York City, has an interesting history. Unusually fine for its size, it was built for the Marquard chapel at Princeton university. After it had been for years an inspiration to the fortunate and the wealthy it was removed to the Bowery Mission.

The man who arranged the purchase of the organ for the mission was the original of "The Volunteer Organist," the most popular ballad in the late '90s. He was Victor Hugo Benke. Benke, whose mother was French and father Polish, came to this country without a knowledge of the language. He had hard luck and after weeks of wretchedness was found one night on a park bench destitute and starving, by another derelict, who suggested going to the Bowery Mission for food and shelter.

"Mother" Bird, a patroness of the mission, was conducting the meeting that night and there was no one to play for the singing. After several attempts to have the men sing without music Mrs. Bird asked: "Is there anyone here who can play?" Benke, dirty, ragged and wretched, played and he held his audience spellbound. Mrs. Bird gave him some money before he left and the next day he got work, but in a short time he returned to the mission where he had been helped. He was made organist there and remained until his death ten years later.

Benke had many flattering offers to play at large churches, but he preferred to stay and help the men in the Bowery. Many of his hymns are well known and his genius was recognized in musical circles.

A New Orleans shoe repair and shine shop reports that it has almost doubled its business since it installed individual waiting booths, in whch there are telephone receivers connected with a central station that plays into the receiver the latest popular music. The booths are semi-enclosed, to give customers privacy while waiting for their shoes to be repaired.

To be a successful theatre organist of the highest type requires good piano technique, supplemented by a course in the technique of organ-playing under a teacher of the legitimate organ-playing school—including the use of both feet in playing the pedals, gaining independence of hands and feet, use of stops, swell pedals; in fact, a complete mastery of the physical or technical resources of the instrument. When the student has acquired the technique of the organ-playing his work can be adapted to theatre use, either through his own ability so to adjust it, or by coaching with a theatre-orgnaist of the highest type.

The highest type theatre organist usually has the ability to give the technical training necessary, as well as the adaptation of the organ-playing principles to theatre work. Added to this equipment, the student should acquire the theoretical knowledge necessary to modulate, and if possible, to improviso. The latter requires lengthy and close study and practice for reaching success; and, if the student does not have some natural ability or the time for sufficient study of the subject, it will be far better to limit the work to set compositions, using such excerpts as will fit the situation.

Granville Bantock, one of the adjudicators brought out from England especially for the Canadian festivals this year, stated that the first festival held at Toronto was the best initial festival he had ever attended.

If the public attendance was anything to go by, the festival was far from a success. But, fortunately, the true measure of success is not gauged by public attendance; it is judged by the number of entrants, and also by the calibre of the work. And in these respects almost everyone in Toronto agreed that the festival was highly successful, and that a good foundation for the future festivals was laid.

Of particular interest was the large number of winners in the various classes from points outside of Toronto. These were from Brantford, Strathroy, Hamilton, London, Oakville, Oshawa, Peterboro, Guelph, Weston, Picton, Orangeville, Alton, Galt Bartonville, Sault Ste. Marie Kitchner, Aylmer, Ottawa, St. Thomas, Hespeler, Paris, Owen Sound, Mimico Beach, Brampton and other points.

On the final evening of the festival a grand concert given by a number of representative prize-winners, was held. Mr. Bantock on this occasion gave a short resume of the week's activities, and incidentally gave some personal impressions and observations on the festival as a whole.

"I want to say just a word about the excellence of the program of the music that has been selected," he said. "I have no idea why we were invited to come out here from the old country when you have such excellent men here, and people who are in charge of the music, who evidently know much more about it than we do in the old country. If you asked us to come over here with the object of giving you any information, you are sadly mistaken, because we have learned a great deal more from you. I am not so sure that you have learned from us."

Russian dressing will add piquancy to the orchestral fare that will be offered to Bostonians in 1924 by the revered Boston Symphony. Beginning with that season, the Hub's famous orchestra will have for its conductor of the Russian cosmopolite, Serge Koussevitzky, whose latest fame has been won in Paris. Boston critics see the engagement as a definite national cycle in the leadership of the orchestra. That is to say, another national cycle. Before the war all the orchestra's conductors with one exception were German. After the wartime disrupting of the Symphony's ranks, its trustees chose a new broom to sweep away its troubles—that broom being labelled "Made in France" and wielded, first, by Henri Rabaud and of recent years by Pierre Monteux. One of the Boston critics, H. T. Parker, of the "Transcript," declares that there has been a certain disposition in Paris to regard the Boston Symphony as one of the incidental conquests of the late war and a permanent dependency of Parisian conductors. With the engagement of Koussevitzky that illusion vanishes. "To Paris, as well as to Berlin," says Mr. Parker, "it is good to proclaim our free and independent choice." Our big symphony orchestras are evidently not yet ready to show that independence of Europe by engaging an American as conductor. At all events, the appointment is generally regarded by friends of the Boston band as a step forward.

Youthful will triumphs over old age in the person of Vladimir de Pachmann, who again visits us as an invading pianist seventy-five years young. Moreover, he brought with him a new method of playing which the reporters described as based upon a stiff wrist, thereby grieving Vladimir. His explanation is that the hand is kept in a straight line with the arm—it does not move from side to side. He moves the whole arm and sometimes the whole body. The reporters were also dazed by de Pachmann's frank belief in the pre-eminence of his own playing. 'Well, the other big pianists feel the same way about themselves, but they don't admit it," such was the comment of one cynical observer. Of modern composers de Pachmann ranks a brother pianist, Godowsky, as the greatest.

MIDLAND COLLEGE NOTES.

Beside the regular weekly Midland, a special eight-page cornerstone edition of The Midland was put out this week by the Midland staff. The edition is the result of weeks of hard work by the staff and is a credit to the institution, giving the plans and progress made on the Gymnasium-Commons building as well as a vision of the plans for the future greater Midland. The new building now under construction will furnish heat for all the other buildings on the campus, it will contain kitchen, dining and banquet halls completely equipped and also be one of the finest gymnasiums in the state. The first step taken by the executive committee in the aim toward the Greater Midland was the adopting of a definite plan for the college campus. The second step is the erection of several new buildings within the next few years. Upon the completion of the Gymnasium-Commons building, the next buildings will no doubt be a girls dormitory, for which $50,000 has already been pledged by Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Luckey of Lincoln, and a college library, $30,000 having been set aside for this purpose from the Midland Carnegie library at Atchison, Kans. The third great step will the an endowment campaign which will probably be carried on next spring.

The societies and organization of the college joined together this year in the giving of an all-school Christmas program on Friday morning, Dec. 21, at chapel. A beautiful organ prelude "Silent Night" was given by Prof. Shoemaker, the Christmas story was read, carols sung by a double quartet, a Christmas reading, and a violin duet by Miss Ida Johnson and Orval Stephenson. A Christmas play, "Queen Christmas" was well presented under the direction of Miss L. Louise Diehl, and at the close the entire audience sang "Joy to the World, the Lord is Come."

Christmas parties were given on Thursday evening, December 20, by the Phi Kappa Literary society at the home of Miss Dorothy Struble, by the Kalophroneans in the Kal Hall, the Eurekas in the old chapel, and by the Wynn Literary society at the home of Mrs. Mary Anthony.

Many of the members of the faculty and their families will spend the holidays in Fremont. Among those who will go elsewhere are Miss Ruth Leamer, librarian, to her home in Clinton, Ia.; Miss Ruth Hofrichter, Mrs. Turner and Miss Turner to Lincoln, and Mrs. Ellen Howe, who will spend the Christmas vacation with her son in Atchison, Kansas. Dr. J. F. Krueger and family will go to Auburn, Neb., to spend Christmas day.

"Peace On Earth"

The age-old sentiment, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," should be as meaningful in the closing days of 1923, as it was in the day it was first spoken, nineteen centuries ago.

In accord with that sentiment, we want to express our sincere appreciation of the many kindnesses accorded us by our friends during the twelve-month just closing, as well as throughout the 18 years of our history.

Incidentally, we wish to pledge to you our best service during the coming year—and always. May you have a happy and bountiful 1924.

Dear Movie Editor—I just saw my letter in the Star today, and here I am with a long list of questions I hope you can spare the space, and if you can't write me a personal letter.

Why is it that it takes two weeks before you publish a letter?

Kindly tell me which is married to Harold Lloyd, Mildred Davis or Marion Davies?

Kindly give me the address, color of hair and eyes, height and weight of the forty-four actors and actresses whose names I am sending. I must have these for my movie book Hoping I am not asking too much of you, I remain,

EAGER

It sometimes takes more than two weeks to see your letter published I try to answer them in the order in which they come to my desk, and if there are a great many ahead of you, you have to await your turn.

Mildred Davis, and not Marion Davies, is Mrs Harold Lloyd. Marion is not married

I am always glad to answer any reasonable question for a fan, but to answer your forty-four questions completely would utilize all of the space allotted to my department this week, and I do not think it would be fair to the other fans A great many of your descriptions are given in the letters preceding this I'm sorry but I do not answer letters personally

Sincere Thanks---

To the thousands who have so generously responded to the announcement of Mr. Guy Bates Post's return to the speaking stage---by their early reservations through the mails, the writer expresses sincere thanks. This acknowledgment of the many, that Mr. Post's impersonations possess the faculty of being almost always, almost perfect, and frequently reach the pinnacle so near perfection, his audience is transported to the realms of realizing, what have ever been their fondest dreams, that he is "master of art"---that manifestation of emotion speaking the only language that is understood by all---irrespective of creed, nationality, sex or education---whether the expression be of the emotion of gladness, sadness, shocks or tears---is most gratifying.

In his present play, "The Climax," Mr. Post ignites in every auditor the spark of genius that is a part of the subconscious mind of every man and woman, but lies latent in the souls of the vast multitude—Mansfield had the same gift, so did Irving and Booth and Patrick Henry and Henry Ward Beecher. Shakespeare possessed it—or it possessed him—to a super degree, and when we see Guy Bates Post's tense impersonations, fidelity to natural detail, and hear his resonant eloquence, he makes us know we are within the gripping reality of a "superior" world of acting.

Only the standard prices of seventy-five cents to two dollars and fifty cents for Saturday matinees, and from one dollar to three dollars for night performances will be charged. Mail orders will be filled in the order received when accompanied by purchase price plus tax and self-addressed stamped envelope. There will be no laying aside of seats or reservations by phone. The first applicants will have first choice—either by mail or personally.

MELVILLE B. RAYMOND,
Director of Tour.

The Lincoln engagement at the Orpheum Theater, for Two consecutive performances, Matinee and Night, Saturday, December 29. The mail order reservations are—perhaps—in excess of any ever before placed in this city, and though choice seats may yet be had by mail, for any performance, at any price, I earnestly suggest early reservations.

Dear Movie Editor—I just saw my letter in the Star today, and here I am with a long list of questions. I hope you can spare the space, and if you can't write me a personal letter.

Why is it that it takes two weeks before you publish a letter?

Kindly tell me which is married to Harold Lloyd, Mildred Davis or Marion Davies?

Kindly give me the address, color of hair and eyes, height and weight of the fortyfour actors and actresses whose names I am sending. I must have these for my movie book. Hoping I am not asking too much of you, I remain,
EAGER.

It sometimes takes more than two weeks to see your letter published. I try to answer them in the order in which they come to my desk, and if there are a great many ahead of you, you have to await your turn.

Mildred Davis, and not Marion Davies, is Mrs. Harold Lloyd. Marion is not married.

I am always glad to answer any reasonable question for a fan, but to answer your forty-four questions completely would utilize all of the space allotted to my department this week, and I do not think it would ee fair to the other fans. A great many of your descriptions are given in the letters preceding this. I'm sorry, but I do not answer letters personally.

Sincere Thanks---

To the thousands who have so generously responded to the announcement of Mr. Guy Bates Post's return to the speaking stage---by their early reservations through the mails, the writer expresses sincere thanks. This acknowledgment of the many, that Mr. Post's impersonations possess the faculty of being almost always, almost perfect, and frequently reach the pinnacle so near perfection, his audience is transported to the realms of realizing, what have ever been their fondest dreams, that he is "master of art"---that manifestation of emotion speaking the only language that is understood by all---irrespective of creed, nationality, sex or education---whether the expression be of the emotion of gladness, sadness, shocks or tears---is most gratifying.

In his present play, "The Climax," Mr. Post ignites in every auditor the spark of genius that is a part of the subconscious mind of every man and woman, but lies latent in the souls of the vast multitude—Mansfield had the same gift, so did Irving and Booth and Patrick Henry and Henry Ward Beecher. Shakespeare possessed it—or it possessed him—to a super degree, and when we see Guy Bates Post's tense impersonations, fidelity to natural detail, and hear his resonant eloquence, he makes us know we are within the gripping reality of a "superior" world of acting.

Only the standard prices of seventy five cents to two dollars and fifty cents for Saturday matinees, and from one dollar to three dollars for night performances will be charged. Mail orders will be filled in the order received when accompanied by purchase price plus tax and self-addressed stamped envelope. There will be no laying aside of seats or reservations by phone. The first applicants will have first choice—either by mail or personally.

The mail order reservations are—perhaps—in excess of any ever before placed in this city, and though choice seats may yet be had by mail, for any performance, at any price, I earnestly suggest early reservations.

ANSWERS TO Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—I saw Hope Hampton in "Lawful Larceny,, and I suppose most people would say she was beautiful, but I think she's rather insipid looking myself. How old is she and what color are her hair and eyes. Light, I suppose because she looks like a blonde to me in the pictures. What are some of the pictures she has played in, where was she born, and how tall is she?

I like Conrad Nagel awfully well. He's so clean-looking. Who is his wife? I heard he was married. Is Lew Cody married and if so to whom? Is that his real name? How old is he? What is his address?

Is Arthur Clayton, who use to play in Max Linder's comedies, Ethel's husband? If not, what is her husband's name. Is she related to Arthur?

Is Cyril Chadwick related to Helene, and if so how?

Thanking you kindly for your trouble, I am. A SIMP.

Hope confesses that she is twenty-five, and has auburn hair and blue eyes. She was born in Dallas, Texas, and has grown five feet and three inches tall. Some of her other pictures are "The Gold Diggers," which has just recently been released, "A Modern Salome," "The Bait," "Love's Penalty," and "Star Dust."

Conrad Nagel is married to Ruth Helms. Lew Cody was married to Dorothy Dalton, but they are divorced. He was reported engaged to Irene Dalton sometime ago, but both denied the accusation. His real name is Lewis J. Cote, and he's thirty-five years old. Address him at 1979 Grace Ave., Los Angeles, Calif.

Arthur is not Ethel Clayton's husband. Neither is he related to her, so far as I know. Ethel was married to Joseph Kauffman, a motion picture director, who died several years ago with the flu."

Cyril and Helen are not related.

Dear Movie Editor—Please give the age, address and all the information possible concerning the following, also, how they got in the movies: Wesley Barry, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., John Bowes, Marjorie Daw, Norman Kerry and Robert Agnew.

What is Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s first picture, and who are the other members of the cast? I would love to have a picture of him, if you have any, if not would you please put me on the waiting list for one? BETTY.

Wesley Barry was born in Los Angeles, sixteen years ago, and previous to his screen debut played in vaudeville and stock. He started his real screen career as a protege of Marshal Neilan, after he had supported Mary Pickford in "Daddy Long Legs." Wesley is five feet three inches tall and has red hair and blue eyes. Some of his best pictures are "Dinty," "Go and Get It," "Bob Hampton of Placer," and "Don't Ever Marry," that he made under Mr. Neilan's direction. He starred in the "Penrod" stories by Booth Tarkington, and is now a Warner Brothers star. Address him at 4634 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has light hair and blue eyes. He is fourteen, and the son of Douglas Fairbanks and Beth Sully. He has spent most of his school years in France. As a star in Paramount pictures, he draws $1,000 a week. You may address him in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Calif. "Stephen Steps Out" is the title of his first picture. Other members of the cast are Theodore Roberts, Noah Beery, Harry Myers, and Frank Currier. I will put you on the waiting list for his picture, but I fear the wait be long, because I am not receiving many pictures now, owing to the "shut-down" of the studios.

John Bowers is a native of Indiana, thirty-four years old. He is six feet tall and weighs 180. His hair and eyes are both dark. He had an extensive stage career before turning his attention to the screen. On the stage he played with such players as Donald Robertson, and Beulah Poynter. He started his screen career with Griffith, and has played in such pictures as "Sis Hopkins," "Cumberland Romance," "Roads of Destiny," "Strictly Confidential," and "Woman in Room 13." Address him at the Los Angeles Athletic club.

Mr. Kerry was born in Rochester, New York, and was a student in the Arts and Science branch of the University of Maryland, St. John's college and De La Salle school. He made his bow to the motion picture public in Mary Pickford's "The Little Princess." He has also appeared with Mary in "Amarilly of Clothesline Alley." And with Constance Talmadge in "Up the Road With Sally," and "Good Night Paul." Mr. Kerry is one of the screen's greatest athletes. In college he was a leader on the athletic field. He's two inches over six feet in height and weighs 180. He's an expert swimmer and diver and a crack football player. He was born in 1892 with dark hair and hazel eyes, and lives at 1745 McCadden Place, Los Angeles.

Marjorie Daw was born in Colorado Springs, Colo., twenty-one years ago. When she was only fifteen, her father and mother died, and she was left with a baby brother to take care of. She turned to the screen for employment, and because of her hard work and seriousness soon won recognition as a star in Marshall Neilan productions. She is a real American outdoors girl, and is fond of all outdoor sports. Not long ago, she became Mrs. Eddie Sutherland. She's five feet two inches tall and has light brown hair and hazel eyes. Address her at [illegible] Los Angeles.

Bobby Agnew was born in Dayton, Ky., twenty-four years ago. He received his education at San Antonio, Texas, and started his screen career with Vitagraph in "The Sporting Duchess." He's five feet, eight inches tall, and has dark hair and dark blue eyes. Address him in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Calif.

Dear Movie Editor—Will you please tell the following addresses, age, color of hair and eyes and to whom they are married: Lila Lee, Thomas Meighan, Gloria Swanson, Agnes Ayres, Bebe Daniels, Dorothy Dalton, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Alice Terry, Ruth Roland, Pola Negri, Eileen Percy, Jack Holt, Mae Murray.

When will "Little Old New York" be here?

Will you please send me a picture of Lila Lee, Pola Negri, Alice Terry and Gloria Swanson, or substitutes? Thanking you for the space and trouble. DOROTHY.

Lila Lee is twenty-one. Her hair and eyes are both dark, and she is Mrs. James Kirkwood, now. Address her in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Calif. All of the other stars, except the Talmadge girls, Alice Terry, Ruth Roland and Mae Murray, also have boxes at that studio. Alice and Mae both get their mail at the Metro Studio, Hollywood. Alice is Mrs. Rex Ingram in private life, and Mae is married to Robert Leonard, her director. Alice has auburn hair and gray eyes and is twenty-seven, and Mae is three years older than Alice, and a blonde. Ruth Roland lives at 605 So. Norton Ave., Los Angeles. She has reddish brown hair and violet eyes, and has been married to Lionel Kent. Norma Talmadge was born in 1897 with dark hair and eyes, and is now Mrs. Joseph Schenck, and Constance is divorced from John Pialaglou. She is twenty-three and has brown eyes and golden brown hair. Address both girls in care of Norma Talmadge Productions, Hollywood, Calif.

Thomas Meighan is married to Frances Ring. He was born in 1880 with dark hair and eyes. Gloria Swanson is divorced from Herbert Sanborne. Her hair is black and she has blue eyes. 1898 was the year of her birth. Agnes Ayres is twenty-seven and divorced from Frank Schucker. She has brown hair and hazel eyes. Bebe Daniels' hair and eyes are both dark. Bebe is still single, and twenty-two years old.

Dorothy Dalton used to be Mrs. Lew Cody. She is twenty-nine and has blue eyes and brown hair. Pola Negri is Countess Dombski, or rather was, because she is divorced. She is twenty-five and has dark hair and eyes.

Eileen Percy is a blonde, a year older than Pola, and married to Otto Busch.

Watch the Star ads for the exact date of "Little Old New York" here. I don't have it at present.

I'm out of pictures, too, just now. Did you get the others I mailed you a month or so ago?

Dear Movie Editor—I haven't written you for quite a while, because I've been so busy I haven't had time to see many pictures. Can you please tell me if Bill Hart's horse will be back in pictures again in "Wild Bill Hickok," which I believe is the title of his next picture. I always liked to see them together. Hold old is he—the horse, I mean? Who plays opposite Mr. Hart in the picture? Is it adapted from some book, and if so, what was the name of the book?

Has "The Ten Commandments" been released? When will it be here?

What is Antonio Moreno's next picture and who will play opposite him? I think he is every bit as good as Valentino, only he isn't quite as conceited. I never could see what all the girls could see in Valentino to rave so about. You hardly ever hear of him anymore. Do you know what he is doing now? Is he ever coming back to the screen, do you think?

Who takes the part of Abraham Lincoln in the picture they are making of his life?

Well, I guess this is all I can think of to write today. I always read the answers to fans department every Sunday and think it is about the best thing in the paper. Yours truly, MOVIE LOVER.

Yes, "Pinto" is returning to the screen with his master. He is twelve years old. Kathleen O'Connor and Ethel Grey Terry are the leading feminine characters in "Wild Bill Hickok." The story was written for the screen by Mr. Hart himself.

"The Ten Commandments" is running at the Graumann theatre in Hollywood, now. It will be sometime before you see it in Lincoln.

Antonio and Jacqueline Logan have the leading roles in "Flaming Barriers," George Melford's newest paramount release.

George Billings plays the role of Abraham Lincoln in "The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln."

Dear Movie Editor—Will you please tell me how tall Babe London is, and how much she weighs? What color are her hair and eyes? What is her address?

Where is Lillian Walker now? I haven't seen her for a long time.

Isn't Louise Lovely in the movies anymore? I never see her anymore.

Who was the big tall woman who played with Clyde Cook in "Under Orders"? How tall is she.

Who is the oldest, Mary or Lottie Pickford?

What is Larry Semon's next picture? Who will play opposite him?

What is Harold Lloyd's next picture, and who will play opposite him? Thanking you in advance for answering my questions, I remain EULA.

Miss London admit's she weighs 195. She's not counting the calories either, because it's her weight that "brings home the bacon." She is five feet, seven inches in height and has brokn hair and blue-gray eyes. Address her at 1010 Ingraham St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Lillian Walker is in New York on the vaudeville stage, and Louise Lovely is also touring in vaudeville.

Blanche Payson played "Mrs. Peck" in "Under Orders." She is three inches over six feet tall and weighs 205 pounds.

Mary is the oldest of the Pickfords.

Lucille Carylre plays opposite Larry Semon in "The Girl in the Limousine," his latest picture. Harold Lloyd is making "The Girl Expert" with Jobyna Ralston as his [illegible]

Dear Movie Editor—Please give the age, address and all the information possible concerning the following, also, how they got in the movies: Wesley Barry, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., John Bowes, Marjorie Daw, Norman Kerry and Robert Agnew.

What is Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s first picture, and who are the other members of the cast? I would love to have a picture of him, if you have any, if not would you please put me on the waiting list for one? BETTY.

Wesley Barry was born in Los Angeles, sixteen years ago, and previous to his screen debut played in vaudeville and stock. He started his real screen career as a protege of Marshal Neilan, after he had supported Mary Pickford in "Daddy Long Legs." Wesley is five feet three inches tall and has red hair and blue eyes. Some of his best pictures are "Dinty," "Go and Get It," "Bob Hampton of Placer," and "Don't Ever Marry," that he made under Mr. Neilan's direction. He starred in the "Penrod" stories by Booth Tarkington, and is now a Warner Brothers star. Address him at 4634 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has light hair and blue eyes. He is fourteen, and the son of Douglas Fairbanks and Beth Sully. He has spent most of his school years in France. As a star in Paramount pictures, he draws $1,000 a week. You may address him in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Calif. "Stephen Steps Out" is the title of his first picture. Other members of the cast are Theodore Roberts, Noah Beery, Harry Myers, and Frank Currier. I will put you on the waiting list for his picture, but I fear the wait be long, because I am not receiving many pictures now, owing to the "shut-down" of the studios.

John Bowers is a native of Indiana, thirty-four years old. He is six feet tall and weighs 180. His hair and eyes are both dark. He had an extensive stage career before turning his attention to the screen. On the stage he played with such players as Donald Robertson, and Beulah Poynter. He started his screen career with Griffith, and has played in such pictures as "Sis Hopkins," "Cumberland Romance," "Roads of Destiny," "Strictly Confidential," and "Woman in Room 13." Address him at the Los Angeles Athletic club.

Mr. Kerry was born in Rochester, New York, and was a student in the Arts and Science branch of the University of Maryland, St. John's college and De La Salle school. He made his bow to the motion picture public in Mary Pickford's "The Little Princess." He has also appeared with Mary in "Amarilly of Clothesline Alley." And with Constance Talmadge in "Up the Road With Sally," and "Good Night Paul." Mr. Kerry is one of the screen's greatest athletes. In college he was a leader on the athletic field. He's two inches over six feet in height and weighs 180. He's an expert swimmer and diver and a crack football player. He was born in 1892 with dark hair and hazel eyes, and lives at 1745 McCadden Place, Los Angeles.

Marjorie Daw was born in Colorado Springs, Colo., twenty-one years ago. When she was only fifteen, her father and mother died, and she was left with a baby brother to take care of. She turned to the screen for employment, and because of her hard work and seriousness soon won recognition as a star in Marshall Neilan productions. She is a real American outdoors girl, and is fond of all outdoor sports. Not long ago, she became Mrs. Eddie Sutherland. She's five feet two inches tall and has light brown hair and hazel eyes. Address her at 6609 Frances Court, Los Angeles.

Bobby Agnew was born in Dayton, Ky., twenty-four years ago. He received his education at San Antonio, Texas, and started his screen career with Vitagraph in "The Sporting Duchess." He's five feet, eight inches tall, and has dark hair and dark blue eyes. Address him in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Calif.

Dear Movie Editor—Will you please tell the following addresses, age, color of hair and eyes and to whom they are married: Lila Lee, Thomas Meighan, Gloria Swanson, Agnes Ayres, Bebe Daniels, Dorothy Dalton, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Alice Terry, Ruth Roland, Pola Negri, Eileen Percy, Jack Holt, Mae Murray.

When will "Little Old New York" be here?

Will you please send me a picture of Lila Lee, Pola Negri, Alice Terry and Gloria Swanson, or substitutes? Thanking you for the space and trouble, DOROTHY.

Lila Lee is twenty-one. Her hair and eyes are both dark, and she is Mrs. James Kirkwood, now. Address her in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Calif. All of the other stars, except the Talmadge girls, Alice Terry, Ruth Roland and Mae Murray, also have boxes at that studio. Alice and Mae both get their mail at the Metro Studio, Hollywood. Alice is Mrs. Rex Ingram in private life, and Mae is married to Robert Leonard, her director. Alice has auburn hair and gray eyes and is twenty-seven, and Mae is three years older than Alice, and a blonde. Ruth Roland lives at 605 So. Norton Ave., Los Angeles. She has reddish brown hair and violet eyes, and has been married to Lionel Kent. Norma Talmadge was born in 1897 with dark hair and eyes, and is now Mrs. Joseph Schenck, and Constance is divorced from John Pialaglou. She is twenty-three and has brown eyes and golden brown hair. Address both girls in care of Norma Talmadge Productions, Hollywood, Calif.

Thomas Meighan is married to Frances Ring. He was born in 1880 with dark hair and eyes. Gloria Swanson is divorced from Herbert Sanborne. Her hair is black and she has blue eyes. 1893 was the year of her birth. Agnes Ayres is twenty-seven and divorced from Frank Schucker. She has brown hair and hazel eyes. Bebe Daniels' hair and eyes are both dark. Bebe is still single, and twenty-two years old.

Dorothy Dalton used to be Mrs. Lew Cody. She is twenty-nine and has blue eyes and brown hair. Pola Negri is Countess Dombski, or rather was, because she is divorced. She is twenty-five and has dark hair and eyes.

Eileen Percy is a blonde, a year older than Pola, and married to Otto Busch.

Watch the Star ads for the exact date of "Little Old New York" here. I don't have it at present.

I'm out of pictures, too, just now Did you get the others I mailed you a month or so ago?

Dear Movie Editor—I haven't written you for quite a while, because I've been so busy I haven't had time to see many pictures. Can you please tell me if Bill Hart's horse will be back in pictures again in "Wild Bill Hickok," which I believe is the title of his next picture. I always liked to see them together. Hold old is he—the horse, I mean? Who plays opposite Mr. Hart in the picture? Is it adapted from some book, and if so, what was the name of the book?

Has "The Ten Commandments been realased? When will it be here?

What is Antonio Moreno's next picture and who will play opposite him? I think he is every bit as good as Valentino, only he isn't quite as conceited. I never could see what all the girls could see in Valentino to rave so about. You hardly ever hear of him anymore. Do you know what he is doing now? Is he ever coming back to the screen, do you think?

Who takes the part of Abraham Lincoln in the picture they are making of his life?

Well, I guess this is all I can think of to write today. I always read the answers to fans department every Sunday and think it is about the best thing in the paper. Yours truly, MOVIE LOVER.

Yes, "Pinto" is returning to the screen with his master. He is twelve years old. Kathleen O'Connor and Ethel Grey Terry are the leading feminine characters in "Wild Bill Hickok." The story was written for the screen by Mr. Hart himself.

"The Ten Commandments" is running at the Graumann theatre in Hollywood, now. It will be sometime before you see it in Lincoln.

Antonio and Jacqueline Logan have the leading roles in "Flaming Barriers," George Melford's newest paramount release.

George Billings plays the role of Abraham Lincoln in "The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln."

Dear Movie Editor—Will you please tell me how tall Babe London is, and how much she weighs? What color are her hair and eyes? What is her address?

Where is Lillian Walker now? I haven't seen her for a long time.

Isn't Louise Lovely in the movies anymore? I never see her anymore.

Who was the big tall woman who played with Clyde Cook in "Under Orders"? How tall is she.

Who is the oldest, Mary or Lottie Pickford?

What is Larry Semon's next picture? Who will play opposite him?

What is Harold Lloyd's next picture, and who will play opposite him? Thanking you in advance for answering my questions, I remain EULA.

Miss London admit's she weighs 195. She's not counting the calories either, because it's her weight that "brings home the bacon." She is five feet, seven inches in height and has brokn hair and blue-gray eyes. Address her at 1010 Ingraham St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Lillian Walker is in New York on the vaudeville stage, and Louise Lovely is also touring in vaudeville.

Blanche Payson played "Mrs. Peck" in "Under Orders." She is three inches over six feet tall and weighs 205 pounds.

Mary is the oldest of the Pickfords.

Lucille Carylye plays opposite Larry Semon in "The Girl in the Limousine," his latest picture. Harold Lloyd is making "The Girl Expert" with Jobyna Ralston as his leading, lady.

Screen Siftings

Gets Emperor Role. Earl Schencke has been selected for the role of Emperor Maximilian in Mae Murray's latest production, "Mademoiselle Midnight."

Owen Moore spent the first seventeen years of his life in Ireland. Bessie Love is a native of Texas. Jean Hersholt claims Copenhagen, Denmark, for his birthplace. Joseph Kilgour hails from Canada and George Cooper came from Newark, N. J. Maude George and Morgan Wallace are both native Californians.

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

A Typical American Family With Intelligent Interested Parents And Clean-minded, Trustworthy, home-loving Children Is Heard From Today—We Believe Such Families Are in the Majority After All And This Happy Letter Is Most Welcome In This Holiday Season—"Mary Louise" Is With Us Today With Some Of Her Pertinent Ideas Which Will Arouse the Ire of Some And The Support of Others—Other Questions Discussed.

A Normal Family.

Dear Minerva: Most of your correspondents begin their initial letter to you by telling you that the writer is a constant reader of your Mail, and believes in you, etc. No doubt you have more admirers (appreciative readers) than you realize, for in these busy times when it is nearly impossible to find time to keep up family correspondence with close relatives and friends and to keep from owing everybody letters, it must be a very small proportion that will take the time to tell you about it.

That you do not have more knocks and "crabs" over your advice given is proof of the soundness of your advice.

The writer is an average man, the head (or half-head) of an average family, two girls, flappers who know much more now than their parents did at their ages, clean-minded, trustworthy and with plenty of common sense; two regular he-boys that have to be renovated daily, both mentally and physically but are becoming able to do some of the renovating themselves, which encourages their parents to have confidence in them, and have no fears for their future. We believe the world is good and getting better, that the present generation is an improvement over the previous one, that the trouble is not with the youngsters, but with the parents who are too busy to be acquainted with sons and daughters thoughts. We have father and son's week, but if we had father and son's year in every family, if dad was son's chum and confidant, not many sons would stray.

As to whipping children there is only one reason why it is done—brute force. The parent is the biggest and knows he can get away with it, and discontinues it as soon as the difference in size or strength decreases to the point that the fear for the successful accomplishment of the operation makes it advisable to arbitrate the difficulty.

Does the parent get away with it? Most whippings are unjust, given when the parent is mad or excited and leaves impressions on a plastic mind that will likely some day be pushed down on our necks. I would much rather be remembered by my children (especially as I have their confidence) as being "easy" (and I sometimes hear them talking among themselves and saying, "Ask dad, he's easy") than having unpleasant memories of whippings or having to "walk the chalk" and not daring to be their natural selves while I was around them.

We also believe it its possible to be happily married—for twenty years at least—and after twenty years of experience the sky seems clearer as we travel on together. Each year increases our need for and dependence upon each other. Our chief pleasure is to be able to surprise each other with some act of our own to make life a little easy or cheerful to the other. Scarcely a day passes that we do not find evidence of the thoughtfulness of each other in serving each other.

Three little words accomplish as much in making the tasks of daily life light, and they do as much good for the one that says them as the one spoken to. It has been the best tonic for happiness at least in my ears. These three words are "I love you." I would rather hear them than anything else and I am not stingy with them myself.

They are capable of enlargement. Every day in every way I love you better and better; it's wonderful on tired nerves and mental indisposition.

We take three daily papers. The Star is laid aside for dad. The printing seems to be plainer for failing eyes to see—maybe the news suits him better—probably it's Minerva's Mail—that causes his preference—at any rate he reads The Star. First the news on the front page; the comic page next. He is a little uneasy that Andy is going to be minus a factory and that Mr. Hepwing will "hep, hep away." Then the editor's page, and by the time he gets to Minerva's Mail the family is through reading their papers and are ready for dad to read Minerva aloud. We are not much interested by the knockers—whether on Volstead, religion, flappers, cards, etc. Knocks are generally boosts. We are interested in avoiding the mistakes of others. An observing person profits by his own mistakes, one must be pretty thick to make the same mistake a second time. People in taking their troubles to you show you their mistakes, for generally are troubles the results of mistakes, miscalculation, poor judgment etc. So by dissecting these mistakes, adding your advice is interesting and we believe instructive to the younger minds in helping them to later avoid the pitfalls that others have fallen into.

Minerva I apologize to you for taking up so much of your time. I do not know why I started this letter unless it was a circular which I received in today's Mail. It was written by the president of a large manufacturing concern. This man studied for the ministry, took up business instead, but advertises the first name by such letters and is making good I think.

This letter made me think of our new marriage law in Nebraska, and its discussions in your Mail. I am enclosing it. Some business letter, isn't it? After all I may not need to apologize for I may not send you the letter anyway. No doubt your Mail would be much heavier if such impulses to tear it up did not occur. I am often interested by some of your correspondents closing by saying: "I hope to see my letter in print soon." Why do they? Their name is not signed so no personal pride could be given and if it was information wanted would only be interested in your reply. But with me it is different. I don't care to see it in your Mail unless it should give you some thought worth while.

My object in starting it was to give up the feeling of an average family and the appreciation of "value received" that we enjoy in the service which you give to those who are needing kindly and intelligent advice. Lincoln and your entire territory surely profits by your work. You deserve appreciation from your your readers and happiness for yourself.

O. R. DINARY.

A. I am most pleased to have a letter which is representative of what we like to consider a normal, American family, a family in which the children obey and respect their parents and the parents take the time and pains to train and enjoy the children.

I believe such families are still in the majority in our country, general fears to the contrary.

Your recipe for the maintenance of love and happiness in a family is sane and sound, just a free use of the words and principles implied in these words "I love you." In fact I like your entire letter. Come again, please.

"Flivvers" Demoralizing.

Dear Minerva: Upon going through an accumulation of papers that Mother laid aside for me during a late and rather long vacation I find a letter from "Ardent" written upon such themes as dancing, sex appeal, personal liberty, brothers' keepers and kindred subjects that have long been dear to her heart. I note that of late she has been omitting the word "Suffragette" from her pseudonym although she continues to suffer as much as ever and we find her fully as ardent as upon former occasions and, as usual, more ardent than accurate in her deductions as well as in the same old combative frame of mind and quite twisted up in her own logic.

She condemns the dance because some people dance improperly or may have met undesirable people at a dance. If I were to tell her that I did not dance she would tell me that I did not know anything about dancing and, therefore, was incapable of coming to any intelligent conclusion upon the subject and if I was to inform her that I like to dance occasionally then she would immediately bdand me as "dance mad"; such is the quality of her logic: one extreme or the other, so I have elected not to satisfy her curiosity upon the matter—not just now anyway.

In the few years that they have been in existence flivvers have demoralized more girls and boys than all the dance halls in creation and yet the tin Lizzie is a most useful as well as a most ingenious device and they have done much good along with some harm. Why can we not learn to accept the good in all things as its face value and recognize it as such and condemn only the bad? I would not want to go on record as condemning all religious people simply because there are plenty of hypocrites in every denomination.

"Ardent" does not like it because she overhead a middle age woman say that people who condemned dancing would be liable to object to moving pictures, riding upon the merry-go-round and all other forms of recreation. She even goes so far as to call the lady a "liar" but many events have shown that the lady in question is more truthful than the ardent one is willing to admit. Only recently the pastors of one sect, in convention in this city, voted to retain an obsolete clause in their church discipline prohibiting their members from dancing, playing cards, attending theatres and practically all other forms of recreation, a law that not one in ten of their members ever think of obeying and which even many of the ministers themselves do not respect. Upon several occasions I have seen ministers of this denomination at Lincoln theaters heartily laughing and apparently enjoying themselves. I do not censure them for being like other human beings but do think they are acting both wrong and unwise in voting to retain a dead letter and one which most of them know is not only unnecessary and undesirable but harmful as well.

As to the brother's keeper idea I know that many arrogant, inquisitive individuals merely use it as an excuse to snoop and pry into other people's affairs upon the pretext of saving them from some fictitious danger. When an opportunity presents itself for them to do a little constructive work along this line they are not on the job. I have known well-to-do business and professional men to give a newsboy a nickle for a paper and then hang around until the youngster with hands blue with the cold fumbled around in his little pockets and handed them back the three cents in change upon the pretext that they were teaching said youngster a lesson in frugality and thrift and I have known pious, sanctimonious old sisters who never missed going to meeting unless they were sick in bed who gossiped and did all sorts of hateful things during the week. One such once lived near me. Her husband left her some money and she donated quite liberally to this and to that while her own mother and sister, from whom she was estranged, worked in a laundry for barely enough to keep body and soul together. She also threw ashes all over her sidewalk on Sunday so that children could not skate past her house. She said that if parents did not care enough about their own children to keep them from going straight to perdition that she did and that it was her "bounding duty" to put a stop to their wicked frolicking, all of which kept the youngsters from enjoying themselves just about as much as the Volstead law keeps people from getting a drink when they really want one. The children skated upon other people's walks and frequently skated right through the ashes scattering them in every direction and in retaliation Mrs. Grundy chopped the heads off of their kittens with a hatchet, poisoned their pet dogs and indulged in sundry other equally kind and benevolent acts.

I once had for a neighbor a very pious gentleman; one of these modern saints who was even too good to smoke, but he was not to good to be lazy, work his poor wife nearly to death and raise a large family for relatives and neighbors to donate to. One day he drove the old family horse out into a lot and telephoned the soap factory to come and kill it and sold its body for a pittance to be made into soap and then he went bragging around how he got rid of a horse that was too old to work and was good for nothing. Poor creature—what a magnificent reward for a lifetime of faithful service, often insufficient food and unkind treatment. Another case: A pious old deacon living near my sister in the western part of the state became angry at his good horse so he tied it to a post and beat it to death. The fact that he was a man advanced in years and had an invalid wife was all that kept his indignant neighbors from giving him the coat of tar and feathers he so richly deserved. I could cite other instances where those who are constantly harping about being their brothers keepers have failed to live up to what they preach when they had an opportunity to help someone or something that needed help badly.

"Ardent" ridicules the idea of personal liberty and says there is no such thing. Imagine Betsy Ross, Molly Pitcher, or Martha Washington giving voice to such a heresy as that and just compare those women of sterling worth with many of the fanatical, narrow, cattish females of the present age greedy for political preferment and power. If George Washington, Nathan Hale, Alexander Hamilton, Abraham Lincoln and other patriots to say nothing of the thousands of boys who sailed for France a few years ago had not thought more of their personal liberty than they thought of their personal safety in all probability, we would have had precious little to be thankful for this recent Thanksgiving Day. "Ardent" will never admit it and she probably does not realize it but it is true that she is the most rabid exponent of personal liberty in your columns. Not satisfied with her own liberties she wants to take liberties with other people's liberties; she wants to abridge and destroy them. We usually reap just what we sow. If she insists upon destroying other people's happiness she may awake some day only to find that her own happiness has taken wings. Sooner or later we usually get paid back in our own coin; thus works the law of justice.

I notice that some of your contributors have been going in strong for poetry of late so if I append a little poem here unto I ought to be right in style. It is by Elias Lieberman and is from the July 12 number of "Life." and is entitled "The Egotist." Its author must have had some of your contributors in mind when he penned it and as it is so representative of the spirit of the times and so appropriate to the subject in hand I take pleasure in offering it:

"What I don't know," Sir Crabtree said,
"Is seldom worth the knowing;
The crop my neighbor harvested
Was hardly worth the sowing.

"The pleasures that I cannot bear
Should henceforth be abolished;
The treasures that I cannot share
Should straightway be demolished.
"For me there's neither peace nor mirth
In time of rest or labor,
Unless I supervise the earth
And regulate my neighbor."

—Marie Louise.

VISITS SISTER

Mrs. E. E. Jones of Nashville, Tenn, is visiting over the holidays with her sister, Mrs. D. D. Rees of College View.

Cannot Be Impatient.

Dear Minerva: I have been going with a young man five years my senior but over a foot shorter but very neat and attractive. Now I think a whole lot of this little man, and am expecting him to declare his affections now most any time. I know he is capable of making a good home for us for he has a nice position.

He is free with his money and always tries to show me a good time and while I know lots of other women try to tempt him I just wonder sometimes if he really loves me or could he be just kidding me along? I've read lots of love books and stories but none seem to compare with our case. Daddy and all of us like him and mamma thinks he is the best looking man she ever saw.

We are all hoping that everything will come out all right and I sincerely hope you will be able to give me some idea whether or not he loves. Sincerely. L. B.

A. How can I know whether he loves you or not, if you cannot tell? Your question in the last sentence surprised me, for I had myself all primed to answer, as regards his shortness of stature and to advise you to recognize that he is a prince of a man even if he does come in a small package. But apparently your worry after all is not because of his size but because he has not proposed to you as yet. To which I can but preach the doctrine of patience. Women have always had need of practicing patience in problems of love. And even in this modern age, it is detrimental for a woman to be impatient in the matter of love.

A Love Test.

Dear Minerva: I have been reading your Mail for several months and I want to say that I think the ideas of "Jack" to try out the girl he is to marry, is a very good one. That is, if he doesn't draw the line too close on the way he would want her to act after marriage, as it would be cold-blooded to throw her down even after a trial if she didn't act the way he would have her, and I suggest that he would have a little talk with her and explain to her what her actual environment will be after she becomes his wife and what it means to him. And I will wager all that if she loves him truly she can do that much for him. And after living and doing things as she thinks will please him she may be accustomed to it, and will in time be able to go along with it all and find herself liking it, as she may acquire very dear friends in so doing this and that will make her forget she had to try to like these people she has to come in contact with.

I believe every couple should have some love test before marriage for a lot of marriages are only infatuation or other things. And the real plan I endorse for the average couple is absence from one another, say two or three months or less as the case may be, for that is as good a test as could be tried as each has a chance to look around them and a chance to find out if each was true to the other and let time be the judge.

I myself feel that it is a good plan, for I was engaged to a girl in the north part of the state. We had no serious disagreements, but there were a few things about her that, although I overlooked in a way, when we were together after an absence of several months I found I did not love her and that her ways were not mine and that she was not absolutely true to me. So our engagement was broken and now after eight months we both feel it was for the best. I might add that I never went with any girl during the trial time, in fact not for over seven months, so another girl did not have any bearing on my conclusion that we were not soul mates.

Accept this as my personal ideas, and if someone can be benefitted by reading this kindly publish it. C.

"Terribly" Human.

Dear Minerva: I have had the care of my dear mother for a good many years and my two sisters and one brother have contributed nothing toward her support. Sometimes I have felt sorry for myself and thought my burden somewhat large, but for the most part I have been happy to do everything I could for mother.

And now this Christmas the three have gotten together and bought mother a new home and partly furnished it. Now Minerva of course this is wonderful of them. But do you know ever since they told me about it I have had a queer feeling of resentment. People have been saying for a number of years what an unselfish, sacrificial girl I am, so different from my sisters and brothers and I believe I really would have preferred for them to go on being selfish so I could play the martyr. Isn't that just terrible,

And now that I have taken a good look at myself, something else worries me. I have been going with a young man for a number of years and have been telling him that I could not marry him or anyone else while I had mother to care for. And now I realize I do not love this man and would not care to marry him under any circumstances and have just been using mother for an excuse. I could marry all right if I really loved a man. This man has been very faithful though and I don't know what to do. If I tell him the truth, he will be grieved and hurt. If I do not tell him the truth, he will keep on coming regularly and I will have no opportunities to go with other men.

You see there is another man that I admire very much and that I think would ask to come and see me if he thought the coast was clear.

What shall I do?—Agnes.

A. Your emotions are just terribly human. We all of us enjoy a feeling of superiority and garner it where we may. We usually don't know we have such a ruling passion until some crisis brings it out. It is called, technically, "maximating the age," and there are any number of different ways in which we do this all the time.

But since you stifled your undesirable and unworthy impulse and your family is none the wiser, you did well.

As for the young man that you have been unconsciously deceiving, I believe the only way is for you to tell him you cannot marry him because you do not have the right sort of feeling for him for that. It will hurt him, no doubt, but there seems to be no way to avoid hurting him, and it is better to be clean-cut and direct about it.

Only one more shopping day until Xmas, so let Farquhar's offer you a few "last minute" suggestions. They have some very good-looking gloves, ties, scarfs imported from Scotland; Shirts, both English broadcloth and silk; hose, lounging robes—flannel and brocade; handkerchiefs with the hand embroidered monogram and last but not least in importance and in beauty, they are offering some very attractive belts.

Farquhar's know the business man's tastes and why not get Dad, Husband, Sweetheart and Brother his most desired gift? Ask Farquhar's.

* * *

Into a store comes a woman to buy handkerchiefs. She buys two boxes—one all pure linen, and the other box for a person to whom she feels it almost compulsory to present a gift. The latter box generally costs about half the first. Her statement is usually, "Oh, these are good enough for her. I can put my 'all pure linen' label on her box." Anything goes at Christmas time.

* * *

Bridge bags with hearts, clubs, diamonds and spades, worked in colors are featured.

* * *

Department stores and specialty shops have been devoting much space in their advertising announcements to the display of handbags. Naturally this is one of the most logical Christmas gifts, and all types are stressed from the inexpensive to the very high priced imported types.

* * *

* * *

The vogue of the shawl dress is just beginning, it would seem as the number of ways in which it is being interpreted grows apace. Instead of confining itself to the more formal and semi-formal mode as was indicated at its introduction, any number of models suited for more practical use are being shown. These of course, are fashioned in darker shades with gray floral motif but are faihtful in their depiction of the Spanish coloring and design.

* * *

Brushed wool sweaters are still in vogue, but the regulation model is giving way to the more artistic variety with stripes and plaids and side closings instead of the row of buttons at front and slip-ons are reviving in popularity.

* * *

One of the smart dance clubs last week showed more than the usual number of bouffant frocks or period styles. These gowns, usually developed in the softer shades and fabrics, are worn with a sense of their costume value, and the skirts are not shortened.

* * *

Without doubt the white gown is the most successful of the season, and while many were noticed devoid of color, there were just as many that had the touch of silver or the pastel tones of flowers, or the new effects of elaborte hand painting.

Endless variety in headbands and headresses made a fitting complement to the novel types of dress and it was interesting to note that thees did not take the trend of the band that is just a wrapping of metal cloth or tulle, but all were of the most elaborate type. Rhinestone studded coronets and tiaras were seen but in the low and more youthful types and it was noticed that several girls with bobbed hair wore the new low bob comb, which is supposed to be worn around the back of the head across the front instead thus pushing the hair up and gaining the effect of a bandeau.

Every season, dresses from Paris introduce just one more way of doing the same thing differently, it would seem, and in this manner the appearance of dresses essentially the same in silhouette is always changing.

Except in the few instances when rich fabrics have been simulated, beading is done in a single or two toned effect, and crystal beads of the finest sort are much in evidence.

* * *

The ombre idea is handled in a lovely way in dresses of the formal order. Crepe de Chine that blends almost imperceptibly from an aqua green to a deep emerald is used for a straightline gown embroidered in fine crystals. A gown of embroidered lace proves one of the richest models as far as coloring is concerned, for the beading carried out on its elaborate pattern combines all of the vivid Persian colors in truly Oriental effect. The lace itself is a cocoa brown and is worn over a perfectly matched slip.

* * *

Fringe grows in favor as the season advances and many of the evening dresses are fringe and crystal trimmed, including the shawl dresses which add much to the variety of the wardrobe being draped over several drops, and in different lines at every wearing.

Sports frocks often feature bodices in jumper mode having a front or back opening bordered with buttons and buttonholes. This may be of a plain colored material while the skirt employs a figured fabric, which is matched by the topcoat entirely lined with fur, and piped with leather.

One of the favorite daytime frocks of a fine navy blue cloth, one of the latest models for sping, combines a hiplength cape with the simple frock which is trimmed with black braid, the cape being linned with alpaca.

Advices from Paris tha tsmart women are wearing muffs has prompted smart shops to show them in the window with fur coats in order to test the interest of the American woman in this item.

According to the report, in all fashionable places in Paris muffs are appearing conspicuously among the smart set, members of which usually carry one to match the contrasting fur of the coat.

A costume suit, in strictly tailored handling, is done in tan covert, composed of complete frock and three quarter length cape. The cape is cut on circular lines, although the upper section is cut with a yoke that preserves the outline of the figure. For relief, insets and pipings in rigid straightline designs, of brown cloth, are introduced on both frock and cape.

Three-piece costumes emphasize the loose hanging version of the box jacket, suggesting in general the Chinese coolie jacket. One model of black and green crepe, uses a three-quarter length jacket, the entire jacket of green crepe being embroidered with black, with collar of black monkey.

A number of silk coats appear in the coats designed for formal wear, with satin in gray and tan as well as the inevitable black. These, for the most part, adopt the straight outline and endorse the border feature, worked in a variety of fabric manipulations.

Practically all day time stockings in New York are still noisette in in shade. The one exception occurs when grey is adopted to complete that gray and black mode which has become a step-sister to the favored black and white mode. Where one's furs and shoes are grey, grey stockings are in order. This does not mean that grey and the fawn-beige-brown gamut may never be combined, but merely that it must be done with discretion. That all of us have not been blessed with slender ankles is a sad, but patent., fact. But to try to mitigate the impression by combining black stockings with black shoes is no longer wise, since such stockings are of themselves conspicuous by reason of the rarity of their occurrence. All one can say to the sufferer is to avoid the lighter shades of grey and biege. Contrast one must have, but it need not be too violent.

Christmas Greetings

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

A Typical American Family With Intelligent Interested Parents And Clean-minded, Trustworthy, home-loving Children Is Heard From Today—We Believe Such Families Are n the Majority After All And This Happy Letter Is Most Welcome In This Holiday Season—"Mary Louise" Is With Us Today With Some Of Her Pertinent Ideas Which Will Arouse the Ire of Some And The Support of Others—Other Questions Discussed.

A Normal Family.

Dear Minerva: Most of your correspondents begin their initial letter to you by telling you that the writer is a constant reader of your Mail, and believes in you, etc. No doubt you have more admirers (appreciative readers) than you realize, for in these busy times when it is nearly impossible to find time to keep up family correspondence with close relatives and friends and to keep from owing everybody letters, it must be a very small proportion that will take the time to tell you about it.

That you do not have more knocks and "crabs" over your advice given is proof of the soundness of your advice.

The writer is an average man, the head (or half-head) of an average family, two girls, flappers who know much more now than their parents did at their ages, clean-minded, trustworthy and with plenty of common sense; two regular he-boys that have to be renovated daily, both mentally and physically but are becoming able to do some of the renovating themselves, which encourages their parents to have confidence in them, and have no fears for their future. We believe the world is good and getting better, that the present generation is an improvement over the previous one, that the trouble is not with the youngsters, but with the parents who are too busy to be acquainted with sons and daughters thoughts. We have father and son's week, but if we had father and son's year in every family, if dad was son's chum and confidant, not many sons would stray.

As to whipping children there is only one reason why it is done—brute force. The parent is the biggest and knows he can get away with it, and discontinues it as soon as the difference in size or strength decreases to the point that the fear for the successful accomplishment of the operation makes it advisable to arbitrate the difficulty.

Does the parent get away with it? Most whippings are unjust, given when the parent is mad or excited and leaves impressions on a plastic mind that will likely some day be pushed down on our necks. I would much rather be remembered by my children (especially as I have their confidence) as being "easy" (and I sometimes hear them talking among themselves and saying, "Ask dad, he's easy') than having unpleasant memories of whippings or having to "walk the chalk" and not daring to be their natural selves while I was around them.

We also believe it its possible to be happily married—for twenty years at least—and after twenty years of experience the sky seems clearer as we travel on together. Each year increases our need for and dependence upon each other. Our chief pleasure is to be able to surprise each other with some act of our own to make life a little easy or cheerful to the other. Scarcely a day passes that we do not find evidence of the thoughtfulness of each other in serving each other.

Three little words accomplish as much in making the tasks of daily life light, and they do as much good for the one that says them as the one spoken to. It has been the best tonic for happiness at least in my ears. These three words are "I love you.' I would rather hear them than anything else and I am not stingy with them myself.

They are capable of enlargement. Every day in every way I love you better and better; it's wonderful on tired nerves and mental indisposition.

We take three daily papers. The Star is laid aside for dad. The printing seems to be plainer for failing eyes to see—maybe the news suits him better—probably it's Minerva's Mail—that causes his preference—at any rate he reads The Star. First the news on the front page; the comic page next. He is a little uneasy that Andy is going to be minus a factory and that Mr. Hepwing will "hep, hep away." Then the editor's page, and by the time he gets to Minerva's Mail the family is through reading their papers and are ready for dad to read Minerva aloud. We are not much interested by the knockers—whether on Volstead, religion, flappers, cards, etc. Knocks are generally boosts. We are interested in avoiding the mistakes of others. An unchanging person profits by his own mistakes, but one must be pretty thick to make the same mistake a second time. People in taking their troubles to you to show you their mistakes, generally are the results of poor judgment, miscalculation, poor judgments, etc. By dissecting these mistakes, adding your advice is interesting and we believe instructive in helping the younger minds to avoid the pitfalls that others have fallen into.

Minerva I apologize to you for taking so much of your time. I do not know why I started this letter unless it was a circular which I received in today's Mail. It was a circular received by the president of a large manufacturing concern. This man studied for the ministry, took up business instead, but advertises the first name by such letters and is making good I think.

This letter made me think of our new marriage law in Nebraska, and its discussions in your Mail. I am enclosing it. Some business letter, isn't it? After all I may not need to apologize for I may not send you the letter anyway. No doubt your Mail would be much heavier if such impulses to tear it up did not occur. I am often interested by some of your correspondents closing by saying: "I hope to see my letter in print soon." Why do they? Their name is not signed so no personal pride could be given and if it was information wanted would only be interested in your reply. But with me it is different. I don't care to see it in your Mail unless it should give you some thought worth while.

My object in starting it was to give up the feeling of an average family and the appreciation of "value received" that we enjoy in the service which you give to those who are needing kindly and intelligent advice. Lincoln and your entire territory surely profits by your work. You deserve appreciation from your your readers and happiness for yourself.

O. R. DINARY.

A. I am most pleased to have a letter which is representative of what we like to consider a normal, American family, a family in which the children obey and respect their parents and the parents take the time and pains to train and enjoy the children.

I believe such families are still in the majority in our country, general fears to the contrary.

Your recipe for the maintenance of love and happiness in a family is sane and sound, just a free use of the words and principles implied in these words "I love you." In fact I like your entire letter. Come again, please.

"Flivvers" Demoralizing.

Dear Minerva: Upon going through an accumulation of papers that Mother laid aside for me during a late and rather long vacation I find a letter from "Ardent" written upon such themes as dancing, sex appeal, personal liberty, brothers' keepers and kindred subjects that have long been dear to her heart. I note that of late she has been omitting the word "Suffragette" from her pseudonym although she continues to suffer as much as ever and we find her fully as ardent as upon former occasions and, as usual, more ardent than accurate in her deductions as well as in the same old combative frame of mind and quite twisted up in her own logic.

She condemns the dance because some people dance improperly or may have met undesirable people at a dance. If I were to tell her that I did not dance she would tell me that I did not know anything about dancing and, therefore, was incapable of coming to any intelligent conclusion upon the subject and if I was to inform her that I like to dance occasionally then she would immediately bdand me as "dance mad"; such is the quality of her logic; one extreme or the other, so I have elected not to satisfy her curiosity upon the matter—not just now anyway.

In the few years that they have been in existence flivvers have demoralized more girls and boys than all the dance halls in creation and yet the tin Lizzie is a most useful device as well as a most ingenious device and they have done much good along with some harm. Why can we not learn to accept the good in all things as its face value and recognize i as such and condemn only the bad? I would not want to go on record as condemning all religious people simply because there are plenty of hypocrites in every denomination.

"Ardent" does not like it because she overhead a middle age woman say that people who condemned dancing would be liable to object to moving pictures, riding upon the merry-go-round and all other forms of recreation. She even goes so far as to call the lady a "liar" but many events have shown that the lady in question is more truthful than the ardent one is willing to admit. Only recently the pastors of one sect, in convention in this city, voted to retain an obsolete clause in their church discipline prohibiting their members from dancing, playing cards, attending theatres and practically all other forms of recreation, a law that not one in ten of their members ever think of obeying and which even many of the ministers themselves do not respect. Upon several occasions I have seen ministers of this denomination at Lincoln theaters heartily laughing and apparently enjoying themselves. I do not censure them for being like other human beings but do think they are both wrong and unwise in voting to retain a dead letter and one which they full well know is both unnecessary and harmful as well.

As to the brother's keeper idea I know that many arrogant, inquisitive individuals make it an excuse to snoop and pry into other people's affairs upon the pretext of saving them from some fictitious danger. When an opportunity presents itself for them to do a little constructive work along this line they are not on the job. I have known well-to-do business and professional men to give a newsboy a nickle for a paper and then wait around until the youngster with hands blue with the cold fumbled around in his little pockets and handed them back the three cents in change upon the pretext that they were teaching said youngster a lesson in frugality and thrift and I have known pious, sanctimonious old sisters who never missed going to meeting unless they were sick in bed who gossiped and did all sorts of hateful things during the week. One such once lived near me. Her husband left her some money and she donated quite liberally to this and to that while her own mother and sister, from whom she was estranged, worked in a laundry for barely enough to keep body and soul together. She also threw ashes all over her sidewalk on Sunday so that children could not skate past her house. She said that if parents did not care enough about their own children to keep them from going straight to perdition that she did and that it was her "bounding duty" to put a stop to their wicked frolicking, all of which kept the youngsters from enjoying themselves just about as much as the Volstead law keeps people from getting a drink when they really want one. The children skated upon other people's walks and frequently skated right through the ashes scattering them in every direction and in retaliation Mrs. Grundy chopped the heads off of their kittens with a hatchet, poisoned their pet dogs and indulged in sundry other equally kind and benevolent acts.

I once had for a neighbor a very pious gentleman; one of these modern saints who was even too good to smoke, but he was not to good to be lazy, work his poor wife nearly to death and raise a large family for relatives and neighbors to donate to. One day he drove the old family horse out into a lot and telephoned the soap factory to come and kill it and sold its body for a pittance to be made into soap and then he went bragging around how he got rid of a horse that was too old to work and was good for nothing. Poor creature—what a magnificent reward for a lifetime of faithful service, often insufficient food and unkind treatment. Another case: A pious old deacon living near my sister in the western part of the state became angry at his good horse so he tied it to a post and beat it to death. The fact that he was a man advanced in years and had an invalid wife was all that kept his indignant neighbors from giving him the coat of tar and feathers he so richly deserved. I could cite other instances where those who are constantly harping about being their brothers keepers have failed to live up to what they preach when they had an opportunity to help someone or something that needed help badly.

"Ardent" ridicules the idea of personal liberty and says there is no such thing. Imagine Betsy Ross, Molly Pitcher, or Martha Washington giving voice to such a heresy as that and just compare those women of sterling worth with many of the fanatical, narrow, cattish females of the present age greedy for political preferment and power. If George Washington, Nathan Hale, Alexander Hamilton, Abraham Lincoln and other patriots to say nothing of the thousands of boys who sailed for France a few years ago had not thought more of their personal liberty than they thought of their personal safety in all probability, we would have had precious little to be thankful for this recent Thanksgiving Day. "Ardent" will never admit it and she probably does not realize it but it is true that she is the most rabid exponent of personal liberty in your columns. Not satisfied with her own liberties she wants to take liberties with other people's liberties; she wants to abridge and destroy them. We usually reap just what we sow. If she insists upon destroying other people's happiness she may awake some day only to find that her own happiness has taken wings. Sooner or later we usually get paid back in our own coin; thus works the law of justice.

I notice that some of your contributors have been going in strong for poetry of late so if I append a little poem here unto I ought to be right in style. It is by Elias Lieberman and is from the July 12 number of "Life." and is entitled "The Egotist." Its author must have had some of your contributors in mind when he penned it and as it is so representative of the spirit of the times and so appropriate to the subject in hand I take pleasure in offering it:

"What I don't know," Sir Crabtree said,
"Is seldom worth the knowing;
The crop my neighbor harvested
Was hardly worth the sowing.

"The pleasures that I cannot bear
Should henceforth be abolished;
The treasures that I cannot share
Should straightway be demolished.
"For me there's neither peace nor mirth
In time of rest or labor,
Unless I supervise the earth
And regulate my neighbor."

—Marie Louise.

Cannot Be Impatient.

Dear Minerva: I have been going with a young man five years my senior but over a foot shorter but very neat and attractive. Now I think a whole lot of this little man, and am expecting him to declare his affections now most any time. I know he is capable of making a good home for us for he has a nice position.

He is free with his money and always tries to show me a good time and while I know lots of other women try to tempt him I just wonder sometimes if he really loves me or could he be just kidding me along? I've read lots of love books and stories but none seem to compare with our case. Daddy and all of us like him and mamma thinks he is the best looking man she ever saw.

We are all hoping that everything will come out all right and I sincerely hope you will be able to give me some idea whether or not he loves.

Sincerely. L. B.

A. How can I know whether he loves you or not, if you cannot tell? Your question in the last sentence surprised me, for I had myself all primed to answer as regards his shortness of stature and to advise you to recognize that he is a prince of a man even if he does come in a small package. But apparently your worry after all is not because of his size but because he has not proposed to you as yet. To which I can but preach the doctrine of patience. Women have always had need of practicing patience in problems of love. And even in this modern age, it is detrimental for a woman to be impatient in the matter of love.

A Love Test.

Dear Minerva: I have been reading your Mail for several months and I want to say that I think the ideas of "Jack" to try out the girl he is to marry, is a very good one. That is, if he doesn't draw the line too close on the way he would want her to act after marriage, as it would be cold-blooded to throw her down even after a trial if she didn't act the way he would have her, and I suggest that he would have a little talk with her and explain to her what her actual environment will be after she becomes his wife and what it means to him. And I will wager all that if she loves him truly she can do that much for him. And after living and doing things as she thinks will please him she may be accustomed to it, and will in time be able to go along with it all and find herself liking it, as she may acquire very dear friends in so doing this and that will make her forget she had to try to like these people she has to come i contact with.

I believe every couple should have some love test before marriage for a lot of marriages are only infatuation or other things. And the real plan I endorse for the average couple is absence from one another, say two or three months or less as the case may be, for that is as good a test as could be tried as each has a chance to look around them and a chance to find out if each was true to the other and let time be the judge.

I myself feel that it is a good plan, for I was engaged to a girl in the north part of the state. We had no serious disagreements, but there were a few things about her that, although I overlooked in a way, when we were together after an absence of several monthes I found I did not love her and that her ways were not mine and that she was not absolutely true to me. So our engagement was broken and now after eight months we both feel it was for the best. I might add that I never went with any girl during the trial time, in fact not for over seven months, so another girl did not have any bearing on my conclusion that we were not soul mates.

Accept this as my personal ideas, and if someone can be benefitted by reading this kindly publish it. C.

"Terribly" Human.

Dear Minerva: I have had the care of my dear mother for a good many years and my two sisters and one brother have contributed nothing toward her support. Sometimes I have felt sorry for myself and thought my burden somewhat large, but for the most part I have been happy to do everything I could for mother.

And now this Christmas the three have gotten together and bought mother a new home and partly furnished it. Now Minerva of course this is wonderful of them. But do you know ever since they told me about it I have had a queer feeling of resentment. People have been saying for a number of years what an unselfish, sacrificial girl I am, so different from my sisters and brothers and I believe I really would have preferred for them to go on being selfish so I could play the martyr. Isn't that just terrible,

And now that I have taken a good look at myself, something else worries me. I have been going with a young man for a number of years and have been telling him that I could not marry him or anyone else while I had mother to care for. And now I realize I do not love this man and would not care to marry him under any circumstances and have just been using mother for an excuse. I could marry all right if I really loved a man. This man has been very faithful though and I don't know what to do. If I tell him the truth, he will be grieved and hurt. If I do not tell him the truth, he will keep on coming regularly and I will have no opportunities to go with other men.

You see there is another man that I admire very much and that I think would ask to come and see me if he thought the coast was clear.

What shall I do?—Agnes.

A. Your emotions are just terribly human. We all of us enjoy a feeling of superiority and garner it where we may. We usually don't know we have such a ruling passion until some crisis brings it out. It is called, technically, "maximating the age," and there are any number of different ways in which we do this all the time.

But since you stifled your undesirable and unworthy impulse and your family is none the wiser, you did well.

As for the young man that you have been unconsciously deceiving, I believe the only way is for you to tell him you cannot marry him because you do not have the right sort of feeling for him for that. It will hurt him, no doubt, but there seems to be no way to avoid hurting him, and it is better to be clean-cut and direct about it.

Holeproof, Allen A, and Society Maid brands of hosiery are to be found at SPEIER AND SIMON'S AT 10th and O streets. Enough said, because they are the leading brands, without any doubt, due to their perfect dye and lasting quality. Society Maid is particulorly famous for being dyed to match the different new shades of leather, now so popular in the sport and dress world. In this brand they make a size for stout women with the extra large ribbed top. Also featured with the clocks.

Only one more shopping day until Xmas, so let Farquhar's offer you a few "last minute" suggestions. They have some very good-looking gloves, ties, scarfs imported from Scotland; Shirts, both English broadcloth and silk; hose, lounging robes—flannel and brocade; handkerchiefs with the hand embroidered monogram and last but not least n importance and in beauty, they are offering some very attractive belts.

Farquhar's know the business man's tastes and why not get Dad, Husband, Sweetheart and Brother his most desired gift? Ask Farquhar's.

Into a store comes a woman to buy handkerchiefs. She buys two boxes—one all pure linen, and the other box for a person to whom she feels it almost compulsory to present a gift. The latter box generally costs about half the first. Her statement is usually, "Oh, these are good enough for her. I can put my 'all pure linen' label on her box." Anythng goes at Christmas time.

Bridge bags with hearts, clubs, diamonds and spades, worked in colors are featured.

Department stores and specialty shops have been devoting much space in their advertising announcements to the display of handbags. Naturally this is one of the most logical Christmas gifts, and all types are stressed from the inexpensive to the very high priced imported types.

Suede or leather belts are used, adding a dash of the tailored note which is so effective where the lines are simple. These match the dominant color of the knitted frock.

The vogue of the shawl dress is just beginning, it would seem as the number of ways in which it is being interpreted grows apace. Instead of confining itself to the more formal and semi-formal mode as was indicated at its introduction, any number of models suited for more practical use are being shown. These of course, are fashioned in darker shades with gray floral motif but are faihtful in their depiction of the Spanish coloring and design.

Brushed wool sweaters are still in vogue, but the regulation model is giving way to the more artistic variety with stripes and plaids and side closings instead of the row of buttons at front and slip-ons are reviving in popularity.

One of the smart dance clubs last week showed more than the usual number of bouffant frocks or period styles. These gowns, usually developed in the softer shades and fabrics, are worn with a sense of their costume value, and the skirts are not shortened.

Without doubt the white gown is the most successful of the season, and while many were noticed devoid of color, there were just as many that had the touch of silver or the pastel tones of flowers, or the new effects of elaborte hand painting.

Endless variety in headbands and headdresses made a fitting complement to the novel types of dress and in several cases it was interesting to note that these did not take the trend of the band that is just a wrapping of metal cloth or tulle, but were of the most elaborate workmanship. Rhinestone studded coronets and tiaras were seen but in the low and more youthful types of coiffure, it was noticed that several girls with bobbed hair wore the new low bob comb, which is supposed to be worn around the front instead of the back, thus pushing the hair up and gaining the effect of a bandeau.

The FIRST TRUST COMPANY has organized a Xmas Savings Club and anyone may belong, even if he only possesses 2c. Only the first payment is due when you join. If you start with 2c, then the second week you will double the amount and pay 4c and each successive week double the previous payment at the end of the ffty weeks you will receive $25.50 plus 4 per cent interest. If for any reason you are unable to keep up your payments you will none the less receive back, at the end of the club term, every cent you have paid in. Four per cent interest paid on all fully paid memberships. They are easy to start and easy to keep up. Start now.

Everyone knows where BUDD'S SHOE SHOP is located, and Patricia has found that they are featuring a last minute sale on house slippers and boudoir slippers at the low price of $1, $1.95 and $2.50. These slippers will make a practical Xmas gift and yet very inexpensive. The hosiery found in Budd's is very durable and finely woven. Special $1 sale of hosiery in silk and silk and wool mixture.

Every season, dresses from Paris introduce just one more way of doing the same thing differently, it would seem, and in this manner the appearance of dresses essentially the same in silhouette is always changing.

Except in the few instances when rich fabrics have been simulated, beading is done in a single or two toned effect, and crystal beads of the finest sort are much in evidence.

The ombre idea is handled in a lovely way in dresses of the formal order. Crepe de Chine that blends almost imperceptibly from an aqua green to a deep emerald is used for a straightline gown embroidered in fine crystals. A gown of embroidered lace proves one of the richest models as far as coloring is concerned, for the beading carried out on its elaborate pattern combines all of the vivid Persian colors in truly Oriental effect. The lace itself is a cocoa brown and is worn over a perfectly matched slip.

Fringe grows in favor as the season advances and many of the evening dresses are fringe and crystal trimmed, including the shawl dresses which add much to the variety of the wardrobe being draped over several drops, and in different lines at every wearing.

If Cinderella, safely married, were to drive up to the Place Vendome in her Rolls-Pumpkins, intent on replacing those old-fashioned glass slippers with what Monsieur Hellstern prescribes for princesses of her age nad station, she would be not only charmed—she would be bewildered. Glass, she wuold perceive at once, was an inelastic medium at best. Patent leather, antelope, lizard, kid, brocade, satin—this wizard can do so many things with them that one has no choice but to wish oneself a centipede princess in justice to his inventiveness!.

After dependability one wants real beauty in an automobile—and that's just what is found in the new Buick. Women know that the Buick is absolutely reliable and the dignity and beauty of the car completely capture their admiration. Take the time when you are on the street, watch the cars driven by women. You'll be more than surprised to see how many of them are Buicks. More especially driving the closed and sport models. Just now the Nebraska Buick company has an unusual display—and if you're thinking at all of a car you'd do well to see them.

The WARD-WARNER GIFT Shop has received a new shipment of unusual Xmas gifts in brassware. Brass coal hods, Cape Cod fire lighters and some very exquisite brass wood boxes will add greatly to the coziness of the fireside corner.

For the kiddies they are offering cute "cuddle-bunnies" and unique toys. Santa's own original ideas are carried out in every way and you are sure to find just what the youngsters crave.

Xmas party favors and stunning leather hand decorated telephone book covers. There is a special reduction on the Japanese lacquer candy boxes. Be sure to look into this shop. Haven't you forgotten someone?

Sports frocks often feature bodices in jumper mode having a front or back opening bordered with buttons and buttonholes. This may be of a plain colored material while the skirt employs a figured fabric, which is matched by the topcoat entirely lined with fur, and piped with leather.

One of the favorite daytime frocks of a fine navy blue cloth, one of the latest models for sping, combines a hiplength cape with the simple frock which is trimmed with black braid, the cape being linned with alpaca.

Advices from Paris tha tsmart women are wearing muffs has prompted smart shops to show them in the window with fur coats in order to test the interest of the American woman in this item.

According to the report, in all fashionable places in Paris muffs are appearing conspicuously among the smart set, members of which usually carry one to match the contrasting fur of the coat.

A costume suit, in strictly tailored handling, is done in tan covert, composed of complete frock and three quarter length cape. The cape is cut on circular lines, although the upper section is cut with a yoke that preserves the outline of the figure. For relief, insets and pipings in rigid straightline designs, of brown cloth, are introduced on both frock and cape.

Three-piece costumes emphasize the loose hanging version of the box jacket, suggesting in general the Chinese coolie jacket. One model of black and green crepe, uses a three-quarter length jacket, the entire jacket of green crepe being embroidered with black, with collar of black monkey.

A number of silk coats appear in the coats designed for formal wear, with satin in gray and tan as well as the inevitable black. These, for the most part, adopt the straight outline and endorse the border feature, worked in a variety of fabric manipulations.

Practically all day time stockings in New York are still noisette in in shade. The one exception occurs when grey is adopted to complete that gray and black mode which has become a step-sister to the favored black and white mode. Where one's furs and shoes are grey, grey stockings are in order. This does not mean that grey and the fawn-beige-brown gamut may never be combined, but merely that it must be done with discretion. That all of us have not been blessed with slender ankles is a sad, but patent., fact. But to try to mitigate the impression by combining black stockings with black shoes is no longer wise, since such stockings are of themselves conspicuous by reason of the rarity of their occurrence. All one can say to the sufferer is to avoid the lighter shades of grey and biege. Contrast one must have, but it need not be too violent.
